Service on manager, subsequent service on partner.—Where a summons is served upon a manager, and subsequently upon a partner, it is the date of the latter service from which time is to be counted for the appearance of the defendant firm (s).

"Principal place at which the partnership business is carried on"—See notes to r 1 above. "Carrying on business in British India."

"As the Court may direct"—These words do not occur in the corresponding English rule. According to the English rule, the summons may be served upon a partner or upon the manager at the plaintiff's option. Under the present rule it would seem, that the plaintiff has no such option, and that he should obtain the directions of the Court as to the mode of service. If the method of service prescribed by the Court is followed, then prima facie there has been service on the firm (t). The omission to obtain such directions is, however, only an irregularity within the meaning of s 99 and does not vitiate the service (u).

Notice to be given to the person served as to the capacity in which he is served—See r 5 below and notes thereto.

3. [New R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 3.] Where as partners in the name of service summons shall be served on

- (a) upon any one or more of the partners
- (b) at the principal place at which the business is carried on within British India any person having, at the time of service, control or management of the partnership business there,

as the Court may direct, and such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm so sued whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India:

Provided that, in the case of a partnership which has been dissolved to the knowledge of the plaintiff before the institution of the suit, the summons shall be served upon every person within British India whom it is sought to make liable Service of summons—This rule is to be read with r 1 above and with O 21, r 50.

It applies only to suits against partners in the name of their firm. It provides a special mode of service upon firms carrying on business in British India whether the partners reside within or without British India (j). One mode of service authorized by the rule is service upon anyone or more of the partners, the other is service at the principal place of business of the partnership, within British India, upon the manager of the business. If the summons is not served in either of these ways the service is irregular (k).
If it is served in either of these ways the service is good service upon the firm whether all or any of the partners are within or without British India. The service being good service upon the firm any decree that may be passed in the suit against the firm may be executed against the property of the firm. When the firm has been dissolved, the only method of service is under clause (a) on partner (l), and if service by registered post has been ordered the registered letter should be addressed to a partner and not to the firm name at the place where the business used to be carried on (m).

If the service is effected in the first mode prescribed by the rule that is if the service is upon a partner, it is good service upon the firm as well as upon that partner personally.

4. [New.] (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 45 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where two or more persons may sue or be sued in the name of a firm under the foregoing provisions and any of such persons dies, whether before the institution or during the pendency of any suit, it shall not be necessary to join the legal representative of the deceased as a party to the suit.

(2) Nothing in sub rule (1) shall limit or otherwise affect any right which the legal representative of the deceased may have—

(a) to apply to be made a party to the suit, or

(b) to enforce any claim against the survivor or survivors.

Joinder of legal representative—A passes a promissory note for Rs 5,000 to a firm consisting of three partners B, C and D. If B dies C and D alone cannot sue to recover the amount of the note. The suit must, under s 45 of the Contract Act, be brought by C and D along with B's legal representative. The effect of the present rule is that where the suit is brought in the firm name, it is not necessary to join B's legal representative as a party plaintiff (v). But the legal representative may apply to be made a party plaintiff. The mere fact that he does not apply will not affect his right to claim the benefit of any decree that may be passed in favour of C and D. If the suit is against the firm, and one of the partners dies before or during the suit, the decree can be enforced against the share of the deceased in the partnership property. But if the legal representatives are not joined, it cannot be enforced against the personal estate of the deceased partner (v).

5. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 4.] Where a summons is issued to a firm and is served in the manner provided by rule 3, every person upon whom it is served shall be informed by notice in writing given at the time of such service, whether he is served as a partner or as a person having the control or management of the partnership business, or in both characters, and, in default of such notice, the person served shall be deemed to be served as a partner.

Notice in what capacity served—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the summons will be issued against the firm. Such summons may be served either upon any one or more of the partners or upon the person in control of the business [r 3]. The present rule provides that the person served should be informed by notice in writing given at the time of service, whether he is served as a partner, or as a person in management of the business, or in both characters. In default of notice, the person served will be deemed—not merely presumed—to be served as a partner. If he contends that he is not a partner, the proper course for him to adopt is to appear under protest under r 8 below denying that he is a partner. If he does not do so, he will be deemed to have been served personally as a partner within the meaning of O 21, r 50, sub r 1, cl (c), and execution may be granted against him personally (x).

Service on manager—If service is effected on the person in control of the business and no notice is served as provided by this rule the service is not effective, and cannot be made so [Annual Practice, notes to O 48A, r 4].

Appearance under protest—Where a summons is served upon a person as a partner, but such person appears under protest denying that he is a partner, the plaintiff may disregard the appearance altogether, and proceed as if the summons had not been served, that is, he may have service subsequently effected upon a partner or partners or upon any person having the control of the business as provided by r 3 above. The mere fact that the person served as a partner denies that he is a partner and appears under protest does not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving the summons on the firm (r 8 below).

Where a summons is served upon a person both as a partner and manager, and such person appears with denial of partnership but does not deny that he is the person in management of the business the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the firm, for the service is then one under r 3, cl (b), and such service is good service upon the firm.

Forms of notice—Take notice that the summons served herewith is served on you—

- (i) as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co
- (ii) or as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co
- (iii) or as a partner in the defendant firm of AB & Co and also as the person having the control or management of the partnership business of AB & Co

6. [New R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 5.] Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names, but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm.

Appearance of partners—Though all proceedings in a suit instituted against a firm in the firm name must be conducted in the firm name the partners should so far as appearance is concerned appear individually in their own names. The reason of the rule is that a firm cannot appear as a firm. Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the appearance of one partner is the appearance of the firm (y).

The only person entitled to appear in a suit against a firm are—

- (i) persons who allege they are partners of the firm sued or were partners at the time the cause of action arose and
- (ii) persons who are served as partners but deny that they are partners of the firm sued or were partners of the firm at the time the cause of action accrued. Such person may appear under protest. See rr 7 and 8 below.

A person served as a manager of the partnership business need not appear unless he is a member of the firm sued (r 7 below). A managing partner of a business firm has

O. 30, r. 6 an implied authority, in the ordinary course of business, to appoint solicitors, to defend a suit brought against the firm in the firm name, and to instruct them to enter an appearance for the other partners as well. No suit will therefore lie against the solicitors at the instance of the other partners for entering an appearance in their name without their express authority (z)

The expression "individually" is not synonymous with "in person", hence no partner can be forced under this rule to appear in person (a)

"All subsequent proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm"—Where person are sued as partners in the firm name, the plaint (b) and every subsequent proceeding must be headed with the firm name as defendants. The proceedings in a suit so brought continue in the name of the firm even though the names of the partners are disclosed (c). The written statement must be headed in the firm name, and the decree also must be against the firm in the firm name. The Court cannot in such a suit pass a decree against the firm (d) within the Defence—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name on a claim against the partnership, the partners ought, if they can agree, to put in one written statement. But if they cannot agree on one defence, each partner is entitled to put in a separate written statement. In any case the written statement should be a written statement of the firm, but where the partners cannot agree on one defence and a partner puts in a separate defence, the proper form would be "written statement of the defendant firm of AB & Co, by XY, one of the partners appearing in the suit". It may be asked, what is the plain partners' must, to use satisfy the judge at the trial that not one of the defences prevents a judgment defence would be the defence of the firm, and the suit would be tried upon that defence, and in that case judgment could be obtained against the firm. Of course, if the partner chose to put in an improper defence and so rendered the partnership liable in a case where it ought not to be made liable, he might thereby as between himself and his co partners be committing a breach of duty for which he would be liable to them, but so far as the plaintiff is concerned, the plaintiff would be able to obtain judgment against the firm. A partner is not entitled, in a suit against a firm in the firm name, to put in a personal defence, he can only put in a defence for and in the name of the firm (f). In an Allahabad case (g) a partner was allowed a to 'appear individually' and resist a claim, but the partner's defence was really a defence for the firm for he said that the liability was that of a co partner and not of the firm. When a partner is sued personally along with the firm, he may put in a personal defence besides a defence for the firm (h).

Decree—Where a suit is brought against a firm in the firm name, the decree must be against the firm in the firm name (i). From this it follows that if one of the partners

7. [New R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 6.] Where a summons is served in the manner provided by rule 2 upon a person having the control or management of the partnership business, no appearance by him shall be necessary unless he is a partner of the firm sued.

8. [New R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 7.] Any person served with summons as a partner under rule 3 may appear under protest, denying that he is a partner, but such appearance shall not preclude the plaintiff from otherwise serving a summons on the firm and obtaining a decree against the firm in default of appearance where no partner has appeared.

Appearance under protest —Where a person served with a summons as a partner denies that he is a partner, he may enter appearance under protest under this rule. Where an appearance is entered under protest, its effect is to nullify the service altogether as regards the defendant firm (p) In such a case the plaintiff may disregard the appearance under protest altogether, and have the summons served upon one who is

Party appearing under protest not entitled to file written statement on his own behalf.—A party appearing under protest under this rule is not entitled to file a written statement on his own behalf even on denying that he is a partner (s).

Party appearing under protest not entitled to dispute liability of firm.—In England a party appearing under protest is not allowed to plead in the alternative that if he is a partner in the firm he is not liable (t).

Defence to party appearing under protest in proceeding under O. 21, r. 50.—A party appearing under protest is entitled to take any personal defence in a proceeding against him under O. 21, r. 50, in addition to the defence that he was not a partner of the defendant unless to do so will be to negative the provisions of a rule of procedure (u).

9. [New. R. S. C., O. 48A, r. 10.] This order shall apply to suits between a firm and one or more of the partners therein and to suits between firms having one or more partners in common; but no execution shall be issued in such suits except by leave of the Court, and, on an application for leave to issue such execution, all such accounts and inquiries may be directed to be taken and made and directions given as may be just.

Scope of the rule.—This rule provides that suits between a firm and one of its members, or between two firms with a common member, may be instituted in the firm name, provided the firms carry on business in British India (r. 1). But no execution can be issued in such a suit except by leave of the Court.

against him in his trade name, the suit is one against a dead man and a nullity (y) If he dies pending the suit, the suit will abate unless his legal representative is brought on the record within 90 days from the date of his death (z) This rule does not enable a plaintiff to sue the proprietor of a newspaper in the name of the newspaper (a) O. 3

Amendment of plaint allowed—When a man carrying on business in a firm name sued in that name, he was allowed to amend his plaint by inserting his own name as plaintiff on payment of all costs up to the date of the amendment (b)

Non resident foreigner.—As to the corresponding English rule it has been held that it does not apply where the person carrying on business in a name other than his own is a foreign subject resident out of the jurisdiction, though he may carry on business through an agent within the jurisdiction The decision proceeded upon the broad ground that an English Court has no jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business within the jurisdiction, and that the words "any person," though large enough to include a foreigner, refer only to an English subject (c) The question as to whether the Courts of this country have jurisdiction over foreigners residing abroad merely because they carry on business here through an agent arose in the recent Privy Council case of Annamalai v Murugasa (d), but the point was not decided by their Lordships In both Courts in India it was assumed that the Court had jurisdiction, but their Lordships said "This assumption appears to their Lordships to require more attention than it has received"

Application of foregoing rules—By the latter part of this rule all the foregoing rules of this Order relating to proceedings against firms are to apply to a person trading in a name other than his own so far as the nature of the case will permit By virtue of r 1, this rule does not apply unless the business is carried on in British India By virtue of rr 1 and 2, the person sued in his trade name may be required to disclose his real name and private address By virtue of r 3 the summons may be served upon the person sued or upon any person having the control or management of the business, but in the latter case execution cannot be issued against the personal property of the persons sued except by leave of the Court [O 21, r 50] As regards appearance the person sued must appear in his own name (r 6)

Scope of the rule—This rule applies only where the contention is between the beneficiaries and a third person It does not apply where the contention is between beneficiaries and trustees or between the beneficiaries inter se In suit between beneficiaries and a third person the trustees sufficiently represent the beneficiaries (e), though the beneficiaries are an unascertained and unascertainable class (f) or persons (g) So if a legatee sues an executor for payment of a legacy and for administration of the estate the executor is the only necessary party (h) As to declaratory decrees it is provided by s 43 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, that a declaration made under s 42 of that Act is binding where any of the parties are trustees, on the persons for whom, if in existence at the date of the declaration, such parties would be trustees Compare RSC 16, r 8

When beneficiaries may be added as parties—Beneficiaries should always be made parties when the executors are wholly uninterested in the case as where they have fully administered the estate (i), or where they have an interest adverse to that of the beneficiaries (j) Where a suit was brought by an executor, and the names of the beneficiaries who took possession of the estate pending the suit were substituted as plaintiffs, it was held that it did not amount to a substitution of new plaintiffs within the meaning of s 22 of the Limitation Act (k)

Trustees—The word ' trustees ' has been newly added in this rule

Several trustees executors or administrators—This rule applies only to suits against, and not to suits by, trustees, executors or administrators It provides that all executors who have proved the will should be made parties to the suit The Court may, however, entertain an application as for a receiver even though all proving executors are not made parties to the suit (m) An executor who has neither proved nor intermeddled with the estate cannot be sued as representing the estate (n) See Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925, sec 311

Suits by or against Minors and Persons of Unsound Mind

1. [S. 440, 1st para.] Every suit by a minor shall O. be instituted in his name by a person who in such suit shall be called the next friend of the minor

Minor to sue by next friend

Minor—Every person domiciled in British India who has not completed the age of 18 years is a minor. In the case, however, of a minor of whose person or property a guardian has been appointed by a Court of Justice, or whose property is under the superintendence of a Court of Wards, the age of majority is deemed to have been attained on the minor completing his age of 21 years see Indian Majority Act I of 1875, s. 3

Object of having next friend or guardian ad litem—As a minor is deemed incapable of prosecuting or defending a suit himself, it is necessary that his interests in the suit should be watched by an adult person. Such person is, in the case of a minor plaintiff, called his next friend and in the case of a minor defendant his guardian ad litem or guardian for the suit. But neither the next friend nor the guardian ad litem is a party to the suit (g). The next friend or guardian ad litem may choose his own attorneys or change them (r). As to liability of next friend for costs, see notes below.

Title of suit—Where a suit is brought on behalf of a minor the title of the suit should run thus: A B a minor by his next friend C D v. X Y. Where a suit is brought against a minor the title of the suit should be: X Y v. A B a minor by his guardian ad litem C D. Where the title of a suit in a case was A B for self and his minor daughter C D instead of A B and C D a minor by her next friend A B and the objection was raised for the first time in appeal it was held that the error did not affect the merits of the case, and that it was not therefore fatal to the suit (s) [s. 441]. See notes to r. 3 below under the head: Where a minor defendant is substantially represented by a guardian ad litem.

Objection to authority of next friend—Where a minor plaintiff has a cause of action no objection to the authority to sue of the next friend through whom the suit is brought will be entertained in appeal (t).

When minor may sue without next friend—A minor may sue in a Presidency Small Cause Court without a next friend when the amount claimed does not exceed Rs. 500 and is due to him for wages or for work done as a servant. Presidency Small Cause Court Act 15 of 1882 s. 32.

Liability of next friend for costs—Where a suit brought by a minor by his next friend is dismissed and the Court finds that the suit was not for the benefit of the

But if the Court finds that there were reasonable grounds for instituting the suit, and the next friend has acted bona fide, the Court will not mulct the next friend in costs, and will direct the costs to come out of the property of the minor (t).*

There is nothing in the Code to authorise a Court to decree costs against a guardian ad litem except in the case referred to in r 11 below (u)

Suit on behalf of an alleged minor who in fact is not a minor.—A suit is instituted on behalf of a person alleged to be a minor by his next friend. It is found that the plaintiff was not in fact a minor at the date of the institution of the suit. In such a case according to the Allahabad (x) Calcutta (y) Madras (z) and Lahore (a) decisions the plaint should be returned for amendment. The Allahabad High Court at one time held that the suit should be dismissed (b) but these decisions have been superseded by the latest Full Bench case (c).

Adult sued as minor.—Where an adult is sued as a minor by his guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him he is estopped from disputing the validity of the decree if he knew of the suit before the decree was passed. If his property is sold in execution of the decree he is estopped from impeaching the same if he knew of the suit or of the proceedings in execution before the sale (d).

Minor suing as adult—Where a suit is brought by a minor without a next friend and the defendant is aware of the plaintiff's minority but does not object and the plaintiff attains majority before the decree is passed the decree is binding upon the parties (c)

Estoppel—A minor who, representing himself to be a major, collects rents and gives receipts therefor, is estopped from again recovering the rents once paid to him by instituting a suit through a next friend (f). Similarly a minor who representing himself to be of full age sells certain property and executes a deed of sale, is estopped from suing to set aside the sale on the ground that he was a minor at the date of sale (g). But if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor, the purchaser could not be said to have been misled by the false representation as to the vendor's age and the suit to set aside the sale would not then be barred (h). A Court of Equity will deprive a fraudulent minor of the benefit of the plea of infancy but he who invokes the aid of the Court must establish not only that a fraud was practised on him by the minor, but that he was deceived into action by the fraud (i). It is clear that if the purchaser knew that the vendor was a minor, he could not be said to have been deceived into action by the minor's misrepresentation as to his age.

Where question of minority is in dispute—Where a person is sued as a major but he claims to be a minor, the Court should frame an issue for the determination of the question of minority and for that purpose appoint a guardian for the alleged minor (f)

Attorney's Costs.—An attorney is entitled to recover from the infant's estate the costs of a proper suit or defence of a suit in which the estate was involved. He is also entitled to have a charge declared on the estate for the amount of his costs (l)

2. [S. 442.] (1) Where a suit is instituted by or on behalf of a minor without a next friend, the defendant may apply to have the plaint taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the pleader or other person by whom it was presented.

Where suit is instituted without next friend plaint to be taken off the file

(2) Notice of such application shall be given to such person and the Court, after hearing his objections (if any), may make such order in the matter as it thinks fit.

Taking the plaint off the file.—This rule contemplates the case where a suit is instituted without a next friend by a person who is alleged by the defendant to be a minor. In such a case the defendant may apply under this rule to have the plaint taken off the file. To bring his case within the rule, the defendant must show that the plaintiff is a minor and that the suit was instituted without a next friend. Now the fact of minority—

(i) may either be apparent on the face of the plaint, or

(ii) it may be ascertained upon objection by the defendant and enquiry by the Court

In case (i), the practice is to take the plaint off the file (l)

In case (ii), i.e., where the fact of minority is established after evidence has been taken on the point, it may be found—

(a) that the plaintiff instituted the suit with the knowledge of the fact of minority and with the intention of deceiving the Court and evading the payment of costs in the event of failure, or

(b) that the plaintiff had no such knowledge or intention

In case (a), the practice according to the Bombay decisions, is to make an order under this rule directing the plaint to be taken off the file (m). According to the Calcutta decisions, the Court should pass a decree dismissing the suit. The Calcutta High Court holds that the procedure prescribed by this rule, namely, taking the plaint off the file applies only to those cases where the fact of minority is apparent on the face of the plaint, that is to say, in case (i), and that it does not apply where the fact of minority is established on enquiry held by the Court upon that point (n). The difference between the practice of the two Courts is important in this way, that while an appeal lies from a decree dismissing a suit, no appeal lies from an order directing a plaint to be taken off the file.

In case (b), the practice is to stay proceedings and to allow sufficient time to enable the minor plaintiff to be represented by a next friend (o)

The Court should take notice of the irregularity and refuse to proceed even if the suit is ex parte (j) If the defendant appears and does not object the Court should not reject the plaint but should allow the plaintiff time to get himself properly represented (q) When a next friend is appointed the objection that the suit was originally instituted without a next friend can no longer be urged (r) If the plaintiff attains majority before the Court has decided that he is a minor there is no necessity to appoint a next friend (s)

Costs—When a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend the pleader or any other person presenting the plaint is liable for costs and the Court should not render the property of the minor liable for costs (t)

Decree for a minor in a suit instituted by him without a next friend—Where a suit is instituted by a minor without a next friend and the defendant does not object to it he will be deemed to have waived his objection The defendant cannot in such a case after a decree has been passed against him object to the execution of the decree on the ground that the suit was instituted by the minor without a next friend The absence of a next friend does not make the suit a nullity The institution of a suit by a minor without a next friend is merely an irregularity which can be waived by the conduct of the defendant (u)

3. [S. 446, 1st para, S 456.] (1) Where the defendant is a minor, the Court, on being satisfied of the fact of his minority, shall appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for such minor

Guardian for the suit to be appointed by Court for minor defendant

(2) An order for the appointment of a guardian for the suit may be obtained upon application in the name and on behalf of the minor or by the plaintiff

(3) Such application shall be supported by an affidavit verifying the fact that the proposed guardian has no interest in the matters in controversy in the suit adverse to that of the minor and that he is a fit person to be so appointed

(4) No order shall be made on any application under this rule except upon notice to the minor and to any guardian of the minor appointed or declared by an authority competent in that behalf, or, where there is no such guardian, upon notice to the father or other natural guardian of the minor, or, where there is no father or other natural guardian, to the person in whose care the minor is, and after hearing any objection which may be urged on behalf of any person served with notice under this sub rule

Guardian ad litem—Where a guardian ad litem has once been appointed, his appointment endures for the whole of the litigation including proceedings in execution and appeal (1) The Calcutta High Court has held that a guardian ad litem appointed in the original suit does not continue as such in execution proceedings without fresh appointment (2) But it is submitted that this is erroneous for execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit

A guardian ad litem is not a party to a suit or appeal Therefore a suit or an appeal is not time barred, merely because the order appointing a guardian ad litem is not made until after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit or appeal (3)

"Proper" person to be appointed guardian ad litem—It is the duty of the judge himself to decide who is the proper person to be appointed as guardian ad litem (4)

Plea of minority—A sues B B alleges that he is a minor In such a case the Court should frame a preliminary issue of the question of minority, and appoint a guardian for the purpose of the enquiry on the question of minority If the defendant is found to be a minor, a guardian ad litem should be appointed for him, but if he is found to be a major, the guardian appointed for the inquiry should cease to act and the defendant may conduct his own case (5) So also if a dispute arises as to whether a minor is the legal representative of a deceased party, the Court should appoint a guardian ad litem and decide the matter (6)

Minor member of joint Hindu family—Guardian necessary—A decree against a manager of a joint Hindu family as such binds a minor member of the joint family but if the plaintiff impleads the minor in his individual capacity a guardian must be appointed under this rule (7)

Non representation—The provisions of this rule as to the appointment of a guardian ad litem for a minor defendant are imperative Hence if a minor is sued without a guardian ad litem and a decree is passed against him the decree is a nullity and it cannot be enforced against him (8) For the same reason it cannot operate as res judicata (9)

The Allahabad High Court has held that a minor against whom a decree has been passed without the appointment of a proper guardian ad litem may if the facts of the case justify, in that very suit, (1) appeal from the decree or (2) apply for a review of judgment or (3) apply for an order under r 5 (2) below, according as the circumstances of the case may permit, or he may bring a regular suit to set aside the decree and the sale (if any) in execution of the decree (10) A minor, however, cannot resist execution of the

O. 32, r. 3 decree on the ground that the decree is a nullity, for a minor not represented by a proper guardian ad litem, as where the guardian ad litem is a person whose interest is adverse to that of the minor (r. 4), "cannot be said to be a party" to the suit within the meaning of s. 47 above (f)

The Allahabad High Court has held that where a decree in a suit against a minor is set aside in a subsequent suit by the minor on the sole ground that he was not represented by a proper guardian ad litem, the Court whose decree is set aside has inherent power to restore the suit and to proceed with the appointment of a fit and proper person as guardian ad litem for the minor defendant (g). But the Madras High Court has held that there is no such inherent jurisdiction (h). Again the Allahabad High Court has held that where an ex parte decree has been passed against a minor not properly represented, the minor may apply to have the decree set aside under O. 9, r. 13 (i). The Madras High Court has held that no such application is competent, the reason given being that a minor not properly represented in a suit cannot be regarded as a "party" to a suit, and an application under O. 9, r. 13, can only be made by a party to the suit (j).

Substantial representation—When a minor defendant is not represented at all as in the cases referred in the preceding paragraph he is not a party to the suit and the decree as against him is a nullity. That must be distinguished from another class of cases where the Court has recognised a guardian ad litem but has made no formal appointment or has made an appointment which is open to objection owing to some defect of procedure. The rule in this latter class of cases is different, for the decree will bind the minor unless it is shown that the defect of procedure has prejudiced him. In this class of cases the leading case is that of Halim v. Banke Behari (k). That was a suit brought against a minor, but no order was applied for and none was made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. In the plaint, however, which was admitted by the Court, the mother of the minor was described as his guardian. Further, the mother appeared throughout the proceedings in the suit as the minor's guardian. A decree was passed against the minor and in the decree and the execution proceedings the mother was described as the minor's guardian. In a suit brought by the minor on attaining majority to set aside the decree passed against him on the ground that no guardian ad litem had been appointed as required by the present rule, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council, overruling the decision of the Calcutta High Court, that the Court in which the former suit was instituted had by its action given sanction to the appearance of the mother as a guardian ad litem, and that the absence of a formal order of appointment was not fatal to the suit unless it was shown that the defect in procedure prejudiced the minor. Their Lordships observed that there was nothing in the proceedings of that suit to suggest that the interests of the minor were not duly protected by the mother or that the defect in procedure had prejudiced the minor and they accordingly held that the decree was binding upon the minor. The particular defects of procedure that have been condoned on the ground of no prejudice to the minor are—omission to make a formal order of appointment (l), an appointment made without the affidavit required by r. 3(3) being filed (m), or without notice to the minor under r 3 (4) (n), appointment of a Court guardian without notice to the person in whose care the minor is (o) But such irregularities will vitiate the decree if there is prejudice to the minor as in Sadashu v Trimbal (p) and Shail Abdul Karim v Thakurdas (q), where no formal appointment was made and the minor's interest was not protected, or in Bhagwan v Param (r) where a Nazir was appointed guardian without notice to the mother with whom the minor lived and he for want of funds took no steps to defend the suit The rule is well stated by Wallace, J, in Tirumalacharyulu v Ammisethi (s) as follows "No irregularity by way of omission to send notice as required by O 32, r 3, shall operate to render void the presumed representation of the minors in a suit, unless such an omission has in fact prejudiced their defence, and such prejudice is not a matter of assumption or presumption but of proof."

Notice—Notice should be served both on the proposed guardian and on the minor and the wishes of the minor should be considered (t) But if there is no fraud or collusion failure to give notice to the minor is an irregularity which does not justify the Court in setting aside the decree (u)

Service of summons—There is no express provision in the Code for service on minors Hence where the defendant is a minor, he should be served with the summons in the way provided for service upon adults (v) But where a guardian ad litem has been appointed by the Court, service of summons or of notice of hearing in the case of an appeal on such guardian is sufficient (w) As to service in suits brought against wards of Courts of Wards, see Bengal Court of Wards Act, 1879 s 54, and Bombay Court of Wards Act, 1900, s 34

Fraud of next friend or guardian ad litem—A decree passed against a minor properly represented is binding upon him as much as a decree passed against an adult but it is open to the minor to impeach the decree by a suit in cases where the next friend or guardian for the suit has been guilty of fraud or collusion in allowing the decree to be passed against him (x) or of culpable negligence which has brought prejudice to the minor (y)

Probate proceedings—Until a contest arises section 141 of the Code is not applicable to a probate proceeding so as to attract the applicability of this Order But where a will of which probate is sought affects the interests of a minor it may be expedient as a rule of practice to appoint a guardian ad litem (z)

Execution proceedings.—The provisions of this order do not directly apply to execution proceedings. The non representation of a minor by a guardian ad litem in execution proceedings is not in itself sufficient to set aside an execution sale (a)

Who may act as next friend or be appointed guardian for the suit

(1) Any person who is of sound mind and has attained majority may act as next friend of a minor or as his guardian for the suit :

Provided that the interest of such person is not adverse to that of the minor and that he is not, in the case of a next friend, a defendant, or, in the case of a guardian for the suit, a plaintiff.

(2) Where a minor has a guardian appointed or declared by competent authority, no person other than such guardian shall act as the next friend of the minor or be appointed his guardian for the suit unless the Court considers for reasons to be recorded, that it is for the minor's welfare that another person be permitted to act or be appointed, as the case may be.

(3) No person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit.

(4) Where there is no other person fit and willing to act as guardian for the suit, the Court may appoint any of its officers to be such guardian, and may direct that the costs to be incurred by such officer in the performance of his duties as such guardian shall be borne either by the parties or by any one or more of the parties to the suit, or out of any fund in Court in which the minor is interested, and may give directions for the repayment or allowance of such costs as justice and the circumstances of the case may require.

Code of 1882.—Sub-r (1) corresponds to ss. 445 and 457 of the Code of 1882 sub-r. (2) to ss. 440 and 443, 2nd paragraph, and sub-r (4) to s. 456, 2nd paragraph and R. S. C. O. 65, r. 13. Sub-r (3) is new. It is in accordance with a Bombay ruling in the undermentioned case (b)

Married woman as guardian ad litem.—Under the Code of 1882, though a married woman could be appointed next friend of a minor plaintiff, she could not be appointed guardian ad litem of a minor defendant. Under this Code she may also be appointed guardian ad litem

Sub rule (1) adverse interest.—This rule provides that a person whose interest is adverse to that of a minor should not be appointed guardian ad litem. This has given rise to the question whether if a minor is represented by a guardian ad litem whose interest is adverse to that of the minor the decree passed in the suit is a nullity. The leading case on the subject is Rishid un nissa v. Mufarimal (c). In that case a suit was brought by a minor for a declaration that two decrees and three sales in execution affecting her share in her father's estate were invalid as against her as she was represented in the suit by her uncle whose interest was obviously adverse. The Subordinate Judge decreed in her favour but the High Court set aside the decree holding that the suit was barred by sec. 244 of the Code of 1882 (now sec. 47) and that the proper course for the plaintiff, if he had any objection to make to the execution of the decrees, was to raise it in execution proceedings. The judgment of the High Court, however, was reversed in appeal to the Privy Council. In the course of the judgment their Lordships said: "With all respect to the learned judges of the High Court their Lordships are unable to agree with this conclusion. Sec. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to questions arising between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, that is to say, between parties who have been properly made parties in accordance with the provisions of the Code. Their Lordships agree with the Subordinate Judge that the appellant was never a party to any of these suits in the proper sense of the term. Her sister Ufat un nissa was a married woman and therefore disqualified under sec. 457 of the Code from being appointed guardian for the suit, and if Mufarimal's [uncle's] interest is obviously adverse to that of the minor. This decision has been followed by the High Court of Madras and it has been held that where the interest of a guardian ad litem is obviously adverse the decree is a nullity (d). A similar view has been taken by the High Court of Allahabad (e). The same point was raised in another Madras case but the learned judges said that they were not prepared on the facts of this case to hold that the guardian ad litem was so wholly disqualified as to render the suit null but they stated as a reservation at all (f). In a later case (g) the same question was raised and whether Rishid un nissa v. Mufarimal went to the point raised in the present case. A guardian ad litem whose interest was adverse rendered the suit null and void in every case (h).

The question whether a guardian ad litem appointed by the Court has an interest adverse to that of the minor is one of fact. Where a mortgage or other transaction has been entered into by a person on behalf of a minor and a suit is brought against the minor to enforce the transaction the question arises whether such person can be appointed the guardian of the minor for the suit. It has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that there is nothing either in the Code of Civil Procedure or in any of the authorities to lay down not merely that such a person should not be appointed but cannot in any circumstances be validly appointed (i).

Sub rule (2) guardian appointed by competent authority.—A guardian of his minor son appointed by a Hindu father under his will is not a guardian appointed by competent authority within the meaning of this rule (j).

Sub rule (3) provides that where a minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority no person other than such guardian shall be appointed his guardian ad litem. The Allahabad High Court has held that where the Court is in ignorance of the fact that the minor has a guardian appointed by competent authority appoints another person as guardian for the suit such appointment is not an illegality but a mere irregularity, and it on a false affidavit that there is no other person fit and willing is vitiated by fraud and is of no legal effect. A decree so obtained is not binding on the minor (b). But the mere fact that no inquiry has been made by the Court into the question whether there was any other person fit and willing to act as guardian ad litem does not make the decree a nullity; the case is merely one of irregularity (c). The Deputy Registrar who has been appointed guardian of minor respondents in a High Court appeal may also be appointed to represent them in proceedings for obtaining leave to appeal to Privy Council but upon the final admission of the appeal he ceases to represent them (d). The High Court cannot provide for the costs of a guardian ad litem in an appeal to Privy Council (d). As to irregularities in the appointment of a Court guardian see notes under rule 3 above.

5. [Ss. 441, 444.] (1) Every application to the Court on behalf of a minor, other than an application under rule 10, sub rule (2), shall be made by his next friend or by his guardian for the suit.

Representation of minor by next friend or guardian for the suit

(2) Every order made in a suit or on any application, before the Court in or by which a minor is in any way concerned or affected, without such minor being represented by a next friend or guardian for the suit, as the case may be, may be discharged, and, where the pleader of the party at whose instance such order was obtained knew, or might reasonably have known, the fact of such minority, with costs to be paid by such pleader.

6. [S. 461.] (1) A next friend or guardian for the suit shall not, without the leave of the Court, receive any money or other movable property on behalf of a minor either—

Receipt by next friend or guardian for the suit of property under decree for minor

- (a) by way of compromise before decree or order, or
(b) under a decree or order in favour of the minor

(2) Where the next friend or guardian for the suit has not been appointed or declared by competent authority to be guardian of the property of the minor, or, having been so appointed or declared, is under any disability known to the Court to receive the money or other movable property, the Court shall, if it grants him leave to receive the property, require such security and give such directions as will, in its opinion, sufficiently protect the property from waste and ensure its proper application.

Joint Mitakshara family.—The Calcutta High Court had held that this rule did not apply when the next friend was the manager of a Mitakshara joint family of which the minor was a member and that qua manager he could receive monies due on a decree in favour of himself and the minor (e). But this conflicts with the Privy Council ruling in Ganesh Rao v. Tuljaram (f) that a manager of a joint family if he is a next friend or guardian is subject to the control of the Court and that he cannot do in his capacity of manager acts that he is debarred from doing as next friend or guardian without the leave of the Court. Accordingly when payment under a decree in favour of a minor and of the manager of a joint Hindu family was certified to the Court by the manager alone who was the next friend of the minor, the Court refused to record it as the leave of the Court had not been obtained, and for the same reason the Court refused to recognize the payment as a valid discharge and granted an execution application for the recovery of the whole amount (g).

Security for protection of minor's property.—A bond passed by a surety under sub r (2) cannot be enforced by summary process under s 145 (h). The Court may authorize a person to enforce the bond by suit. Such authorization is not an assignment to which the Transfer of Property Act applies and no deed is necessary and the order of the Court is sufficient (i).

Protection of property of deceased person.—This rule does not control s 194 of the Indian Succession Act, 1929. If property left by a deceased is delivered to the possession of a guardian on behalf of a minor no security is necessary (j).

7. [S. 462.] (1) No next friend or guardian for the suit shall, without the leave of the Court, expressly recorded in the proceedings, enter into any agreement or compromise on behalf of a minor with reference to the suit in which he acts as next friend or guardian.

Agreement or compromise by next friend or guardian for the suit

(2) Any such agreement or compromise entered into without the leave of the Court so recorded shall be voidable against all parties other than the minor.

Alterations in the rule.—The words "expressly recorded in the proceedings" in sub r (1), and the words "so recorded" in sub r (2), are new. They give effect to the practice established under the old section. See notes below, "Compromise decree when binding on a minor."

Scope of the rule.—This rule contemplates the following steps to be taken in order before a compromise decree is passed in a suit to which a minor is a party, namely, (1) an application by the next friend or guardian ad litem for leave to compromise the suit, (2) the granting of leave by the Court if the Court thinks the case is a fit one for leave, and (3) the consent of the next friend or guardian ad litem to the proposed compromise after the Court has granted the leave (k). If the leave is granted, and the next friend or guardian ad litem assents to the compromise, the parties may apply to the Court under O 23, r 3, for a consent decree in terms of the compromise, and if the compromise is lawful, it is the duty of the Court under that rule to pass the decree applied for If the next friend of a minor plaintiff agrees to compromise a suit on behalf of the minor subject to the leave of the Court, and then withdraws from the compromise before the leave of the Court is applied for, the Court will not enforce the compromise at the instance of the defendant, even though the terms of the compromise might appear beneficial to the minor. The reason is that such compromise is not binding unless it is sanctioned by the Court (l). The Court cannot force a compromise upon a minor against the opinion of the guardian ad litem or next friend (m). But if the guardian or next friend is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial arrangement, the Court may take steps to remove him and substitute some other person (n).

Compromise decree when binding on minor—The provision contained in this rule making it necessary to obtain the leave of the Court is of great importance for the protection of minor's interests (n) and it has been extended to a compromise by a natural guardian who has put herself in the place of a guardian ad litem by applying to the Court to sanction a compromise (o). To render a decree passed in pursuance of a compromise binding on a minor, the following conditions must be complied with—

- (a) The next friend or guardian ad litem must apply to the Court for leave to enter into the proposed compromise (p), stating specifically that the compromise is sought to be made on behalf of the minor (q), and also setting forth the terms of the proposed compromise (r).
- (b) On such an application being made to the Court the Court must exercise a judicial discretion as to the propriety, in the interests of the minor, of the proposed compromise (s). It is not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what materials a Judge may call for before he is satisfied with the compromise and that is a matter which must be left to his discretion (t). And if the Court sees reason to grant leave it should record an order showing that an application has been made to it that the terms of the proposed agreement or compromise have been considered by it, and that having regard to the interests of the minor, it has granted leave to make the agreement or compromise (u). 'It is not sufficient that the terms of a compromise are before the Court. There ought to be evidence that the attention of the Court was directly called to the fact that a minor was a party to the compromise and it ought to be shown by an order on petition, or in some way not open to doubt, that the leave of the Court was obtained (v). A compromise will be deemed to be beneficial to the interests of a minor if it secures to the minor some demonstrable advantage, or averts some obvious mischief (w). A certificate of counsel for the minor that the compromise is for his benefit is according to ordinary practice sufficient (x).

O. 32, r. 7

In Bombay it has been held that in sanctioning a compromise as for the benefit of a minor the Court should have before it an affidavit by the next friend or guardian of the minor to that effect and in heavy cases there should be an opinion of counsel or else a statement by counsel at the bar that in his opinion the compromise is for the benefit of the minor. It has also been held that the Court is not bound to pass a decree in the exact form of the terms of the compromise agreed to by the parties and that it may make such alterations as it deems expedient (y).

- (c) The leave must be express, not implied. It must, in the language of this rule, be expressly recorded in the proceedings. From the mere fact that the Court has passed a decree in accordance with a compromise it cannot be inferred that any of the steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court. The Court by passing a decree in pursuance of a compromise does not per factum sanction the compromise (x). The provisions of this rule are complied with if the leave of the Court is expressly recorded, it is not necessary that the order granting leave should state that the Court had considered the terms of the compromise and regarded them to be beneficial to the minor (a).

But the non-observance of the above conditions does not render the compromise decree void or affect the jurisdiction of the Court to record it (b). The decree is only voidable, and that too at the option of the minor. No other party to the suit can call the decree in question, the minor alone is entitled to call it in question, and thus he may do either on attaining majority or before then through a next friend (c).

Procedure to set aside compromise decree—A compromise decree may be set aside either in a regular suit or upon an application for review to the Court that passed the decree (d). But it cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it (e).

It was doubtful whether under the Code of 1852 a compromise decree can be set aside by an appeal from the decree. Where an appeal was preferred from a compromise decree on the ground that the lower Court did not consider the question as to whether the compromise was a proper one in the interests of the minor, the High Court of Allahabad entertained the appeal (f), in a similar case, the High Court of Calcutta refused to entertain the appeal (g). Under the present Code no appeal lies from a consent decree [s. 96, sub-r (3)].

Compromise under misapprehension of a material fact—Where a compromise is entered into under a misapprehension of a material fact, it will be set aside even though it may have been sanctioned by the Court under this rule (h). See Indian Contract Act 1872, s. 20. Something in the nature of fraud must be shown before a compromise sanctioned by the Court is set aside (i).

Minor attaining majority pending suit.—If the minor attains majority while the suit is still pending a compromise entered into by his guardian is not binding on him even though it has been sanctioned by the Court (j)

Compromise of execution proceedings.—Execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit and a next friend or guardian cannot after decree enter into a compromise or an adjustment of the decree without the sanction of the Court (l) See O 21, r 2 And this is so even though the guardian ad litem had power as natural guardian to sell the minor's property (l) But the rule is confined to an agreement, or compromise in the course of the suit A transfer by a guardian ad litem of a decree in favour of a minor made not with reference to the suit or execution proceeding does not require the sanction of the Court (m)

Agreement to be bound by oath under Indian Oaths Act, 1873, s. 9, not within this rule.—An agreement by the next friend (n) or guardian (o) of a minor that an issue in the suit should be determined by the oath of the defendant, does not come within the purview of this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary In such a case the minor is bound by the agreement, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend

Abandonment of issue does not amount to a compromise.—A next friend or guardian ad litem may abandon an issue in the course of the trial of the suit and the sanction of the Court is not requisite for that purpose, for the abandonment of an issue does not amount to a "compromise" within the meaning of this rule The abandonment is binding on the minor provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem (p)

Agreement to refer to arbitration—It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (q) and Bombay (r) and by the Chief Court of the Punjab (s), that an agreement by a next friend or guardian ad litem to refer any matter in controversy in a suit to arbitration is an agreement within the meaning of this rule, and that the sanction of the Court is therefore necessary According to the Allahabad High Court such an agreement is not within this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary (t) See schedule II, r 1

The decisions cited above relate to cases where the agreement to refer was made during the pendency of a suit But cases also occur in which no suit is pending and an agreement to refer is made to which a minor is a party by his guardian In such cases the application of the rule depends upon whether—

- (1) that there should be a pending suit as indicated by the words "no next friend or guardian for the suit," and
- (2) that there should be an agreement to refer

- (c) The leave must be express, not implied. It must, in the language of this rule, be expressly recorded in the proceedings. From the mere fact that the Court has passed a decree in accordance with a compromise it cannot be inferred that any of the steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree have been taken by the Court. The Court by passing a decree in pursuance of a compromise does not ipso facto sanction the compromise (z). The provisions of this rule are complied with if the leave of the Court is expressly recorded, it is not necessary that the order granting leave should state that the Court had considered the terms of the compromise and regarded them to be beneficial to the minor (a)

But the non observance of the above conditions does not render the compromise decree void or affect the jurisdiction of the Court to record it (b). The decree is only voidable, and that too at the option of the minor. No other party to the suit can call the decree in question, the minor alone is entitled to call it in question, and this he may do either on attaining majority or before then through a next friend (c)

Procedure to set aside compromise decree—A compromise decree may be set aside either in a regular suit or upon an application for review to the Court that passed the decree (d). But it cannot be called in question by way of objection to any proceeding taken in execution of it (e)

It was doubtful whether under the Code of 1882 a compromise decree can be set aside by an appeal from the decree. Minor attaining majority pending suit.—If the minor attains majority while the suit is still pending a compromise entered into by his guardian is not binding on him even though it has been sanctioned by the Court (1)

Compromise of execution proceedings.—Execution proceedings are a continuation of the suit and a next friend or guardian cannot after decree enter into a compromise or an adjustment of the decree without the sanction of the Court (1). See O 21, r 2. And this is so even though the guardian ad litem had power as natural guardian to sell the minor's property (2). But the rule is confined to an agreement, or compromise in the course of the suit. A transfer by a guardian ad litem of a decree in favour of a minor made not with reference to the suit or execution proceeding does not require the sanction of the Court (3).

Agreement to be bound by oath under Indian Oaths Act, 1873, s 9, not within this rule.—An agreement by the next friend (n) or guardian (o) of a minor that an issue in the suit should be determined by the oath of the defendant, does not come within the purview of this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary. In such a case the minor is bound by the agreement, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend.

Abandonment of issue does not amount to a compromise.—A next friend or guardian ad litem may abandon an issue in the course of the trial of the suit and the sanction of the Court is not requisite for that purpose, for the abandonment of an issue does not amount to a "compromise" within the meaning of this rule. The abandonment is binding on the minor provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem (n).

Agreement to refer to arbitration—It has been held by the High Courts of Madras (q) and Bombay (r) and by the Chief Court of the Punjab (s), that an agreement by a next friend or guardian ad litem to refer any matter in controversy in a suit to arbitration is an 'agreement' within the meaning of this rule, and that the sanction of the Court is therefore necessary. According to the Allahabad High Court such an agreement is not within this rule, and the sanction of the Court is not necessary (t). See schedule II, r 1.

The decisions cited above relate to cases where the agreement to refer was made during the pendency of a suit. But cases also occur in which no suit is pending and an agreement to refer is made to which a minor is a party by his guardian. In such cases the application of the rule depends upon whether—

- (1) that there should be a pending suit as indicated by the words 'no next friend or guardian for the suit, and
- (2) that there should be an agreement to refer

O. 32, r. 7 If either of these conditions is wanting, the present rule does not apply and no leave of the Court is necessary. A and B carry on business in partnership. A dies leaving a minor son and a widow. Disputes arise between the parties as to accounts, and an agreement is made between the minor through his mother and B to refer the disputes to arbitration. The arbitrators make their award, and the minor, by his mother, applies to file the award under para 20 of Sch II. The application is registered as a suit between the minor applicant as plaintiff and B as defendant [see the 2nd clause of para 20]. Notice is then given as required by the 3rd clause of para 20 to B, and no objection to the award having been made by B, the award is filed and a decree passed in terms of the award as provided by para 21 of Sch II. Does the agreement to refer require the sanction of the Court under this rule? No, because it was not made during the pendency of a suit and the first of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (v). Does the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? No, because the application to file the award being made by the minor as plaintiff, it cannot be said that there was an agreement on behalf of the minor not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award, in this case the second of the two conditions mentioned above is wanting (t). Again if the application to file the award was made by B, in which case the application would be registered as a suit between B as plaintiff and the minor as defendant, would the decree on the award require the sanction of the Court? Yes if the minor's guardian agreed not to object to the award and to allow a decree to be passed on the award, in this case both the conditions mentioned above are present, namely, that there is an agreement on behalf of the minor and the agreement is made in the course of a suit started by the application to file the award (u). Similarly if a suit is referred to arbitration a compromise entered into by a guardian of a minor cannot be accepted by the arbitrator without the sanction of the Court (w).

Withdrawal of suit by next friend—If the next friend of a minor plaintiff withdraws from the suit and such withdrawal is in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant, the withdrawal must be with the sanction of the Court under this rule, if the sanction of the Court is not obtained, the order of withdrawal may be set aside at the instance of the minor (x). If an appeal is withdrawn on terms and there are parties concerned who are not sui juris, the leave of the Court must be obtained (y). But if the withdrawal is not in pursuance of an agreement or compromise entered into with the defendant, the sanction of the Court is not necessary, and the withdrawal is binding on the minor plaintiff, provided there is no fraud or gross negligence on the part of the next friend (z).

Where the minor is a member of a joint Hindu family—In a suit brought by some of the members of a joint Hindu family one of whom was a minor, a compromise decree was passed after the compromise had been sanctioned by the Court. The minor had no separate interest, the adult members of the family had taken part in the compromise and assented to it and the Court declared that it was for the benefit of the minor. In a suit brought on behalf of the minor to set aside the compromise decree on the ground that the proper materials which were essential to make the compromise and decree binding upon him were not placed before the Court previous to obtaining its sanction, it was held that the decree was under the circumstances binding on the minor (a).

When the father of a minor, a member of a joint Hindu family, of which the father is the managing member, is appointed his guardian ad litem, his powers as managing member, so far as they relate to the minor's interest, are controlled by the provisions of the present rule, and he cannot, without the leave of the Court, enter into any agreement of compromise on behalf of the minor with reference to the suit. Such an agreement is not binding on the minor even if it was a bona fide settlement of a disputed claim (f).

Minor in charge of Court of Wards—The sanction of the Civil Court required by this rule is not necessary, having regard to the provisions of ss 18 and 21 of the Court of Wards Act (Beng Act 9 of 1879), to validate a compromise entered into under the authority and by the direction of the Court of Wards on behalf of a minor under its charge (c).

Mutation proceedings—The sanction of the Court is not necessary to a compromise on behalf of a minor of mutation proceedings in a Revenue Court under s 231 of the Oudh Land Revenue Act, 1901 (d).

Joint bond by a Minor and an adult—In a compromise of a suit two defendants of whom one is a minor, enter into a bond by which they jointly agree to pay a certain sum of money to the plaintiff at a future date. The leave of the Court is not obtained on behalf of the minor as required by this rule. The bond is not enforceable against the minor, but it is enforceable to the full amount against the adult promisor (e).

8. [S. 447.] (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, a next friend shall not retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in his place and giving security for the costs already incurred.

(2) The application for the appointment of a new next friend shall be supported by an affidavit showing the fitness of the person proposed, and also that he has no interest adverse to that of the minor.

Retirement of next friend—A suit is brought by A and B both minors by their mother as their next friend. The mother is also appointed guardian of the person and property of the minors under the Guardian and Wards Act 1890. Subsequently, on the application of the mother A who has then attained majority is appointed guardian of the person and property of B in her place. This is not tantamount to A being appointed next friend of B for the suit. The mother therefore cannot retire without first procuring a fit person to be put in her place and giving security for the costs already incurred (f).

9. [S. 448.] (1) Where the interest of the next friend of a minor is adverse to that of the minor or where he is so connected with a defendant whose interest is adverse to that of the minor as to make it unlikely that the minor's interest will be properly protected by him, or where he does not do his duty, or, during the pendency of the suit, ceases to reside within

British India, or for any other sufficient cause, application may be made on behalf of the minor or by a defendant for his removal, and the Court, if satisfied of the sufficiency of the cause assigned, may order the next friend to be removed accordingly, and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit

(2) Where the next friend is not a guardian appointed or declared by an authority competent in this behalf, and an application is made by a guardian so appointed or declared, who desires to be himself appointed in the place of the next friend, the Court shall remove the next friend unless it considers, for reasons to be recorded by it, that the guardian ought not to be appointed the next friend of the minor, and shall thereupon appoint the applicant to be next friend in his place upon such terms as to the costs already incurred in the suit as it thinks fit

Alterations in the rule—The words and make such other order as to costs as it thinks fit in sub r (1) are new The words and shall thereupon appoint etc at the end of sub r (2) are also new

Where the next friend does not do his duty—Where a Court finds that a next friend does not do his duty in relation to a suit it is its duty not to permit him to prejudice the interests of the minor but to adjourn the suit in order that some one interested in the minor may apply on behalf of the minor for the removal of the next friend and for the appointment of a new next friend or that the minor plaintiff himself may on coming of age elect to proceed with the suit or withdraw from it (g) So also if he is acting improperly in refusing to consent to a beneficial compromise (h)

of limitation for the appeal may have expired (i)

Non appearance of next friend—When the next friend does not appear the suit should not be dismissed for default even though a reservation is made that such dismissal is without prejudice to the minor The proper course is to stay further proceedings pending the appointment of another next friend (j)

10. [Ss. 448, 449] (1) On the retirement, removal or death of the next friend of a minor, further proceedings shall be stayed until the appointment of a next friend in his place

(2) Where the pleader of a suit is a minor, and no other person is appointed, any person interested in the suit may apply to the Court for an order, and the Court may appoint such person as it thinks fit.

Proceedings shall be stayed—If no other person is appointed, the suit cannot abate until three years after the minor attains majority.

11. [Ss. 458, 459.] (1) Where a minor plaintiff desires to retire from a suit, or where other sufficient persons are appointed to appear, the Court may order the guardian to retire or may remove him in such order as to costs as it thinks fit.

(2) Where the guardian for the minor is removed by the Court during the pendency of the suit, the Court shall appoint a new guardian in his place.

The words 'may permit such guardian to retire' in section 458 mean that the guardian does not cease to be a guardian merely because he retires. Until he is removed by the Court he represents the minor. If the guardian does not appear in an appeal does not necessarily mean that he is to act for he may think it is in the interests of the minor not to appear. The appellate Court is not in a position to judge whether the interests of the minor are being properly looked after it may make a formal order removing the guardian and appoint a new guardian in his place (n). The High Court of Patna has held that it is necessary to give notice under rule 3 (4) before appointing a new guardian (o).

Appointed guardian refuses to appeal—Appeal by natural guardian not competent—If a decree is passed against a minor and the natural guardian ad litem refuses to appeal it is not competent to the father or mother to prefer an appeal joining the guardian ad litem as a pro forma respondent, but he may annex to his appeal an application to remove the guardian ad litem and appoint himself instead. If that application is granted the appeal may be treated as properly filed (p).

12. [Ss. 450, 453.] (1) A minor plaintiff or a minor defendant, when a party to a suit on whose behalf an application is pending shall, on attaining majority, elect whether he will proceed with the suit or application.

(2) Where he elects to proceed with the suit or application, he shall apply for an order discharging the next friend, and for leave to proceed in his own name.

ORDER XXXIII.

Suits by Paupers.

P. 33, r. 1

Suits may be instituted in forma pauperis

1. [S. 401.] Subject to the following provisions, any suit may be instituted by a pauper.

Explanation.—A person is a “pauper” when he is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fee prescribed by law for the plaint in such suit, or, where no such fee is prescribed, when he is not entitled to property worth one hundred rupees other than his necessary wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the suit.

Scope and object of the order.—A plaintiff suing in a civil Court must pay the Court fee prescribed by law for the plaint and subsequent proceedings in the suit. These fees are prescribed by the Court Fees Act VII of 1870. But a person may be poor to pay the Court fee, and the object of this Order is to enable such person to bring and prosecute suits without payment of Court fees (x). There are, however, certain fees from which even a pauper is not exempted, namely, fees for service of process; such fees must be paid by him (r. 8). If the pauper succeeds in the suit, the Court has a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit for the amount of the Court fees which would have been paid by him if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper (r. 10). If the pauper fails in the suit, the Court should order him to pay the Court fees due by him (r. 11). An order directing a pauper plaintiff to pay the defendant

An order granting leave to file a suit in forma pauperis is not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and is not appealable as such (a)

The application may be presented by a person who can answer all material questions and who may be examined in person or by a person who may be examined in person or by a person who may be examined in person.

It need not be to the Court itself. Presentation in person is necessary in order to comply with rule 4 (1) but personal presentation is not necessary (c1).

the rule applies to the applicant for leave

O. 33, r. 1 Prosecution of suit as pauper.—A plaintiff may be allowed to continue as a pauper a suit instituted by him in the ordinary way (n)

Minor Plaintiff—A minor pauper may sue through a next friend although the latter is not a pauper (o) In England when a minor applies to sue as a pauper, it must be proved that the minor as well as the next friend are paupers But this rule of English practice does not apply in India, and it is enough if it is proved that the minor is a pauper, it is not necessary to prove that the next friend also is a pauper (p)

Pauper defendant—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that although the Civil Procedure Code provides only for suits to be brought by a pauper plaintiff, the Court has inherent power to allow a defendant to defend in forma pauperis (q)

Legal representative of pauper—The legal representative of a deceased person may be allowed to institute a suit in forma pauperis, if the deceased himself had been allowed to sue as a pauper if the proceedings had been instituted in his lifetime, provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (r) Similarly, on the death of a pauper plaintiff, his legal representative may be allowed to continue the suit in forma pauperis, provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (s) But in Sivagamm Sivagami v Gopalaswami (t) it was said that it was immaterial that the legal representative, has means in his private capacity and that he can continue the suit as a pauper if he has not come into possession of sufficient means out of the estate This conflicts directly with In re Radalrishna Iyer (u) decided a few months earlier by the same Court, but they are both decisions of a single judge In England an executor or administrator is not allowed to sue or defend as a pauper (t) unless he is also a beneficiary (u)

Suit in a representative capacity—If plaintiffs sue in a representative capacity as trustee or sebast and has not in his possession sufficient property of the trust, he may be allowed to sue as a pauper although he has sufficient personal property of his own (x)

Official liquidator—The word 'person' in this rule includes a company [see General Clauses Act 10 of 1897, s 3 (39)] An official liquidator therefore of a company is competent to apply for leave to sue in forma pauperis on behalf of the company if the company is a pauper within the meaning of this rule The fact that the liquidator in his personal capacity is not a pauper does not affect the question (y)

Married woman—The mere fact that the applicant's husband has property is not sufficient reason for disallowing her application for leave to sue in forma pauperis (z)

schedule of any movable or immovable property belonging to the applicant, with the estimated value thereof, shall be annexed thereto; and it shall be signed and verified in the manner prescribed for the signing and verification of pleadings.

Procedure—Rules 2 to 8 prescribe the procedure to be followed when a suit is proposed to be instituted in forma pauperis

Death of applicant—Where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis has been made, but the applicant dies pending the hearing of the application the application cannot be continued by the legal representative of the deceased applicant. The reason is that the right to apply for leave to sue as a pauper is a personal right, and it does not survive to the representative of the deceased applicant. But the legal representative may present a fresh application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, if he himself is a pauper (a)

Application to continue suit as pauper—Rule not applicable—If the suit is instituted in the ordinary way and the plaintiff applies to continue it as a pauper, this rule is not applicable for the plaint is already filed. It is sufficient to see if the plaint discloses a cause of action and then after notice to the opposite side and to the Government pleader to inquire if the plaintiff is really a pauper (b)

3. [S. 404.] Notwithstanding anything contained in these rules, the application shall be presented to the Court by the applicant in person, unless he is exempted from appearing in Court, in which case the application may be presented by an authorized agent who can answer all material questions relating to the application and who may be examined in the same manner as the party represented by him might have been examined had such party attended in person

Presented to the Court—Presentation need not be to the Court itself. Presentation to the proper officer of the Court is sufficient (c). Presentation is necessary in order that the Court may examine the applicant under rule 4 (1) but personal presentation is not necessary in the case of an amended application (d)

Purdanashin woman—A purdanashin woman exempted from appearing in Court under s. 132 above may present the application for leave to sue as a pauper by a duly authorized agent (f)

O. 33, r. 1 Prosecution of suit as pauper—A plaintiff may be allowed to continue as a pauper a suit instituted by him in the ordinary way (n)

Minor Plaintiff—A minor puper may sue through a next friend although the latter is not a puper (o). In English law when a minor applies to sue as a puper it must be proved that the minor as well as the next friend are pupers. But this rule of English practice does not apply in India and it is enough if it is proved that the minor is a puper it is not necessary to prove that the next friend also is a puper (p).

Pauper defendant—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that although the Civil Procedure Code provides only for suits to be brought by a proper plaintiff the Court has inherent power to allow a defendant to defend in forma pauperis (9)

Legal representative of pauper—The legal representative of a deceased person may be allowed to institute a suit in forma pauperis if the deceased himself had been allowed to sue as a pauper if the proceedings had been instituted in his lifetime provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (x). Similarly, on the death of a pauper plaintiff his legal representative may be allowed to continue the suit in forma pauperis provided the legal representative is also himself a pauper (y). But in Sugam v Sugam v Gopals (z) it was said that it was immaterial that the legal representative has means in his private capacity and that he can continue the suit as a pauper if he has not come into possession of sufficient means out of the estate. This conflicts directly with Indra Prakash v Jyer (u) decided a few months earlier by the same Court but they are both decisions of a single judge. In England an executor or administrator is not allowed to sue or defend as a pauper (v) unless he is also a beneficiary (u).

Suit in a representative capacity—If plaintiff sues in a representative capacity as trustee or seahit and has not in his possession sufficient property of the trust he may be allowed to sue as a pauper although he has sufficient personal property of his own (x)

Official liquidator—The word person in this rule includes a company [see General Clauses Act 10 of 1897 s 3 (39)]. An official liquidator therefore of a company is competent to apply for leave to sue in forma pauperis on behalf of the company if the company is a pauper within the meaning of this rule. The fact that the liquidator in his personal capacity is not a pauper does not affect the question. (J)

Married woman—The mere fact that the applicant's husband has property is not sufficient reason for disallowing her application for leave to sue in forma pauperis (2)

O. 33,
rr. 4, 5

4. [S. 406.] (1) Where the application is in proper form and duly presented, the Court may, if it thinks fit, examine the applicant, or his agent, when the applicant is allowed to appear by agent, regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant.

(2) Where the application is presented by an agent, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order that the applicant be examined by a commission in the manner in which the examination of an absent witness may be taken.

If presented by agent,
Court may order applicant to be examined by commission

Examination.—This Order contemplates examination of two kinds, namely (1) the examination of the applicant which may as indicated in this rule be regarding (a) the merits of the claim and (b) pauperism, and (2) the examination of persons other than the applicant which should be confined to pauperism only as indicated by the provisions of rr. 6 and 7 below. Persons other than the applicant cannot be examined on the merits of the applicant's claim (e)

5. [Ss. 405, 407.] The Court shall reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper—

Rejection of application

- (a) where it is not framed and presented in the manner prescribed by rules 2 and 3, or
- (b) where the applicant is not a pauper, or
- (c) where he has, within two months next before the presentation of the application, disposed of any property fraudulently or in order to be able to apply for permission to sue as a pauper, or
- (d) where his allegations do not show a cause of action, or
- (e) where he has entered into any agreement with reference to the subject-matter of the proposed suit under which any other person has obtained an interest in such subject-matter.

Alteration in the rule.—The expression "cause of action" in cl (d) has been substituted for the words "right to sue in such Court". See notes below under the head, "Clause (d) cause of action"

Clause (a) application not framed as required by rule 2—Failure to calculate the Court fee value in accordance with the provisions of the Court Fees Act and O 7, r 1, of the Code, is a non-compliance with the provisions of clause (a) of this rule, and the application must be rejected (f). In a later decision the Rangoon High Court has held that a mistake in the calculation of Court fee can be remedied by an amendment (f1)

Clause (c) fraudulent disposal of property—Thus if a person has property worth Rs. 1,000, and he disposes of it in August 1915 to enable himself to sue as a pauper and applies for leave to sue as a pauper in September 1915, the application should be rejected under this rule

Clause (d) cause of action—The corresponding clause of the old section ran thus "That his allegations do not show a right to sue in such Court" It was contended, that the words "sue in such Court," referred to the jurisdiction of the Court and not to the cause of action disclosed in the application. But this contention was rejected and it was held that the clause did not limit the Court to an inquiry whether the right to sue arose within the jurisdiction, but that it had a more extended meaning and that the Court was to ascertain if the application showed a good subsisting cause of action capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law (g) It was accordingly held that the application to sue as a pauper must be rejected, if the right to sue was barred by the law of limitation (h), or if it did not disclose a good cause of action as where the application was for leave to sue on a contract which was void as being immoral and opposed to public policy (i) The expression 'cause of action' has been substituted for the words 'right to sue in such Court' to give effect to these decisions Under the present rule the Lahore (j) and Madras (k) High Courts have held that the application must be rejected if the cause of action is barred by limitation, but not if the question of limitation is a complicated one about which there has been considerable difference of judicial opinion (l) The Allahabad High Court, on the other hand, considers that the effect is only to make it clear that the Court's discretion is not limited to ascertaining whether the right to sue arose within its jurisdiction or not and not to affirm the decisions under the old section (m) That High Court has therefore held that a cause of action under this rule includes a cause of action which is barred by limitation (n) or by res judicata (o) But of course it admits that an application cannot be rejected without an inquiry into pauperism because the case is weak on the merits (p)

Rule 4 provides that where the application is in proper form and duly presented, the Court may examine the applicant regarding the merits of the claim and the property of the applicant The expression the merits of the claim has reference to r 5 (d) which says that the Court shall reject the application if the allegations of the applicant do not show a cause of action. It has accordingly been held that it is the duty of the Court to consider not only the statements made in the plaint but also the statements made by the applicant in his examination in order to determine whether his allegations do or do not show a cause of action (q) and further to determine at the preliminary stage whether the plaintiff is or is not entitled to succeed on the basis of the alleged cause of action In some cases it was contended that in order to determine whether there was a cause of action the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to As to this the Allahabad High Court (r) said If the allegations in the plaint were the sole matters to be looked to and if the applicant were admittedly a pauper the granting of this application to sue as a pauper would depend, not on whether he had any merits to go upon, but on the skill of the gentleman who drafted his petition and his plaint, and the examination as to the merits under sec 406 (r) would be superfluous."

Insolvency is not one of the grounds on which an application can be rejected under this rule (s)

Clause (e): transfer of interest in subject matter of proposed suit.—The interest transferred may be either vested or contingent. Thus an agreement authorising a pleader to recover his fees out of the revenues of a village forming the subject matter of the proposed suit, in the event of the applicant failing to pay the fees to the pleader, is an agreement under which the pleader obtains a contingent interest in the subject-matter of the suit. If such an agreement is proved, the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis must be rejected (t)

Revision.—An order rejecting an application under this rule is not appealable (u), but it is open to revision in a proper case (v). The Allahabad High Court in its latest decision also holds that such an order is open to revision (u). When an application was rejected under clause (a) on the ground that it was not correctly verified the Allahabad High Court set aside the order of rejection under sec 151 and remanded the application for correct verification (u1). See note 'Interlocutory order' under s 113 at p 373.

Letters Patent appeal.—No appeal is allowed by the Code from an order made under this rule. But the Madras High Court has held that an appeal lies under cl 15 of the Letters Patent from an order allowing or refusing to allow a plaintiff to sue as a pauper, on the ground that such an order is a judgment, and that it is neither interlocutory nor made in the exercise of discretion (x).

6. [S. 408.] Where the Court sees no reason to reject the application on any of the grounds stated in rule 5, it shall fix a day (of which at least ten days' clear notice shall be given to the opposite party and the Government pleader) for receiving such evidence as the applicant may adduce in proof of his pauperism, and for hearing any evidence which may be adduced in disproof thereof.

Notice of day for receiving evidence of applicant's pauperism

Notice.—As to form of notice, see App H, form no 12

7. [S. 409.] (1) On the day so fixed or as soon thereafter as may be convenient, the Court shall examine the witnesses (if any) produced by either party, and may examine the applicant or his agent, and shall make a memorandum of the substance of their evidence.

(2) The Court shall also hear any argument which the parties may desire to offer on the question whether, on the face of the application and of the evidence (if any) taken by the Court as herein provided, the applicant is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in rule 5.

(3) The Court shall then either allow or refuse to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper.

Sub rule (2) —The Court when issuing notice under r 6 for receiving evidence in proof of pauperism, has presumably decided ex parte that none of the prohibitions in r 5 exists. But this rule enables the parties to argue the question if they so desire whether the application is or is not subject to any of the prohibitions specified in rule 5 and does not preclude the Court, if no argument is offered from considering the question (y). But although it is clear that after an inquiry under this rule the Court may come to a fresh decision both as to pauperism and as to the prohibitions in rule 5, yet there is no doubt but that the evidence taken under rule 7 is confined to the question of pauperism and that the question of the prohibitions, whether it be that the applicant has no cause of action (z), or that his claim is barred by limitation (a) is not to be decided on the evidence of witnesses but on that of the applicant. A Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court has explained that this is because the existence of a cause of action must under rule 5 (d) be decided on 'his allegations', i.e., the allegations of the applicant (b). To the same effect is a Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court under the old section (c).

Review—An order under this rule refusing leave to sue as a pauper is subject to review (d). The application for review is not liable to any Court fee (e).

Propriety of order allowing applicant to sue in forma pauperis.—Where after due consideration of an application for leave to sue as a pauper, the Court of first instance has allowed the suit to be instituted in forma pauperis, and has passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff, it is not open to the defendant, in appeal from the decree, to question the propriety of the order permitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper. Sec 105 does not apply to such an order (f).

Legal representative—If the applicant dies before the application is granted and registered as a suit, there is no suit pending and his legal representative cannot be brought on the record to continue the application (J)

Limitation where application granted—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted, the date on which the application is filed will be deemed to be the date on which the pauper suit is instituted for all purposes of limitation, and not the date on which the application is numbered and registered as a suit [Limitation Act, 1908, s. 3]. Therefore when the rate of Court fee was enhanced between the date of filing and the date of granting the application, the Court fees were in the calculation.

O. 33, r. 7 of costs assessed at the former rate (h) Time will run from the date of the application even though it is not signed and verified in the manner prescribed by rule (2) (i)

Limitation where application refused—Where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is refused, and the applicant subsequently institutes a suit in respect of the same subject matter in the ordinary way (r 15), the suit will be deemed for the purposes of limitation to have been instituted on the date on which the plant is presented and not the date on which the rejected application was filed. The reason is that upon an order of refusal under this rule, the proceedings instituted under r 2 come to an end (j). This was so decided under the old Code, but under the present Code the Court has power to treat the refused application as an unstamped plaint and to permit the requisite Court fee to be paid within a time to be fixed by the Court even though such date be after the expiry of the period of limitation (k).

Limitation where application is converted into a plaint on payment of court fees—A person who has applied for leave to sue as a pauper may, at any time before an order is made under this rule, convert his application into a plaint by paying into Court the necessary Court-fees. In such a case if the application was made bona fide, the suit would be deemed to have been instituted for the purposes of limitation on the day on which the application was filed and not the day on which the Court fees were paid. But if it is found that the application was made in bad faith, the suit would be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court fees were paid and not on the day on which the application was filed (l).

The application for leave to sue as a pauper having been made in good faith the suit will be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the application was filed, and not on the day on which the Court fees were paid.

2 On the last day of the period of limitation prescribed for the institution of a suit A applies for leave to sue as a pauper. The application is heard a fortnight later. It transpires at the hearing of the application that A is as possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the Court fees. Before an order is made under this rule rejecting the application A pays the necessary Court fees into Court and the application is thereupon converted into a plaint. The application not having been made in good faith the suit will be deemed to have been instituted on the day on which the Court fees were paid, and not on the day on which the application was filed. The Court fees having been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation the suit is time barred.

Limitation where plaintiff dispaupered—Where a plaintiff is dispaupered under r 9, and he pays the Court fees as provided by r 11 he is entitled to continue the suit and no question of limitation arises (m).

Revision—An order refusing an application to sue in forma pauperis is open to revision if the Court has acted with material irregularity and if there has been a conscious violation of the procedure of this order (n).

Clause (a)—Non disclosure by the plaintiff of a life policy worth Rs. 225 in a suit where the Court fees were over Rs. 500 was held not to justify his being dispaupered (p)

Clause (b)—Receipt of interim maintenance during the suit is not a ground for dispaupering the plaintiff if it is not enough to enable her to save the amount required for Court fees (q) Nor can she be dispaupered because she is living with a rich relation and appearing by eminent counsel (r)

Limitation where plaintiff dispaupered—See notes to r 7 under the same heading

O. 33, r. 10 by the Government from any party ordered by the decree to pay the same, and shall be a first charge on the subject-matter of the suit.

See rr 12 and 13

Amount of Court fees shall be a first charge—The charge is to be enforced by an application for the attachment and sale of the subject matter of the suit. A separate suit for the sale of the subject matter to realise the Court fees is now barred, see r 13 below and s 47 (a). The application for execution by the Government must be made within three years from the date of the decree in the proper suit (i).

Recovery of Court fees by Government from party ordered to pay the same—If the plaintiff is directed to pay the Court fees the Government may realise the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the plaintiff and if the defendant is directed to pay the Court fees, the Government may realise the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant.

Mode of realization of Court fees by Government—The plaintiff in a suit in forma pauperis obtains a decree against the defendant for possession of certain property. It is decreed by the decree that the amount of Court fees shall be a first charge on the property, and that the same shall also be recoverable by the Government from the defendant. In such a case if the defendant fails to pay the Court fees, the Government may, at its option realise the Court fees either by attachment and sale of the property which was the subject matter of the suit, or it may realise the same by an application for execution against the person or property of the defendant (u). The former right is not lost merely because the property for the recovery of which the pauper of recovering such amount (x). The Madras High Court appointed a receiver to collect it and pay Government by instalments (y). But according to the Bombay High Court a receiver cannot be appointed of future maintenance. See note "Right of future maintenance," under s 51, at p 202.

Effect of first charge—Since the amount of Court fees recoverable by Government is a first charge on the subject matter of the suit (z), it follows that a sale held in execution of such charge must prevail against a subsequent sale (a). For the same reason, the defendant against whom the decree is passed cannot set off against the subject matter of the suit any sum due by him against the plaintiff. A obtain in forma pauperis. A is directed by pay the same. Thereupon the Government apply to attach and sell the judgment-debt of Rs 1,500 due to A from B. B claims to set off Rs 1,475 due to him under a decree held by him against A. B is not entitled to the set off claimed by him, for the Government has a first charge on Rs 1,500, that being the subject matter of the suit (b).

Crown's prerogative of precedence in respect of Court fees—If the plaintiff succeeds in the suit, and the amount payable under the decree by the defendant is paid into Court the Government is entitled to payment of the Court fees out of the fund in the Court on a mere application for payment without attaching the fund in the first instance. This is because the Crown is entitled to precedence in respect of a Crown debt over all other creditors of the pauper decree holder. A obtains a decree against B for specific performance and costs in a suit brought in forma pauperis. It is directed by the decree that B should pay the Court fees to Government and the Court fees are also declared to be a first charge on the property directed to be conveyed by B to A. B fails to pay A's costs. Thereupon applies for attachment and sale of certain property belonging to B for payment of his costs. The property is sold, and the sale proceeds amounting to Rs. 1,000 are paid into Court. Thereafter A's solicitor, C, applies to the Court for payment to him out of the Rs. 1,000 of the costs incurred by him on behalf of A. At the same time a claim is made by the Government Solicitor for payment of the Court fees out of the Rs. 1,000 in priority to C's claim. The Government are entitled to precedence in respect of the Court fees and C is entitled only to the balance left after payment of the Court fees (c).

It is to be observed that in the Calcutta case cited above, C was a creditor of A inasmuch as he was entitled to be paid his costs by A. But he was merely an ordinary creditor as distinguished from a secured creditor. It is also to be observed that Court fees form a Crown debt, and the Crown was to that extent a creditor of A. It has to be borne in mind that it is only when claims of the Crown and claims of ordinary creditors or "common persons" (to use an old expression) concur or come into competition that the Crown is preferred. The Crown has no more right than a common person to seize A's property and apply it in or towards discharge of a debt due from A. It was so observed by Lord Macnaghten in a case in which the Privy Council held that where a money decree is obtained by a plaintiff in a suit by him against B and B is directed by the decree to pay the Court fees the Government are not entitled to realize the Court fees by a sale of B's property previously mortgaged by him to A, so as to defeat the right of A (d). All that could be sold by the Government in such a case is the equity of redemption of B in the property (e).

Appeal—Questions arising between the Government and any party to the suit under this rule would be questions relating to the execution discharge and satisfaction of a decree within the meaning of s. 47. And it is provided by r. 13 below that they should be deemed to be questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of s. 47. It follows that an order deciding any such question is appealable as a decree (see s. 2 cl. (2) and s. 96j (f)). Under the Code of 1852 it was held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the Government not being a party to the suit, such questions could not be said to be questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of s. 244 (now s. 47) and that orders determining such questions were not appealable as decrees (g). On the other hand the High Court of Allahabad held that such orders were appealable (h). Rule 13 (which is new) sets this conflict at rest by providing that though the Government is not a party to the suit, the Government shall be deemed to be a party to the suit for the purposes of s. 47.

- (2) where the plaintiff is dispaupered under r 9
- (3) where the suit is withdrawn or
- (4) where the suit is dismissed under the circumstances specified in cl (a) or cl (b)

If follows from what has been stated above that where an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is returned under O 7, r 10, for want of jurisdiction to be presented to the proper Court, no order can be made under this rule directing the applicant to pay the Court fees. It cannot be said in such a case that the plaintiff has failed in the suit (m). The decision may also be put on the ground that the present rule does not apply until the application is granted, and is numbered and registered under r 8 above. But a dismissal of the suit at the request of the plaintiff and the defendant, on the suit being settled out of Court, amounts to a failure within the meaning of this rule (n).

"Withdrawn"—This word has been newly added. Under the old section there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the Court could order the plaintiff to pay the Court fees if the suit was withdrawn (o). The insertion of the word 'withdrawn' makes it clear that the Court has the power under this rule to order the plaintiff to pay the Court fees if the suit is withdrawn, whether the withdrawal is without the leave of the Court or with leave to bring a fresh suit under O. 23, r. 1.

Costs—This rule does not preclude the Court from awarding a successful defendant his costs in a pauper suit. The Court has full power under s. 35 to give and apportion costs in any manner it thinks fit. Nothing in this rule limits or otherwise affects the power conferred upon the Court by s. 35 to give and apportion costs (p). It has been held that the discretion of the Court under s. 35 empowers the Court to order that the Court fees which would have to be paid by a minor plaintiff suing as a proper should be paid by his next friend (q).

Omission to make an order for payment of Court fees—The Government has the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of the Court fees (r 12). If the order is refused, the Government may, by virtue of the provisions of r 13 (which is new), prefer an appeal from the order refused. Under the Code of 1882 it was held that the Government, not being a party to the suit had no right of appeal, and it could therefore proceed only by an application for restitution (r).

12. [New] The Government shall have the right at any time to apply to the Court to make an order for the payment of Court-fees under rule 10 or rule 11.

Government may apply for payment of Court fees

This rule is new. It enables the Government, in cases of error and omission with regard to Court fees, to have the error or omission rectified by a mere application to the Court. See r (13) below.

Costs where pauper partly succeeds and partly fails—Rule 10 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who succeeds in the suit. Rule 11 deals with the case of a pauper plaintiff who fails in the suit. There is no separate provision for the case in which a pauper plaintiff has partly succeeded and partly failed. Presumably the Court is intended to deal with such a case by combining the provisions of the two rules. In such a case therefore the Court fees payable on the plaint should be apportioned between the plaintiff and the defendant. The Madras and Allahabad High Courts have held that it is illegal to lay upon the defendant in such a case a larger proportion of the Court fee leviable from the plaintiff than would have been payable by the plaintiff if the claim had been limited originally to that portion which was successful (i). But the Calcutta High Court considers that the Court has a discretion and is not bound by any hard and fast rule of apportionment (j). In a suit for Rs. 3,000 the plaintiff got a decree for Rs. 88 15 0 and was ordered to pay the defendant's costs amounting to Rs. 101. The Court held that as plaintiff was precluded by O. 21 r. 19 from executing his decree the case fell under rule 11 (k). Again when a pauper appeal was allowed on a point that did not touch merits of the case the Court ordered the Court fees to be paid by the appellant and respondent in equal moieties (l).

11. [S. 412.] Where the plaintiff fails in the suit or is dispaupered, or where the suit is withdrawn or dismissed,—

Procedure where pauper fail

(a) because the summons for the defendant to appear and answer has not been served upon him in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the Court-fee or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, or

(b) because the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court shall order the plaintiff, or any person added as a co-plaintiff to the suit, to pay the Court fees which would have been paid by the plaintiff if he had not been permitted to sue as a pauper.

See rules 12 and 13

Alterations in the rule

- 1 The word withdrawn has been newly added. See notes below under the head Withdrawn.
- 2 Besides the liability to pay the Court fees the plaintiff was under the old section subject to a further penalty of fine or imprisonment if the Court found that the suit was frivolous or vexatious. This provision has been omitted in the present rule.

Dismissal of application for default or for want of prosecution—It has been held in some cases that the dismissal of a pauper application for default (a) or dismissal owing to the applicant's failure to prosecute the application is a bar to a subsequent application (a), while in some that it is not (b)

Bar to subsequent application—The bar to a subsequent application being a bar to the jurisdiction of the Court, the Court is competent and bound to take notice of it at any stage of the suit (c)

Right to sue—There is no substantial distinction between the words "right to sue" in this rule and the words "cause of action" in rule 5. It has accordingly been held that the dismissal of an application to sue in forma pauperis for maintenance for a particular period is no bar to a subsequent application for maintenance for a different period (d)

Suits relating to Mortgages of Immovable Property.

1. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 85.] Subject to the provisions of this Code all persons having an interest either in the mortgage-security or in the right of redemption shall be joined as parties to any suit relating to the mortgage

Explanation—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or for sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit, and a prior mortgagee need not be joined in a suit to redeem a subsequent mortgage

Suits relating to mortgages—This Order is new. It is a re-enactment with some alteration of sections 85, 90, 92, 94, 96, 97 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 relating to suits on mortgage. The Transfer of Property Act did not contain any provision for the passing of a final decree in cases where payment was made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree. This omission has now been remedied and provision has been made in rules 3, 5 and 8 for the passing of a final decree in such cases. The object of transferring the provisions relating to mortgage suits from the Transfer of Property Act to the Code is explained in the notes to r. 3, below. Government to be deemed a party

This rule is new See notes to r 10 under the head "Appeal," and notes to r 11 under the head "Omission to make an order for payment of Court fees"

14. [New.] Where an order is made under rule 10, rule 11 or rule 12, the Court shall forthwith cause a copy of the decree to be forwarded to the Collector.

Copy of decree to be sent to Collector

The order operates as a decree in favour of the Collector and the Civil Court under this rule informs the Collector of the order But the collection of revenue is no part of the business of the Court and the copy of the order should not be sent to the Collector for necessary action (s)

15. [S. 413.] An order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper shall be a bar to any subsequent application of the like nature by him in respect of the same right to sue; but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right, provided that he first pays the costs (if any) incurred by the Government and by the opposite party in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper.

Refusal to allow applicant to sue as pauper to bar subsequent application of like nature

Order refusing to allow applicant to sue as pauper—An order refusing to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper is an order under rule 7 A Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court has held that if an application is refused under rule 7, this rule is a bar to a subsequent application, and that it makes no difference that the application has been refused on one of the grounds specified in rule 5 on which it might have been rejected (t). The Calcutta High Court has also held that rule 15 only applies when the application has been refused under rule 7 (u). In some cases (v) it has been said that there is no distinction between an order of rejection under rule 5 and an order of refusal under rule 7 but in all these cases the order which was held to be a bar was one of refusal under rule 7 The Lahore High Court has held that the refusal of an application on the ground specified in rule 5(a) is tantamount to a rejection and does not operate as a bar (w). The Madras High Court has held that if the refusal is on the merits it operates as a bar and not otherwise (x). As to this Page, C.J., observes that however meritorious the interpretation may be there is not a word to that effect in the rule (y).

other High Courts in holding that a person who claimed adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party to such suit. Thus if A mortgages certain property to B, and B sues A for sale of the mortgaged property, and C claims the property as his own and denies A a right to mortgage it, C is not a necessary party to the suit and the question of C's paramount title cannot be litigated in B's suit (l). And this is certainly the law under the present rule, C is not a necessary party (l) and should be dismissed from the suit (m).

On the other hand the question is not one of jurisdiction but at most one of misjoinder, and when it is alleged that the person claiming adversely or by title paramount is a benamidar of the mortgagee (n) or is in possession and likely to resist the claim of the successful plaintiff in the mortgage suit (o) it may be convenient to join him as a party.

See notes below under the head Parties to suits for redemption foreclosure or sale.

Explanation prior mortgagees—The Explanation to the rule is new. It is intended to supersede certain decisions under sec. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act to the effect that a prior mortgagee is a necessary party to a suit for sale or foreclosure by a puisne or subsequent mortgagee (p). The Explanation declares that a prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to such a suit. Thus if A mortgages his property to B and subsequently to C, C may sue for sale without making B a party to the suit. In such a case if a decree for sale is passed, the property will be sold subject to B's mortgage (q). But this rule does not preclude C from joining B as a party, in fact, B would be a proper party if C offered to redeem B's mortgage (r). But if C merely joins B as a party and claims no relief against him, B's position is that of a holder of a paramount title outside the controversy and he will not be affected by the decree for sale which C obtains for that sale will be subject to B's mortgage. This is what happened in the case of Ridha Kishan v. Khursid Hossein (s). The prior mortgage was of 1892 to A whose interest devolved on B who assigned it in September 1906 to the plaintiff. The puisne mortgage was of 1894 to C who sued for sale in August 1906 making B a party but claiming no relief against him. After C obtained his decree for sale, the plaintiff sued on his prior mortgage and was met by the plea of res judicata on the ground that his predecessor B might and ought to have enforced the security in the former suit. The defence failed as C had not in his suit sought to displace B's title or to postpone it to his own.

With reference to the first branch of the Explanation it had been held that a mortgagee having successive mortgages from the same mortgagor of the same property could sue on the mortgage of later date reserving his rights under the prior mortgage. But this is no longer the law for under secs. 61 and 67A inserted in the Transfer of Property Act by Act 20 of 1929 the mortgage must enforce all the mortgages unless there is a contract to the contrary, while the mortgagor may redeem each separately. See Mulla's Transfer of Property Act note 'Mortgagee bound to consolidate' at p. 392 and note 'Two or more mortgages' at p. 366.

O. 34, r. 1 all persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage must be joined as parties to any suit under this chapter relating to such mortgage, Provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest "

A comparison of the present rule with sec 85 of the Transfer of Property Act will shew that the words "in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption" have been substituted for "in the property comprised in the mortgage." An Explanation has been added and the proviso relating to notice is omitted. The explanation was added as it was generally thought that sec 85 made it imperative on a puisne mortgagee to make a prior mortgagee a party to his action for foreclosure. The substitution of the words "in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption" have made it clear that an adverse claimant who is a stranger to the security or the equity of redemption need not be joined (e) see notes below, "Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption."

Scope and object of the rule—The object of this rule requiring all persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption to be joined as parties is to avoid multiplicity of suits (f). The rule applies only to suits relating to a mortgage, that is to say, to suits for foreclosure, sale and redemption as indicated by the marginal note to the rule. The rule therefore does not apply to suits by a mortgagee for a personal decree against the mortgagor (as to which see r 6 below).

"Persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption"—The corresponding words in the Transfer of Property Act, s 85, were persons having an interest in the property comprised in a mortgage. These words gave rise to a conflict of views. According to one view, which coincides with the English law and the law as enunciated in the present rule, those persons only should be joined as parties to a suit relating to a mortgage who were either interested in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption. A person who sets up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee should not be joined as a party to such suit, for he is neither interested in the mortgage security nor in the right of redemption (g). Thus if A lets his property on a lease to B, and B mortgages the leasehold to C, A holding the property by title paramount, should not be joined as a party defendant to a suit by C to enforce the mortgage (h). Similarly, if A and B are co owners of certain property and B mortgages his undivided share to C, A should not be joined as a party to a suit for sale by C, as A has no interest in the right of redemption (i). According to the other view which prevailed in Allahabad all persons must be joined as parties if they had an interest in the property, though they might have no interest either in the mortgage security or in the equity of redemption. The word "property," according to the Allahabad High Court, means the actual immovable property mortgaged, and not merely particular rights and interests in such property, such as a bare right to redeem (j). The view held by the Allahabad High Court is no longer tenable. The present rule gives effect to the former view which as already stated, is in accordance with the English law.

But though the Allahabad High Court held that all persons interested in the mortgage property must be joined as parties to a suit on mortgage, that Court agreed with the other High Courts in holding that a person who claimed adversely to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party to such suit. Thus if A mortgages certain property to B and B sues A for sale of the mortgaged property, and C claims the property as his own and denies A's right to mortgage it C is not a necessary party to the suit and the question of C's paramount title cannot be litigated in B's suit (l). And this is certainly the law under the present rule, C is not a necessary party (l) and should be dismissed from the suit (m).

On the other hand the question is not one of jurisdiction but at most one of misjoinder, and when it is alleged that the person claiming adversely or by title paramount is a benamidar of the mortgagee (n) or is in possession and likely to resist the claim of the successful plaintiff in the mortgage suit (o) it may be convenient to join him as a party.

See notes below under the head Parties to suits for redemption foreclosure or sale

Explanation prior mortgagees—The Explanation to the rule is new. It is intended to supersede certain decisions under sec. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act to the effect that a prior mortgagee is a necessary party to a suit for sale or foreclosure by a puisne or subsequent mortgagee (p). The Explanation declares that a prior mortgagee is not a necessary party to such a suit. Thus if A mortgages his property to B and subsequently to C, C may sue for sale without making B a party to the suit. In such a case if a decree for sale is passed the property will be sold subject to B's mortgage (q). But this rule does not preclude C from joining B as a party, in fact, B would be a proper party if C offered to redeem B's mortgage (r). But if C merely joins B as a party and claims no relief against him B's position is that of a holder of a paramount title outside the controversy and he will not be affected by the decree for sale which C obtains for that sale will be subject to B's mortgage. This is what happened in the case of Radha Kishan v. Khursid Hossein (s). The prior mortgage was of 1892 to A whose interest devolved on B who assigned it in September 1906 to the plaintiff. The puisne mortgage was of 1834 to C who sued for sale in August 1906 making B a party but claiming no relief against him. After C obtained his decree for sale, the plaintiff sued on his prior mortgage and was met by the plea of res judicata on the ground that his predecessor B might and ought to have enforced the security in the former suit. The defence failed as C had not in his suit sought to displace B's title or to postpone it to his own.

With reference to the first branch of the Explanation it had been held that a mort-by Act 20 of 1929 the mortgage must enforce all the mortgages unless there is a contract to the contrary while the mortgagor may redeem each separately. See Mulla's Transfer of Property Act note 'Mortgagee bound to consolidate' at p. 392 and note 'Two or more mortgages' at p. 366.

A mortgages his property to B. B sues A on the mortgage. During the pendency of the suit A executes a second mortgage of his property to C. C is not a necessary party to A's suit, the mortgage to him having been executed subsequently to the institution of the suit (k).

Trustees, executors and administrators—The rule begins with the words "subject to the provisions of this Code." The reference is to O 31, r 1, which provides for suits, concerning property vested in a trustee, executor or administrator. Having regard to the provisions of that rule, a suit for redemption (l) or foreclosure (m), or sale may be brought by trustees without making the beneficiaries parties.

Benamidar—A benamidar can maintain a suit on a mortgage. Thus if a mortgage is executed ostensibly in favour of A, but the real mortgagee is B, A may sue the mortgagor on the mortgage. It is not open to the mortgagor to contend that A being merely the benamidar he cannot maintain the suit (n).

Sub mortgagee—A mortgagee may create such estates as he pleases. He may convey by way of sub mortgage to whom and in as many parcels as he pleases (o). If the mortgagor sues to redeem the mortgage, he must make the sub mortgagee a party as he is interested in the mortgage security as assignee of the mortgagee (p). It has been held by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court that when a mortgagee has sub mortgaged his interest in the property mortgaged to him, the sub mortgagee is entitled to sell the interest in the property of his sub mortgagor without impleading the mortgagor and foreclosing his equity of redemption in other words he is entitled to sell the sub mortgagor's interest leaving the equity of redemption outstanding in the mortgagor (q). In an earlier case (r) the Allahabad High Court took the view that a sub mortgagee is entitled only to a decree for money against the sub mortgagor, but this was doubted in later cases (s) and it is not good law. See notes to r 2 below, * Sub mortgage.

A person cannot be both plaintiff and defendant—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee where the plaintiff also joined himself as a defendant as one of the puisne mortgagees his name was struck out as a co defendant (t).

Consequences of non joinder—Under the corresponding section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the non joinder of a person who ought to have been made a party to a suit on a mortgage was a defect fatal to the suit and that the suit should therefore be dismissed but that the Court if it sees fit to do so may add him as a party under sec 32 of the Code of 1882 [O 1, r 10 (2)]. Those decisions proceeded on what the Court said was the imperative character of the word must in section 85 of that Act (u). In a recent case under the present rule the same Court held that the result of non joinder of a subsequent mortgagee in a suit on a prior mortgage, though intentional, would not be the same.

O. 34, r. 1 property affected by the subsequent mortgage (v) The High Courts of Bombay (w) and Calcutta (x) took the same view as the Allahabad High Court

The word "must" which occurred in sec 85 of the Transfer of Property Act having been dropped, and the section having been transferred into the Code, the question as to the effect on non joinder is, it is submitted, governed by the provisions of the Code O 1, r 9, provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of non joinder of parties, and O 34, r 1, is subject to O 1, r 9 (y) Under O 1, r 10 (2) the Court has the power to add parties at any stage of the suit By sec 90 of the Code it is enacted that no decrees shall be reversed or substantially varied in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties [which include non joinder (z)], unless it affects the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. The result is that no suit on a mortgage should be dismissed by reason of non joinder of parties unless the parties are necessary parties and the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties If the parties are merely proper parties, as distinguished from necessary parties (a), the Court may, though the plaintiff refuses to add them as parties proceed under O 1 r 9 to deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interest of the parties actually before it This was in effect held by the High Court of Bombay in Shahasheb v Sadasakur (b) a case under the present rule In that case a suit was brought by a mortgagee against the widow and daughters of the deceased mortgagor for sale of the mortgaged properties The deceased was a Mahomedan, and besides the widow and daughters he left a brother as one of his heirs It was contended on behalf of the defendants that the brother having an interest in the right of redemption he ought to have been joined as a defendant, and that the plaintiff having omitted to join him as a defendant the suit should be dismissed in its entirety At the date when the objection as to non joinder was taken by the defendants, the period of limitation as against the brother had expired It was held overruling the contention that the brother was not a necessary party and that a decree could be passed against the widow and the daughters to the extent of their interest in the properties Following this case it has been held that if a mortgagee sues for sale making some only of the heirs of the mortgagor a party the Court may deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties before it and make an order for sale proportionate to share of the defendants (c) See note infra 'Mahomedan co heirs,' at p 985

In a mortgagee's suit for sale a puisne mortgagee is a proper but not a necessary party and the suit should not be dismissed because he has not been joined (d) This has been extended in two cases (e) by the Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts to the case of a part mortgagee who has been allowed to sue for sale of his proportionate share joining the co mortgagees after the period of limitation for a suit by them had become timebarred. But a later decision of the Calcutta High Court, without reference to these cases held that if the part mortgagee is joined after the period of limitation has expired the whole suit must be dismissed (f) See note (O 34, r 1 is subject to O 1, r 9) at p 468

Where a person who ought to have been joined as a party under this rule is not joined as a party, and a decree is passed in the suit, the decree cannot affect his rights (g) [see notes below, "Mahomedan co heirs"] To take a case which frequently occurs, if a second or subsequent mortgagee who ought to be, but is not joined as a party to a suit by the prior mortgagee, the proceedings in the suit are not binding on him so as to affect his rights under the second mortgage (h) As second mortgagee he could have sued the mortgagor for a sale of the property subject to the first mortgage, or he could have redeemed the first mortgage and then sued the mortgagor for sale on both the mortgages The point to be noted is that the second mortgagee does not lose either of these rights, merely because a decree has been passed in the prior mortgage suit, and the mortgaged property has been sold in execution of the decree The sale has not the effect of displacing the second mortgagee and leaving him with nothing but a claim against the balance (if any) of the sale proceeds of the property after satisfying the first mortgagee (i) The omission to implead the second mortgagee does not in any way prejudice his rights (j) That his right to sue for sale (subject, of course, to the first mortgage) is not lost, has been held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court (k)

terms he is entitled to redeem the first mortgage In Umesh Chander v Zahur Latima (m) it was held by the Judicial Committee that a second mortgagee desiring to redeem is bound to pay the whole amount due under the first mortgage, and not merely the portion realised at the sale held in execution of the first mortgagee's decree When this was in Umesh Chander's case was made, the Transfer of Property Act had not been passed and the procedure prescribed by that Act for suits for sales under that Act did not exist; that case was decided on the law as it then stood (n) By sec 89, however, of the Transfer of Property Act it is provided that where a suit is brought by a mortgagee for a sale and an order absolute for sale is made the defendant's (mortgagor's) right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished, in other words, an order absolute for sale under sec 89 substitutes the rights under the decree for those under the mortgage. The result of this extinction is that in cases governed by the Transfer of Property Act if the first mortgagee obtains a decree for sale without making the second mortgagee a party to his suit, and the mortgaged property is sold in execution of the decree the second mortgagee afterwards suing for a sale decree under his mortgage, is entitled to a decree for sale on payment

O. 34, r. 1 Act and decided prior to Matru Mai a case, the Indian Courts seem to have overlooked the provisions of sec 89 of the said Act, and they held as was done by the Judicial Committee in Umesh Chunder s case that the second mortgagee can only redeem upon payment of the entire amount due under the first mortgage (p) It was also held that he was not bound to pay for any improvements which the purchaser might have made in the meantime (q) It was further held that where the property was purchased by a third party, and the purchase money paid by him did not fully satisfy the amount of the first mortgage, the amount payable by the second mortgagee should be apportioned between the purchaser and the first mortgagee, that is to say, the purchaser should be paid the amount of the purchase money paid by him at the sale and the balance should be paid to the first mortgagee Thus if the amount due under the first mortgage was Rs 10,000 and the property was sold in execution of the first mortgagee s decree for Rs 1,050 and the second mortgagee desired to redeem the purchaser, the amount payable by the second mortgagee, namely, Rs 10 000 should be apportioned between the purchaser and the first mortgagee, the former receiving Rs 1,050, and the balance going to the first mortgagee (r) The decision in Matru Mai s case (s) was based upon the words " the defendant s (mortgagor s) right to redeem, and the security shall both be extinguished " which occurred at the end of sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act (t) But these words have been omitted in the corresponding r 5 of this Order The result would seem to be that the second mortgagee who is not made a party to the first mortgagee s suit can only redeem under the present law on payment of the entire amount due under the first mortgage as held in Umesh Chunder s case (u), and in the case of Sukhi v Ghulam Safdar Khan (v), the Privy Council decided that this is so and that the law is now as it was before the Transfer of Property Act A Calcutta case (w) gave terse expression to the same conclusion by saying that the puisne mortgagee could not both approbate and reprobate the prior mortgagee s decree If the prior mortgagee has brought the property to sale and purchased it himself, he will, when redeemed by the puisne mortgagee, be entitled to interest at the mortgage rate up to the date when he took possession (x)

Where a person has come into possession subsequently to the date of the first mortgage either as putnidar or as usufructuary mortgagee, he should be joined as a party to a suit by the first mortgagee, and thus given an opportunity of redeeming the mortgage If he is not joined as a party, the purchaser under the mortgage decree is not entitled to obtain possession without paying off his charge (y)

If the mortgagee obtains a decree for sale on his mortgage without making an assignee of the mortgagor a party and sells the property, the auction purchaser as assignee of the mortgagee can institute a fresh suit on the mortgage against the assignee of the mortgagor (z)

If the mortgagee obtains a decree for sale and purchases the property, without having made an assignee of the mortgagor a party, and that assignee remains in possession for 12 years after the date of the mortgage, the mortgagee cannot dispossess him, for he has only acquired the mortgagee's right by his purchase and the O. 3 suit on the mortgage is barred by limitation (a)

Mahomedan co heirs.—A Mahomedan mortgages his property to A. He then dies leaving as his heirs a widow, two daughters and a brother. After his death, A sues the widow and the daughters for sale of the mortgaged property. The brother is not joined as a party to the suit. According to the Bombay High Court the brother is not a necessary party to the suit (b). But there is a conflict of opinion whether the Court can in such a case pass a decree for the sale of the whole property. In Lirchand v Kondu (c), the Court held that it can. In a later Bombay case (d) however, Pratt, J., expressed the opinion that a decree can be passed for the sale only of the right, title and interest of the widow and the daughters. See Mulla's Principles of Mahomedan Law, 10th ed., art. 36, p. 20.

Joint Hindu family.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity, the other members of the family are necessary parties to the suit having regard to the provisions of the present rule. It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad (e), Madras (f) and Patna (g), following a decision of the Privy Council (h), that where a suit is brought on a mortgage by or against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity, the other members of the family are not necessary parties to the suit, and that the suit will not fail by reason of the non joinder of those members. It makes no difference whether the manager is a father or collateral relation such as an uncle or a brother.

According to the Bombay decisions it would seem that the other coparceners are necessary parties to a suit brought on a mortgage by or against the manager (i). But if they are not joined as parties and a decree is passed for the sale of the joint family property against the manager in his representative character and the property is sold in execution of the decree the sale it has been held passes the interest of the other coparceners also in the property. The mere fact that they were not parties to the mortgage suit is no ground for setting aside the sale, unless it be shown by them that the debt contracted by the manager was one for which they are not liable (j).

According to the Calcutta High Court, the other coparceners are necessary parties to a suit on a mortgage of joint family property, and if a decree is passed in such a suit without their being joined as parties the decree is not binding on them and they may by suit obtain a declaration that not being parties to the suit their interests are not bound by the decree in the suit (k).

. 34, r. 1 In another case before the Privy Council governed by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, where a foreclosure decree was passed against the manager of a joint Hindu family, and the other members brought a suit to set aside the decree on the ground of their non joinder as persons interested in the equity of redemption under s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, their Lordships held that the decree was in the circumstances of the case binding upon them, though they were not parties to the suit. Their Lordships said "There seems to be no doubt upon the Indian decisions (from which their Lordships see no reason to dissent) that there are occasions including foreclosure suits when the managers of a joint Hindu family so effectively represent all other members of the family, that the family as a whole is bound." It is quite clear from the facts of the case and the findings of the Courts upon them that this is a case where this principle ought to be applied. "There is not the slightest ground for suggesting that the manager of the joint family did not act in every way in the interests of the family itself, and no question arises under s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act [O 34, r 1], because the mortgagee had no notice of the plaintiff's interests" (l). Note that the words "provided that the plaintiff has notice of such interest," which occurred in s 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, do not occur in the present rule.

The recent Privy Council case of Ganpat Lal v Bindbasini Prasad (m) is an authority for the proposition that in a suit on a mortgage against the manager of a joint Hindu family all the other members of the family are represented by the manager. The mortgage was by the manager and the mortgagee obtained a decree for sale joining as parties the manager and the other members of the family. The mortgagee purchased the property himself. But one of the members of the family who was a minor was wrongly described in the suit as an adult. He sued to redeem on the ground that not having been represented in the suit by a guardian ad litem he was not a party to the mortgagee's suit. This claim would have been unanswerable if he had not been represented by the manager in the suit. But the Privy Council held that as he had not sued to set aside the sale and did not impeach the mortgage or the decree, the suit was not maintainable. In other words, he was represented by the manager and it did not matter whether he was a party or not. The only ground which he could take was that he was not liable for the mortgage debt contracted by the manager and that he had not done. The same rule was applied by the High Court of Bombay in a suit for sale on a mortgage against the grandfather who was the manager (n).

Where parties are not governed by the Hindu law, and the only interest which a son has under the customary law is a reversionary interest in the property and a right to protect that interest by interfering to prevent unnecessary alienations the son has no such interest in the property as is contemplated by the present rule and he is not therefore a necessary party to a suit on a mortgage against his father (o).

Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act, 1913—O 34 has no application to a suit under s 12 of the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act 2 of 1913. The object of such a suit is merely to get rid of the order of the Collector under s 12 allowing redemption (p).

2. [New Act IV of 1882, sec 86.] (1) In a suit for O.
Preliminary decree in foreclosure suit foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what was due to the plaintiff at the date of such decree for—

(i) principal and interest on the mortgage,

(ii) the costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, and

(iii) other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him up to that date in respect of his mortgage security, together with interest thereon, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at that date, and

(c) directing—

(i) that, if the defendant pays into Court the amount so found or declared due on or before such date as the Court may fix within six months from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the account taken under clause (a), or from the date on which such amount is declared in Court under clause (b), as the case may be, and thereafter pays such amount as may be adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges and expenses as provided in rule 10, together with subsequent interest on such sums respectively as provided in rule 11, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as the defendant appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required re-transfer the property to the defendant at his cost free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title by those under whom he claims and shall also if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property; and

(n) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the defendant fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the property

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub-rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

(3) Where, in a suit for foreclosure, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of, any such mortgagees are joined as parties the preliminary decree shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9 or Form No 10, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The old rule —The above rule substituted for old r 2 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was in operation till the above date. It was as follows —

2 In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree and directing—

(c) that if the defendant pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any person claiming under him, or where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property, but

(d) that, if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court the defendant shall be debarred from all rights to redeem the property

Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s 85—This rule corresponds to s 86 of the O. 34, Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars—

- 1 The words "to the plaintiff or" which occurred in s 86 after the word "pays" in cl (c) have been omitted, the object being that in every case the defendant shall pay the money into Court.
- 2 In cl (c) the words "if so required" have been added before the words "re-transfer the property" as according to malussil practice a re-transfer is not ordinarily required.

The old rule and the new rule—

- 1 The new rule expressly states that the decree to be passed under it is a preliminary decree.
- 2 The old rule was not clear as to the date up to which accounts were to be taken. The new rule makes it clear that the Court should direct accounts to be taken up to the date of the preliminary decree.
- 3 The new rule expressly provides that in taking accounts the amount to be spent by a mortgagee for necessary costs, charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security together with interest thereon should be taken into account.
- 4 The old rule was not clear as to the day on which payment was to be made by the mortgagor in cases where accounts were directed to be taken. This is now made clear in sub rule (1) (c) (i).
- 5 The provision in new sub rule (1) (c) (i) as to subsequent interest is new. See rule 11 (b).
- 6 New sub rule (1) (c) makes it clear that the costs of re-transfer are to be borne by the mortgagor.
- 7 New sub rule (1) (c) (u) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due under the preliminary decree, the mortgagee has to apply to the Court for a final decree.
- 8 New sub rule (2) relates to the power of the Court to extend the time for payment. It is in substance a reproduction of old rule 3 (2). See note below, Power to extend time in foreclosure suits.
- 9 New sub rule (3) draws specific attention to the forms of decrees to be passed where subsequent mortgages are joined as parties to a suit for foreclosure.

Form of preliminary decree for foreclosure—See Appendix D, Form No 3, when accounts are directed to be taken, and Form No 3A, when no accounts are taken and the Court declares the amounts due.

Foreclosure and sale—Until 1st April 1930, i.e., until the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929, comes into operation, a suit for foreclosure can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale. After that date it is no longer open to the holder of an English mortgage to sue for foreclosure. In the case of a mortgage by deposit of title deeds in Bombay, where the remedy by way of foreclosure was held to be open to such a mortgagee s 15 (2) of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act allows a period of two years, i.e., upto 1st April 1932, to such a mortgagee to enforce his remedy by way of foreclosure. Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act, 1929, the remedy, by way of foreclosure is allowed only (1) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale and (2) an anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf. A suit for sale can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage.

1. The new rule expressly provides that the mortgagee is to be paid out of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property.
2. The new rule was necessary because the old rule which was not fully complied with by the mortgagees was that the mortgagee was to be paid out of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property.
3. The new rule expressly provides that in taking account of the amount to be paid to the mortgagee for necessary costs, charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security, the other with interest thereon shall be taken into account.
4. The old rule was not clear as to the day on which payment was to be made by the mortgagee in cases where accounts were directed to be taken. This is now made clear in sub-rule (1) (c) (ii).
5. The provision in new sub-rule (1) (c) (ii) as to subsequent interest is new. See rule 14 (b).
6. New sub-rule (1) (c) makes it clear that the mortgagee is to be paid out of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property.
7. New sub-rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagee in payment of the amount due under the preliminary decree, the mortgagee has to apply to the Court for a final decree.
8. New sub-rule (2) relates to the power of the Court to extend the time for payment. It is in substance a reproduction of old rule 3 (2). See para below, "Power to extend time in foreclosure suits".
9. New sub-rule (3) draws special attention to the forms of decrees to be passed where subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to a suit for foreclosure.

Form of preliminary decree for foreclosure—See Appendix D, Form No. II, when accounts are directed to be taken, and Form No. JV, when no accounts are taken and the Court declares the amounts due Foreclosure and sale.—Until 1st April 1930, i.e., until the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929, comes into operation, a suit for foreclosure can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale. After that date it is no longer open to the holder of an English mortgage to sue for foreclosure. In the case of a mortgage by deposit of title deeds in Bombay, where the remedy by way of foreclosure was held to be open to such a mortgagee, s. 15 (2) of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act allows a period of two years, i.e., upto 1st April 1932, to such a mortgagee to end a suit is remedy by way of foreclosure. Under the Transfer of Property Amendment Act, 1929, the remedy, by way of foreclosure is allowed only (1) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale and (2) an anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf. A suit for sale can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a mortgage by conditional sale.

The holder of a mortgage by conditional sale cannot institute a suit for sale. A simple mortgagee cannot institute a suit for foreclosure. A usufructuary mortgagee cannot institute a suit either for foreclosure or sale [Transfer of Property Act, s 67]. Rules 2 and 3 provide for decrees for foreclosure. Rules 4 and 5 provide for decrees for sale.

The Transfer of Property Amending Act, 1929, places a mortgage by deposit of title deeds on the same footing as a simple mortgage. In the case, therefore, of a mortgage by deposit of title deeds the only remedy open to the mortgagee is by way of sale except in Bombay where the mortgagee is allowed a further period of two years as stated above. See secs 67, 96 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and r 15 below.

Right of redemption—The mortgagor has, at any time after the mortgage money has become payable by him, a right on payment of deposit in Court or tender of the mortgage money, to require the mortgagee to deliver up to him all documents in the mortgagee's possession relating to the mortgaged property, and to re-transfer the property to him. This right is called the right of redemption. The right to redeem subsists so long as a mortgage subsists (g) [Transfer of Property Act, s 60]. Rules 7 and 8 provide for decrees for redemption.

Account against mortgagor—Whether the suit be one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the preliminary decree in each case must either declare the amount due or direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal, interest and costs and for other costs, charges and expenses in respect of the mortgage security. Where the same property is mortgaged to several persons in succession, and the subsequent mortgagees are joined as parties to the suit, they are entitled if they appear and prove their mortgages, to ask for a decree for an account on each of their mortgages and a declaration of their right in a suit for sale to participate in the surplus sale proceeds in order of priority. An account is then taken of what is due on each mortgage, the sums so found due to each mortgagee are included in one report, and the sale proceeds are subsequently divided between the plaintiff and the puisne mortgagees in accordance with their claims as found by the report (r). See Appendix D Forms of Decrees, Nos 9 to 11. Where the mortgagee is in possession an account is to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee for principal and interest and also of the income derived by him from the property. Whatever may be the nature of the suit it lies upon the mortgagee to prove what is due to him for principal and interest. If the mortgage deed is not put in evidence as where it is not stamped and the mortgagee refuses to pay the penalty, he can only be credited in the account with the sum which the mortgagor admits was the amount of the principal (s).

Principal—The amount of principal and the rate of interest payable thereon are almost invariably stated in the instrument of mortgage. Such statement amounts to an admission on the part of the mortgagor that he has received the amount mentioned in the instrument. But an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted (f) and it is open to the mortgagor to show that a smaller consideration or no consideration at all passed under the instrument of mortgage (u). But the burden of proof in that case lies on the mortgagor (v). But though an admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted, it may operate as an estoppel, so as to preclude the mortgagor from asserting that a smaller consideration or no consideration passed under the instrument of mortgage (w) This is so in cases where the mortgagee transfers his interest in the mortgage to a third party who has no notice that the full amount acknowledged to have been received on the face of the mortgage-deed has not been received. In such a case the mortgagor is not entitled to redeem except on payment to the transferee of the amount stated in the mortgage-deed to have been received by the mortgagee (x)

Costs of suit.—Whether the suit is one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the mortgagee is entitled to all costs properly incurred (y) by him including costs subsequent to decree (r 10). This right, resting substantially upon contract, can only be lost or curtailed by such inequitable conduct on the part of the mortgagee as may amount to a violation or culpable neglect of his duty under the contract" (z). Thus costs incurred by the mortgagee after a proper tender has been made have been disallowed (a). And where in a suit for redemption the mortgagee, though he had been fully paid, contended that a large amount was still due to him, he was directed to pay costs of the suit (b).

Other costs, charges and expenses.—Sec 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, enables the mortgagee to spend such money as is necessary for the preservation of the mortgaged property from destruction, forfeiture or sale, for supporting the mortgagor's title to the property for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor, etc., and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. Sec 63A enables the mortgagee in possession to make such improvements as are necessary to preserve the property from destruction or deterioration and to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. These are the costs, charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii) and they are to be taken into account in determining the amount payable by the mortgagor to the mortgagee (c). Rule 10 below provides for payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of similar costs, charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee after the date of the preliminary decree up to the time of actual payment.

Subsequent interest.—There was no provision either in old r 2 or in old r 3 for payment of interest by the mortgagor subsequent to the day fixed under the decree for payment of the amount due. Provision has now been made for it in r 11 (b) below.

Plaintiff to apply for final decree for sale.—Sub rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due, the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale. In one case the application was made by the

Account against mortgagee in possession.—Where under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagee is to enjoy the rents and profits in lieu of interest, or the rents and profits are to be taken as an equivalent of the interest and of specific portions of the principal, there is no obligation on the mortgagee to render any accounts (e). In other cases a mortgagee in possession is bound to render an account of the rents and profits

instrument of mortgage (w) This is so in cases where the mortgagee transfers his interest in the mortgage to a third party who has no notice that the full amount acknowledged to have been received on the face of the mortgage deed has not been received. In such a case the mortgagor is not entitled to redeem except on payment to the transferee of the amount stated in the mortgage-deed to have been received by the mortgagor (x)

Costs of suit.—Whether the suit is one for foreclosure, sale or redemption, the mortgagee is entitled to all costs properly incurred (y) by him including costs subsequent to decree (r 10). This right, resting substantially upon contract, can only be lost or curtailed by such inequitable conduct on the part of the mortgagee as may amount to a violation or culpable neglect of his duty under the contract (z). Thus costs incurred by the mortgagee after a proper tender has been made have been disallowed (a). And where in a suit for redemption the mortgagee, though he had been fully paid, contended that a large amount was still due to him, he was directed to pay costs of the suit (b).

Other costs, charges and expenses.—Sec 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, enables the mortgagee to spend such money as is necessary for the preservation of the mortgaged property from destruction, forfeiture or sale, for supporting the mortgagor's title to the property for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor, etc., and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. Sec 63A enables the mortgagee in possession to make such improvements as are necessary to preserve the property from destruction or deterioration and to add such money to the principal money at the rate of interest payable on the principal. These are the costs, charges and expenses referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (iii) and they are to be taken into account in determining the amount payable by the mortgagor to the mortgagee (c). Rule 10 below provides for payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of similar costs, charges and expenses incurred by the mortgagee after the date of the preliminary decree up to the time of actual payment.

Subsequent interest.—There was no provision either in old r 2 or in old r 3 for payment of interest by the mortgagor subsequent to the day fixed under the decree for payment of the amount due. Provision has now been made for it in r 11 (b) below.

Plaintiff to apply for final decree for sale.—Sub rule (1) (c) (ii) makes it clear that if default is made by the mortgagor in payment of the amount due, the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale. In one case the application was made by the

Account against mortgagee in possession.—Where under the terms of a usufructuary mortgage the mortgagee is to enjoy the rents and profits in lieu of interest, or the rents and profits are to be taken as an equivalent of the interest and of specific portions of the principal, there is no obligation on the mortgagee to render any accounts (e). In other cases a mortgagee in possession is bound to render an account of the rents and profits

Power to extend time in foreclosure suits—The proviso to old r 3 (2) empowered the Court upon good cause shown and upon such terms as it thought fit from time to time to postpone the day fixed for payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage money. This proviso has now been transferred to sub rule (2) of the present rule with some alterations. Sub rule (2) empowers the Court upon good cause shown and terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time at any time before a final decree is passed, to extend the time fixed for payment. The power to extend the time is discretionary and the mortgagor is not entitled to an extension as of right (h). It is not a good ground for extending the time that the mortgagor was under a misconception or payment in time was unnecessary (i). It was held under the old rule that the application for extension of time need not be made before the expiry of the time originally fixed for payment and that it could be made even after the expiry of that time provided it was made before a final decree for foreclosure was passed (j). This is now made clear by substituting the words "extend the time" for the words "postpone the day".

It was held under the old rule that even if there was no order postponing the day fixed for the payment of the mortgage money, a payment into Court by the mortgagor of the mortgage money before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure was an effectual payment (k). Effect has been given to these decisions by substituting in r 3 (1) the words

"before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed for the words "on or before the day fixed which occurred in old r 3 (1) (l).

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 (1) (o).

Sub mortgage—A sub mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale to the same extent as the mortgagee himself (m). Where the sub mortgagee is a party to the suit, the preliminary decree must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee and of what is due to the sub mortgagee. As to the form of decree in a suit by a sub mortgagee against the mortgagee and mortgagor see Appendix D form No 11. As to the form of decree in a suit for redemption by the mortgagor against the mortgagee and sub mortgagee see the undermentioned case (n). See notes to r 1 above. Sub mortgagee.

Subsequent incumbrancers—For forms of decree in cases where there are subsequent incumbrancers see Appendix D forms Nos 9, 10 and also the undermentioned case (o).

Mortgage of chattels and of intangible property—A mortgagee of chattels is entitled to sue for a decree for sale (p). So also a mortgagee of intangible property, such as pilas or turns of worship in a temple (q).

3. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 87.] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed, the defendant makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 2, the Court shall on application made by the defendant in this behalf, pass a final decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the defendant the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree declaring that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

(3) On the passing of a final decree under sub-rule (2), all liabilities to which the defendant is subject in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit shall be deemed to have been discharged

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 3, by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act 1929, which came into operation on 1st April 1930. The old rule was in operation till the above date. It was as follows —

3 (1) Where, on or before the day fixed, the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10, the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up,

and, if so required—

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43 (1) (o).

Sub mortgage—A sub mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale to the same extent as the mortgagee himself (m). Where the sub-mortgagee is a party to the suit, the preliminary decree must direct an account to be taken of what is due to the mortgagee and of what is due to the sub mortgagee. As to the form of decree in a suit by a sub mortgagee against the mortgagee and mortgagor see Appendix D form No 11. 3. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 87.] (1) Where before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed, the defendant makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 2, the Court shall on application made by the defendant in this behalf, pass a final decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,
and, if necessary —

(b) ordering him to re transfer at the cost of the defendant the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,
and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree declaring that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

(3) On the passing of a final decree under sub-rule (2), all liabilities to which the defendant is subject in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit shall be deemed to have been discharged

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 3, by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on 1st April 1930 The old rule was in operation till the above date It was as follows —

3 (1) Where on or before the day fixed, the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10, the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up,
and, if so required—

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,
and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

O. 34, r. 3 (2) Where such payment is not so made, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff, pass a decree that the defendant and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the defendant to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any)

Power to enlarge time as it thinks fit, from time to time postpone the day fixed for such payments

Discharge of debt (3) On the passing of a decree under sub rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged

Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s 87—This rule corresponds to s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, except in two particulars, viz, (1) sub r (1) provides for the passing of a decree where payment is made, s 87 of the Transfer of Property Act contained only the words "the defendants shall (if necessary) be put into possession of the mortgaged property" (2) Sub r (2) again provides for the passing of a decree where no payment is made Under s 87 the Court had merely to pass an order See as to this distinction, notes to r 5 below, "Final decree for sale, Limitation"

The old rule and the new rule —

(1) The new rule makes it clear that the decree to be passed under it is a final decree

(2) The words "before a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed" in new sub rule (1) have been substituted for the words "on or before the day fixed" which occurred in old sub rule (3)

(3) The defendant mortgagor has to apply to the Court for a decree after paying the amount into Court

(4) The proviso to old sub rule (2) regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment has been transferred to new rule 2

(5) In sub rule (3) it is made clear that on the passing of the final decree for foreclosure not only the mortgage debt is extinguished, but all liabilities of the defendant in respect of the mortgage and on account of the suit are discharged

Final decree for foreclosure—For form, see Appendix D, new form No 4 [old form No 10] Where the mortgagor fails to pay the amount due by him on the date fixed by the preliminary decree, the mortgagee may apply under sub r (2) for a final decree declaring that the mortgagor is debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property No formal notice of such application is necessary to a mortgagor who is sui juris, but notice is necessary where the mortgagor is a minor, absence of notice, however, will not invalidate the final decree unless prejudice is caused to the minor (r) until a final decree is passed, the mortgagor may apply under rule (2) for an extension of the time for payment He may, even without an extension, at any time before the final decree is passed, pay the money into Court and so avert foreclosure (a) See note to r 2 above "Power to extend time in foreclosure suits"

Only one final decree for foreclosure—The law contemplates the passing of only one final decree and that a final decree can be made only after the Appellate Court has decided the appeal from the preliminary decree Thus if A sues B for foreclosure of a mortgage comprising two properties, and a preliminary decree for foreclosure is passed as regards one of the properties, but the suit is dismissed as regards the other, and A appeals from that part of the decree by which his suit was dismissed, and pending the appeal applies for and obtains a final decree for foreclosure in respect of the property ordered to be foreclosed, he cannot afterwards, if he succeeds in the appeal, obtain another final decree for foreclosure of the other property (t). See note to r. 5 below, "Only one final decree in a suit for sale."

Payment into Court.—The payment into Court may be made by the mortgagor at any time before the final decree for foreclosure has been passed (u). See notes to r 2 above. 'Power to extend time in foreclosure suits.'

Effect of appeal on time for payment.—A preliminary decree is passed in a foreclosure suit fixing a period of six months from the date of the decree for payment by the mortgagor of the amount due. The mortgagor prefers an appeal from the decree but the decree is confirmed in appeal. The decree of the appellate Court is silent as to the time allowed for redemption. This does not operate as an extension of the time for payment so as to enable the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage within six months from the date of the appellate decree. The mortgagee is entitled to a final decree for foreclosure after the expiration of six months from the date of the original decree, though six months may not have expired from the date of the appellate decree. The appellate decree, simply confirming the original decree, cannot be read as giving the mortgagor six months from the date of the decree on appeal (t). Nor does the summary dismissal of an appeal extend the time for payment (w). This is in accordance with the general principle that where time is prescribed by the decree of the lower Court for the performance of a condition precedent, and the appellate Court simply confirms the decree of the lower Court or summarily dismisses the appeal, it cannot be regarded as enlarging the time fixed by the original decree for the performance of the condition (x). The result is the same where the appeal is withdrawn and no decree is passed in appeal. The withdrawal does not give the mortgagor a fresh period for redemption (y). To avoid the difficulty arising in such cases, the mortgagor should take care to have a fresh date fixed for payment by the appellate Court, offering at the same time to pay interest up to that date (z), or he should apply under r. 2 (2) for an extension of the time for payment. See note under s. 34, "Time for payment fixed by decree."

Sub rule 3 Discharge of debt, etc., on foreclosure—Old sub rule (3) provided that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged. The present sub rule (3) provides that on the passing of a final decree for foreclosure, all liabilities to which the defendant is subject in respect of the mortgage or on account of the suit shall be deemed to have been discharged. The liabilities in respect of the mortgage refer not only to the mortgage debt but also to the “other costs, charges and expenses” referred to in r 2 (1) (a) (ii). The liabilities on account of the suit include costs of the suit awarded against the mortgagor.

Limitation for application for a final decree—The period of limitation for an application for a final decree in a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption is 10 years under art 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908. As to limitation for execution of a final decree for foreclosure, sale or redemption, see note below, "Limitation for execution of final decree."

Where no payment is made by the mortgagor of the amount due on or before the day fixed, the mortgagee may apply for a final decree. The procedure prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act in suit for foreclosure, redemption and sale was in the first place to pass a "decree," and then an "order absolute." This phraseology gave rise to conflicting decisions. In some cases it was held that an application for an order absolute for sale under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was an application to execute the decree, and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the decree as provided by art. 179 of the Limitation Act of 1877 [Limitation Act, 1908, art. 182]. In other cases it was held that such an application was one to obtain a further decree, that the only article of the Limitation Act that could possibly apply to it was the general article 178 [now art. 181] but that even that article could not apply as it applied only to applications under the Code of Civil Procedure, and that there being no other article, there was no period of limitation at all for an application for an order absolute under the Transfer of Property Act. [It is interesting to note that the former view was taken by the Privy Council in cases under the Transfer of Property Act decided in 1914 (a)]. To put an end to this conflict of decisions it is now provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree is one to obtain a final decree [see r. 3 (2), r. 5 (3), r. 8 (1)] so as to bring it within the purview of art. 181 of the Limitation Act of 1908 [old art. 178] and not one to execute the decree (b). Further, the provisions relating to mortgage suits have been transferred from the Transfer of Property Act to the Civil Procedure Code, so that it is no longer possible to contend that these applications are not under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (c). The result is that an application for a final decree for foreclosure, sale, or redemption is now governed by the residuary article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908, and the period of limitation is three years from the date on which the right to apply accrues (d). Where an appeal is preferred from the preliminary decree the right to make such an application accrues not on the expiry of the time limited by the preliminary decree but on the date of the decree of the Court of appeal (e), and even when the appeal was withdrawn and an order was made granting leave to withdraw and dismissing the appeal it was held that the order of the appeal Court was a decree and gave a new starting point for limitation (e1). Thus rule applies although the decree of the Appellate Court has been made three years after the time fixed for redemption by the decree of the trial Judge (f). Where a decree was passed before the new Code came into force, and the application for a final decree was made after the new Code came into force, it was held that "the right to apply" never having accrued to the decree holder until the new Code conferred it upon him, the period of limitation under art. 181 did not begin to run until the new Code came into force that is, until 1st January 1909 (g). If the preliminary decree directs the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage but fixes no period for such payment, the starting point for limitation for an application for a final decree is at the expiry of six months from the preliminary decree (h) In a case where the Court erroneously expressed an opinion that a puisne mortgagee could not sell the property without paying off a prior mortgagee it was held that limitation was suspended for the time spent in ascertaining the balance due to him (i) An omission to draw up a final decree has been treated as an irregularity and in a case where the Court erroneously made an order absolute instead of a final decree for sale execution was allowed to proceed (j)

Application for execution of final decree—Limitation for an application for execution of a final decree is under art 182 of the Limitation Act 1908 (k)

4. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 88.] (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a preliminary decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) (1) of sub-rule (1) of rule 2 and further directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what has been found or declared under or by the preliminary decree due to the plaintiff, together with such amount as may have been adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest and the balance, if any, be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree for sale is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

(3) In a suit for foreclosure in the case of an anomalous mortgage, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court may, at the instance of any party to the suit or of any other person interested in the mortgage security or the right of redemption, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit, including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum fixed by the Court to meet the expenses of the sale and to secure the performance of the terms

(4) Where, in a suit for sale or a suit for foreclosure in which sale is ordered, subsequent mortgagees or persons deriving title from, or subrogated to the rights of, any such mortgagees are joined as parties, the preliminary decree referred to in sub-rule (1) shall provide for the adjudication of the respective rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No 9, Form No 10 or Form No. 11, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 4 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule was as follows —

4 (1) In a suit for sale, if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a decree to the effect mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of rule 2 and also directing that, in default of the defendant paying as therein mentioned, the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is declared due to the plaintiff as aforesaid, together with subsequent interest and subsequent costs, and that the balance (if any) be paid to the defendant or other persons entitled to receive the same

(2) In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds and the mortgage is not a mortgage by conditional sale, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or of any person interested either in the mortgage money or in the right of redemption, pass a like decree (in lieu of a decree for foreclosure) on such terms as it thinks fit including the deposit in Court of a reasonable sum, fixed by the Court, to meet the expenses of sale and to secure the performance of the terms

Transfer of Property Act, s 68.—This rule corresponds with sec 68 of the Transfer of Property Act The reference to "subsequent interest and subsequent costs" is new

The old rule and the new rule —(1) The new rule expressly says that the decree to be passed under it is to be a preliminary decree

(2) The new rule says that on default in payment by the mortgagor the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

(3) The new rule makes it clear that the mortgagee has to pay not only subsequent interest and subsequent costs as under the old rule, but also subsequent costs, charges and expenses See r 10 below

(4) Sub rule (2) of the new rule empowers the Court to extend the time for payment. There was no such provision in the old rules

(5) Sub rule (4) of the new rule provides for decrees in suits to which subsequent mortgagees are parties

Preliminary decree for sale.—A suit for sale of mortgaged property can only be brought where the mortgage is an English mortgage or a simple mortgage or a mortgage by deposit of title deeds or where the property is subject to a charge within the meaning of sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act (see r 15 below) The preliminary decree to be passed in a suit for sale corresponds to the preliminary decree in a suit for foreclosure in all respects except that instead of a direction providing for foreclosure, the decree is to contain a direction providing for sale of the mortgaged property. The notes therefore on r 2 above as to the taking of accounts and the determination of principal interest and costs apply equally to this rule.

Sub rule (1). Subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest—See rr 10 and 11 below.

Sub rule (2). Power to extend time in suit for sale—This sub rule is new. It empowers the Court in a suit for sale to extend the time fixed for payment of the amount due by the mortgagor on good cause shown. There was no such provision in the old rule enabling the Court to extend the time for payment in a suit for sale. It was, therefore, held that if the mortgagor failed to pay on or before the day fixed, the Court has no power to extend the time for payment and that it was bound to pass a final decree for sale (l). At the same time it was held that even if time was not extended the mortgagee was entitled under O 21, r 69, to stop the sale by payment of the amount due and costs (m), and further, if the property was sold, to have the sale set aside on making the deposit as provided by O 21, r 89 (n). In the cases cited above the Court held that the provisions of the Code relating to execution of decrees applied to sales under mortgage decrees. There were, however, cases in which it was held that the sections of the Code relating to execution did not apply to sales under mortgage decrees (o). But the latter view is no longer tenable, and it was to negative that view that the sections of the Transfer of Property Act relating to decrees in mortgage suits were transferred to the Code. As to O 21, r 83 it is expressly provided that nothing contained therein applies to a sale in execution of a mortgage decree (p). See notes to r 5 below, 'Mortgagor's rights before confirmation of sale.'

Form of decree—As to the form of a preliminary decree for sale, see Appendix D, Form No 5 [old Form No 4]. On referring to the form it will be observed that it does not contain any declaration of personal liability of the defendant for principal, interest or costs. Such a declaration in fact ought not to be included in the decree for sale. If the sale proceeds are not sufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee, the mortgagee may apply for a personal decree against the mortgagor under r 6 below (q). See Appendix D, Form No 8 [old Form No 11].

Subsequent incumbrancers—For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by the first mortgagee (r), see Appendix D, Form No 9 [old Form No 7]. For the contents of a decree for sale in a suit by a second mortgagee, see Appendix D, Form No 10 [old Form No 8].

Rights of second mortgagee in a suit for sale by first mortgagee—If mortgages his property first to A, and then to B. A sues M for a sale of the mortgaged property making B a party defendant. In such a suit the only right of B, the second mortgagee, is to redeem A's mortgage or to receive his mortgage money out of the surplus sale proceeds after satisfaction of A's mortgage. He is entitled to treat the suit brought by A, the first mortgagee, as one for his benefit. It follows, therefore, that B cannot ask for a sale of the property if A's claim is satisfied by M before sale. Also if a decree for sale is passed in A's suit, B cannot ask for a decree for sale of another property of M included in his mortgage. In either case, B must bring a separate suit for sale on his mortgage (s)

Award and consent decree—An arbitrator is not bound by this rule. A decree in terms of an award may order the sale of the property mortgaged although no preliminary decree under this rule or final decree under rule 5 has been passed (t). So also if the decree is a consent decree (u). In Kashi Chandra v Priyanath (v) Mookerjee, J, directed that before execution an order absolute should be obtained under O 34 r 5 but the consent decree in that case was in the form of a preliminary decree.

Sub rule (3) Power to decree sale in a foreclosure suit—Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act, 1929, foreclosure is allowed in the case only of anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf and in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale. The remedy by way of foreclosure is no longer open in the case of an English mortgage. The words in the case of an anomalous mortgage have accordingly been added after the words in a suit for foreclosure in new sub rule (3) which corresponds to old r 4(2). In the case of a mortgage by conditional sale the only remedy open to the mortgagee is foreclosure and there is no scope for an alternative decree for sale.

Appeal from order refusing to extend time—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43, r (1) (o). The provision for extension of time contained in sub rule (2) of this rule is new and so is the provision for an appeal from an order refusing to extend the time under sub rule (2). See O 43, r (1) (o) and notes, clause (o).

5. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 89.] (1) Where, on or before the day fixed or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree in suit for a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the defendant makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub rule (1) of rule 4, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

(2) Where the mortgaged property or part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub-rule (1) of this rule, unless the defendant, in addition to the amount mentioned in sub rule (1), deposits in Court for payment to the purchaser a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by the purchaser

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent thereof

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree directing that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with in the manner provided in sub rule (1) of rule 4

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 5 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929 which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows —

5 (1) Where on or before the day fixed the defendant pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10 the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up

and if so required —

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree

and also if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the defendant in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made the Court shall on application made in that behalf by the plaintiff pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale be dealt with as is mentioned in rule 4

Transfer of Property Act 1882, s 89—This rule corresponds with sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act except in the following particulars —

- 1 The provision contained in sub r (1) for the passing of a decree in the case where payment is made in accordance with the terms of the preliminary decree is new
- 2 By sub rule (2) it is provided that the application which follows a preliminary decree for sale is not for an order for sale as it was in sec 89 of the Transfer of Property Act but for a decree for sale. See notes below. Final decree for sale. Limitation
- 3 The words to the plaintiff or which occurred in sec 89 after the word pays (see l 2 of this rule) have been omitted. See notes below. Payment into Court

Award and consent decree.—An arbitrator is not bound by this rule. A decree in terms of an award may order the sale of the property mortgaged although no preliminary decree under this rule or final decree under rule 5 has been passed (f). So also if the decree is a consent decree (u). In *Kashi Chandra v. Sub rule (3): Power to decree sale in a foreclosure suit.—Under the Transfer of Property Amending Act, 1929, foreclosure is allowed in the case only of anomalous mortgage where there is an express stipulation in that behalf and in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale. The remedy by way of foreclosure is no longer open in the case of an English mortgage. The words "in the case of an anomalous mortgage" have accordingly been added after the words "in a suit for foreclosure" in new sub rule (3) which corresponds to old r 4 (2). In the case of a mortgage by conditional sale, the only remedy open to the mortgagee is foreclosure, and there is no scope for an alternative decree for sale.

Appeal from order refusing to extend time.—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43, r (1) (o). The provision for extension of time contained in sub rule (2) of this rule is new and so is the provision for an appeal from an order refusing to extend the time under sub rule (2). See O 43, r. (1) (o), and notes, "clause (o)".

5. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 89.] (1) Where, on or before the day fixed or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree in suit for sale of this rule, the defendant makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 4, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the plaintiff to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

O. 34, r. 5

The old rule and the new rule —

- (1) The words "or at any time before the confirmation of a sale made in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule" in sub rule (1) are new
- (2) If the mortgagor pays the amount due into Court he has to apply for a final decree for a re transfer of the mortgaged property to him, and if a final decree has already been passed and the amount is deposited before confirmation of sale, for an order for a re transfer
- (3) Sub rule (2) is new There was no such provision in the old rule
- (4) Sub rule (3) makes it clear that if the mortgagor fails to pay the amount into Court the mortgagee has to apply for a final decree for sale

Consent decree providing for payment in instalments—Where in a suit for sale on a mortgage the consent decree provides for payment of the mortgage money in instalments, and does not provide for payment on a fixed date within six months from the date of declaring the amount due as provided by r. 4, r. 4 has no application, and consequently it is not necessary for the mortgagee to apply for a final decree in terms of the present rule (u)

No power to go behind preliminary decree—On an application of the mortgagee for a final decree the Court has no power to go behind the preliminary decree Its powers are limited to those mentioned in this rule (x)

Preliminary decree under appeal—In Gajadhar v. Kishen (y) Banerji J., said 'It seems to me that this rule, i.e. the rule regulating applications for final decrees in mortgage actions— contemplates the passing of only one final decree in a suit for sale upon a mortgage. The essential condition to the making of a final decree is the existence of a preliminary decree which has become conclusive between the parties. When an appeal has been preferred, it is the decree of the Appellate Court which is the final decree in the cause.' This statement of the law was approved by the Judicial Committee in Jowad Hussain v. Gendan Singh (z). But these cases turned upon a point of limitation and the preliminary decree having been superseded by the decree of the Appellate Court, limitation for an application for a final decree ran from the date of the appellate decree. There could be only one final decree because the preliminary decree which had been superseded could not be made final. It does not follow that during the pendency of the appeal the preliminary decree is a nullity (a). The effect of the appeal from the preliminary decree is to imperil the final decree passed while the appeal was pending (b) for if the preliminary decree were reversed on appeal, the final decree would fall with it. The Court which passed the preliminary decree has power to pass a final decree but should under rule 4 (2) extend time until the disposal of the appeal (b1).

Injunction restraining mortgagor from receiving income of mortgaged property—It has been held in Allahabad that it is not competent to the Court after a final decree for sale has been passed to restrain the mortgagor by an injunction from receiving the income of the mortgaged property even if there be a good ground for it The reason given is that all that the decree holder is entitled to is to have the property sold, and nothing more (n)

Appeal—Under the present Code, a party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed under r 4 of this Order may appeal from it, if he does not appeal from it, he is precluded from disputing its correctness in an appeal which may be preferred from the final decree passed under this rule [s 97] "Even under the old Code the correctness of the decree under sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act [now O 34, r 4] could not be questioned in an application for an order absolute under sec 89 [now O 34, r 5] or in an appeal, from an order absolute made on such an application" (o)

An adjudication dismissing an application under this rule for a final decree for sale is not an order under sec 47, but a decree and is appealable as such under sec 96 (p) and is therefore not open to revision (q)

Costs not recoverable from mortgagor personally—In a mortgage decree for sale, costs are part of the amount due upon the mortgage and are recoverable from the mortgaged property, and not personally from the mortgagor unless the decree itself so directs (t)

legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 6 by Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows —

6 Where the net proceeds of any such sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff if the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold, the Court may pass a decree for such amount

The old rule and the new rule—The words 'any sale held under the last preceding rule' in the new rule have been substituted for the words 'any such sale'. It is thus made clear that this rule applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 5 while rule 8 A applies to a sale held in execution of a decree passed under rule 8

Personal Decree for balance against mortgagor—Where after the sale of the mortgaged property, there is still a balance due to the mortgagee and that amount is legally recoverable from the mortgagor, the mortgagee may apply for and obtain a decree under this rule against the mortgagor personally which he may execute against the person of the mortgagor or by attachment and sale of his other properties (u). A decree under this rule is a decree to be passed in the original suit and not in a fresh suit (v). The object of the rule is to obviate the necessity of a fresh suit to recover the balance (w). Such a suit, in fact, could not be brought except where the mortgagee had reserved his right to do so with the leave of the Court under O 2 r 2 (x). A personal decree under this rule for the balance should not be passed until after the mortgaged property had been sold and the proceeds found insufficient to pay the mortgage money in other words the Court should not while passing a decree for sale under r 5 pass a personal decree for the balance and a personal decree can only be passed when the sale proceeds are found to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim (y). In a recent case the Judicial Committee held that a decree for sale under sec 88 of the Transfer of Property Act 1882 can validly provide that if the proceeds of sale are not sufficient to pay the mortgage debt, the mortgagor should pay the balance personally though the personal decree could not be executed until after the property was sold and the nett sale proceeds were found to be insufficient to satisfy the debt (z). The form of the decree to be passed under this rule [Appendix D, Form No 11] makes it clear that a personal decree cannot be passed until after the sale is held and the balance ascertained. If it is passed before sale and the mortgagor does not object he is estopped from doing so at a later stage (a). When the decree only gives the mortgagee a remedy against the mortgaged property the personal remedy having become time barred the mortgagee can only recover against the mortgaged property (b). See App A Form No 43 and App D Form No 4

A personal decree cannot be passed under this rule unless all the properties directed to be sold under rr 4 and 5 have been sold. This is because the remedy of the mortgagee in the first instance is against the properties mortgaged and such properties should in the first instance be exhausted before a personal liability can be imposed upon the mortgagor. But this does not mean that if a portion of the properties is destroyed or

O. 34, r. 6 has ceased to be available for sale through no fault of the mortgagee, there can be no decree for personal liability against the mortgagor (c) It has similarly been held that the omission to include in the plaint a portion of the mortgaged property does not debar the mortgagee from obtaining a personal decree under this rule provided the omission was not intended to prejudice, and has not prejudiced the mortgagor (d) In a case of a mortgage by the father of a joint Hindu family, not being one for necessity, the High Court of Madras held that the mortgagee was entitled to a conditional decree under this rule against the father personally, and against the joint family property of himself and his undivided sons, for the recovery of the balance in case the sale proceeds of the father's share of the mortgaged property were insufficient (e) Where a sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage by a Hindu lady was set aside at the instance of her grandson who was the real owner, the Allahabad High Court passed a personal decree against her under this rule saying that the mortgagee having been compelled to refund the purchase money to the purchaser the net proceeds of the sale were nil and therefore insufficient to pay the amount due (f) The absence of any reservation in the preliminary decree of liberty to the decree holder to apply for a personal decree does not disable him from doing so later (g)

Where net proceeds of any such sale held under r 5 are found insufficient—A personal decree under this rule can only follow the mortgage decree under which the sale is held Therefore, if a sale has taken place under a decree on a prior mortgage, that would not entitle a subsequent mortgagee, who has also obtained a decree for sale, to apply for and obtain a decree under this rule The reason is that the sale was not held under his decree (h) Similarly, where a person holding two mortgages over the same property brings two suits on those mortgages and obtains two decrees, and the mortgaged property is sold under one of those decrees, the fact that the sale proceeds, after discharging that decree, are not sufficient to pay the amount due under the other decree, would not entitle him to apply for and obtain a personal decree under this rule for the balance due under the other decree The reason is that the property was sold, not under that decree, but under the first decree (i)

"Amount due"—A personal decree under this rule can only be passed where the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee. The expression "amount due" includes costs (j) [see r 4 (1)] It also includes, when a paise mortgage is plaintiff, the amount paid by him in satisfaction of prior mortgages (k)

Personal obligation to pay a question of construction—In India a mortgage does not necessarily import a personal obligation to repay Prima facie this obligation is present in simple mortgages, and of course, in English mortgages Prima facie it is not present in mortgages by conditional sale, and in usufructuary mortgages In each case the question is one of construction of the mortgage instrument, and the personal liability to repay may become barred before the right of recourse to the mortgaged property is barred (l)

"Legally recoverable"—No decree can be passed for the balance under this rule unless the balance is legally recoverable. The balance is not legally recoverable if the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is barred by limitation at the date of the suit for sale. It would be barred in the case of an unregistered instrument after the expiration of three years from the date on which it is repayable and in the case of a registered instrument after the expiration of six years from that date (m) unless the right is kept alive by acknowledgment as provided by s. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1908, or by payment of interest or part payment of principal as provided by s. 20 of that Act. If the right to recover the mortgage debt from the mortgagor personally is not barred at the date of the suit for sale, the mortgagee is entitled if there is a deficiency, to a personal decree for the balance, though the application under this rule may be made after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit for a personal decree (n). The mortgagee, however, is not entitled to wait indefinitely for a personal decree after the deficiency has been ascertained. He must apply for a personal decree within three years from the date when the deficiency is ascertained as provided by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act, otherwise the application will be time barred (o). Time begins to run from the date of the order under O. 21, r. 92, confirming the sale (p), and this is so even if the decree holder's costs have not been taxed (q).

"Legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the Property sold"—These words mean, by way of illustration, that the balance must be a balance which the mortgagee is not precluded by the terms of the mortgage from realizing otherwise than out of the property sold (r).

Personal liability not enforceable against purchaser from mortgagor—The transferee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged property who has agreed with the mortgagor to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to him is not a person from whom the balance is legally recoverable within the meaning of this rule, there being no contract between him and the mortgagee. Hence no personal decree can be passed against the transferee under this rule at the instance of the mortgagee (s). Nor can, personal decree be made against a puisne mortgagee (t).

Personal liability enforceable against surety—The personal liability of the surety for the mortgagor may be enforced by a decree under this rule (u).

rr. 6, 7

Costs against puisne mortgagee—A prior mortgagee is not entitled to a decree under this rule against a puisne mortgagee for the amount of his costs. The present rule does not apply to such a case (i).

Personal decree against non mortgagor for costs—A decree for sale was passed against a mortgagor and his sons, who though they had not joined in the mortgage were bound by it. On the sale proceeds proving insufficient the Court made a personal decree for costs against the sons (u). The Court distinguished two Allahabad cases (w) in which it was held that a personal decree could not be passed under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act against a puisne mortgagee on the ground that the rule is wider, the words 'the amount due to the plaintiff' being substituted for the words 'the amount for the time being due on the mortgage'.

Consent decree—A consent decree or a decree on an award may provide for personal recovery from the mortgagor by execution of the decree if the sale proceeds are insufficient, and in that case no further decree under this rule is necessary (x). But the fact that the consent decree is silent as to the personal remedy is no good reason for supposing that the decree holder has given up his right to recover the money from the judgment debtor if the security is insufficient. O. 34 r. 6, is a provision giving direction to the Court as to the time and manner in which the personal decree is to be given. The strict form of order may be departed from in a consent decree. If the consent decree does not deprive the mortgagee of the benefit of the personal covenant, it is open to the High Court on a motion in a consent decree to give a personal judgment against the mortgagor (y).

Appeal—An appeal from a decree under this rule lies to the District Judge and not to the High Court notwithstanding that the decree be for a sum exceeding Rs. 5,000 if the original mortgage suit was valued at less than Rs. 5,000 (z). See notes to sec. 96 "Forum of appeal".

- (i) that, if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so found or declared due on or before such date as the Court may fix within six months from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the account taken under clause (a), or from the date on which such amount is declared in Court under clause (b), as the case may be, and thereafter pays such amount as may be adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges and expenses as provided in rule 10, together with subsequent interest on such sums respectively as provided in rule 11, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff, or to such person as the plaintiff appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the plaintiff at his cost free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, where the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims and shall also, if necessary put the plaintiff in possession of the property, and
- (ii) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the plaintiff fails to pay within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges expenses and interest, the defendant shall be entitled to apply for a final decree—
 - (a) in the case of a mortgage other than a usufructuary mortgage, a mortgage by conditional sale, or an anomalous mortgage the terms of which provide for foreclosure only and not for sale, that the mortgaged property be sold or
 - (b) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or such an anomalous mortgage as aforesaid, that the plaintiff be debarred from all right to redeem the property

- 34, r. 7 (2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale, as the case may be, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub-rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 7 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930 The old rule was as follows —

- 7 In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—
- (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or
 - (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and directing—
 - (c) that, if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall if so required, retransfer the property to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, where the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall, if necessary put the plaintiff in possession of the property, but
 - (d) that, if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) be debarred from all right to redeem or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) that the mortgaged property be sold

1 The general changes in this rule are on the lines of those in new rules 2 and 4 above See note to r 2 and to r 4, "The old rule and the new rule"

2 In sub rule (1) (c) (ii) the cases in which a decree for sale and the cases in which a decree for foreclosure can be passed have been specifically mentioned See Transfer of Property Act, sec 67

3 Sub rule (2) empowers the Court to extend the time for payment until a final decree for foreclosure or sale has been passed.

Preliminary decree for redemption—This rule, excepting sub rule (1) (c) (ii), corresponds with r 2 above which relates to a preliminary decree for foreclosure The notes on that rule apply mutatis mutandis to this rule For the form of a preliminary decree for redemption, see Appendix D, form no 5

"Other costs, charges and expenses"—See notes to r 2 above under the same head

"Subsequent costs, charges and expenses"—See r 10 below

"Subsequent interest"—See r 11 below

Power to extend time in suit for redemption—The proviso to old r 8 was in these terms 'provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time, postpone the day fixed for payment'. Under the present rule the Court has the power to extend the time at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale. It is clear that the new sub rule 7 (2) applies in every case where a decree for redemption has been passed, whatever may be the nature of the mortgage (a). When in a partition suit an alienation of part of the property was held binding for a certain amount only and the alienee was ordered to give possession on payment being made of that amount in a certain time, this was held to be in effect a decree for redemption and subject to the power of enlargement of time (b). But this decision is of doubtful authority. It has been dissented from by the Allahabad High Court (b1), but followed in a later Madras decision (b2). See notes to r (2) above, 'Power to extend time in foreclosure suit'. The application for extension of time should be made to the Court of the first instance even if the decree for redemption was passed by the appellate Court (c).

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43, r 1 (o).

8. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 93.] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

(2) Where the mortgaged property or a part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub-rule (1) of this rule, unless the plaintiff, in addition to the amount

- O. 34, r. 7 (2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale, as the case may be, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub-rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest.

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 7 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows—

- 7 In a suit for redemption, if the plaintiff succeeds, the Court shall pass a decree—
- (a) ordering that an account be taken of what will be due to the defendant for principal and interest on the mortgage, and for his costs of the suit (if any) awarded to him on the day next hereinafter referred to, or
 - (b) declaring the amount so due at the date of such decree, and directing—
 - (c) that, if the plaintiff pays into Court the amount so due on a day within six months from the date of declaring in Court the amount so due, to be fixed by the Court, the defendant shall deliver up to the plaintiff, or to such person as he appoints, all documents in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, retransfer the property to the plaintiff free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the defendant or any person claiming under him, or, where the defendant claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall, if necessary put the plaintiff in possession of the property, but
 - (d) that, if such payment is not made on or before the day to be fixed by the Court, the plaintiff shall (unless the mortgage is simple or usufructuary) be debarred from all right to redeem or (unless the mortgage is by conditional sale) that the mortgaged property be sold

1 The general changes in this rule are on the lines of those in new rules 2 and 4 above. See note to r 2 and to r 4, "The old rule and the new rule"

2 In sub rule (1) (c) (u) the cases in which a decree for sale and the cases in which a decree for foreclosure can be passed have been specifically mentioned. See Transfer of Property Act, sec 67

3 Sub rule (2) empowers the Court to extend the time for payment until a final decree for foreclosure or sale has been passed.

Preliminary decree for redemption—This rule, excepting sub rule (1) (c) (u) corresponds with r 2 above which relates to a preliminary decree for foreclosure. The notes on that rule apply mutatis mutandis to this rule. For the form of a preliminary decree for redemption, see Appendix D, form no 5

"Subsequent costs, charges and expenses."—See r 10 below

"Subsequent interest"—See r 11 below

Power to extend time in suit for redemption—The proviso to old r 8 was in these terms “provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time postpone the day fixed for payment Under the present rule the Court has the power to extend the time at any time before the passing of a final decree for foreclosure or sale It is clear that the new sub rule 7 (2) applies in every case where a decree for redemption has been passed, whatever may be the nature of the mortgage (a) When in a partition suit an alienation of part of the property was held binding for a certain amount only and the alienee was ordered to give possession on payment being made of that amount in a certain time, this was held to be in effect a decree for redemption and subject to the power of enlargement of time (b) But this decision is of doubtful authority It has been disented from by the Allahabad High Court (b1), but followed in a later Madras decision (b2) See notes to r (2) above, “Power to extend time in foreclosure suit” The application for extension of time should be made to the Court of the first instance even if the decree for redemption was passed by the appellate Court (c)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order refusing to extend the time for payment under O 43, r 1 (o)

8. [New Act 4 of 1882, s. 93.] (1) Where, before a final decree debarring the plaintiff from all right to redeem the mortgaged property has been passed or before the confirmation of a sale held in pursuance of a final decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the plaintiff makes payment into Court of all amounts due from him under sub-rule (1) of rule 7, the Court shall, on application made by the plaintiff in this behalf, pass a final decree or, if such decree has been passed, an order—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents referred to in the preliminary decree,

and, if necessary,—

(b) ordering him to re-transfer at the cost of the plaintiff the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property.

(2) Where the mortgaged property or a part thereof has been sold in pursuance of a decree passed under sub-rule (3) of this rule, the Court shall not pass an order under sub-rule (1) of this rule, unless the plaintiff, in addition to the amount

Where such deposit has been made, the purchaser shall be entitled to an order for repayment of the amount of the purchase money paid into Court by him, together with a sum equal to five per cent. thereof.

(3) Where payment in accordance with sub rule (1) has not been made, the Court shall, on application made by the defendant in this behalf,—

(a) in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale or of such an anomalous mortgage as is hereinafter referred to in rule 7, pass a final decree declaring that the plaintiff and all persons claiming under him are debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and, also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the mortgaged property, or

(b) in the case of any other mortgage, not being a usufructuary mortgage, pass a final decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold, and the proceeds of the sale (after deduction therefrom of the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and the balance, if any, be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 8 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows—

8 (1) Where, on or before the day fixed, the plaintiff pays into Court the amount declared due as aforesaid, together with such subsequent costs as are mentioned in rule 10, the Court shall pass a decree—

(a) ordering the defendant to deliver up the documents which under the terms of the preliminary decree he is bound to deliver up,

and, if so required,—

(b) ordering him to re transfer the mortgaged property as directed in the said decree,

and, also, if necessary,—

(c) ordering him to put the plaintiff in possession of the property

(2) Where such payment is not so made, and the mortgage is a simple usufructuary, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the plaintiff and all persons claiming through or under him be debarred from all right to redeem the mortgaged property and also, if necessary, ordering the plaintiff to put the defendant in possession of the property.

(3) On the passing of a decree under sub-rule (2) the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged.

(4) Where such payment is not so made, and the mortgage is not by conditional sale, the Court shall, on application made in that behalf by the defendant, pass a decree that the mortgaged property or a sufficient part thereof be sold and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of what is found due to the defendant, and that the balance (if any) be paid to the plaintiff or other persons entitled to receive the same.

Provided that the Court may, upon good cause shown and upon such terms (if any) as it thinks fit from time to time, postpone the day fixed for payment.

The old rule and the new rule—The changes in this rule have been made on the lines of those in rules 3 and 5 above. See notes to rr. 3 and 5, "The old rule and the new rule".

The provision regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment which appeared as a proviso to old rule 8 (4) has been transferred to new rule 7.

Sub-rule (1) decree for mortgagor—Sub-rule (1) of this rule corresponds with sub-rule (1) of rules 3 and 5. See notes to rules 3 and 5. Where the amount declared due in a decree for redemption is paid by the mortgagor into Court, the mortgagor does not lose his right to a decree under sub-rule (1) because he has attached and withdrawn from Court a portion of the sum so paid in execution of that portion of the decree which awarded him costs against the mortgagee (d). If time for payment has been extended, payment within the time so extended gives the mortgagor a right to a decree (e). The mortgagee is not entitled under O. 21, r. 1 (c), to notice of payment into Court (f). The mortgage money must be paid into Court and a payment or adjustment out of Court cannot be pleaded against the passing of a final decree (g).

Sub-rule (2)* decree for foreclosure—The mere fact that the preliminary decree for redemption does not contain a direction for foreclosure or sale in default of payment on the day fixed does not disentitle the mortgagee to a decree for foreclosure or sale as the case may be. The omission of the Court to draw up the proper decree under r. 7 does not deprive the mortgagee of the relief provided by this rule (h). The decree for foreclosure or sale under this rule should be passed by the Court which passed the preliminary decree for redemption, notwithstanding that the latter decree has been varied by the appellate Court (i).

The provision regarding the power of the Court to extend the time for payment which appeared as a proviso to old rule 8 (4) has been transferred to new rule 7.

Sub rule (1): decree for mortgagor.—Sub rule (1) of this rule corresponds with sub rule (1) of rules 3 and 5. See notes to rules 3 and 5. Where the amount declared due in a decree for redemption is paid by the mortgagor into Court, the mortgagor does not lose his right to a decree under sub rule (1), because he has attached and withdrawn from Court a portion of the sum so paid in execution of that portion of the decree which awarded him costs against the mortgagee (d). him, may, if the balance is legally recoverable from the plaintiff otherwise than out of the property sold, pass a decree for such balance.

Personal decree in suit for redemption—This rule is new. It has been added by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929. Rule 6 provides for a personal decree against the mortgagor in a suit for sale brought by the mortgagee. The present rule provides for a personal decree in a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagor.

9. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, if it appears, upon taking the account referred to in rule 7, that nothing is due to the defendant or that he has been overpaid, the Court shall pass a decree directing the defendant, if so required, to re-transfer the property and to pay to the plaintiff the amount which may be found due to him; and the plaintiff shall, if necessary, be put in possession of the mortgaged property.

Decree where nothing is found due or where mortgagee has been overpaid

This rule provides for cases where nothing is found due to the mortgagee and for cases where the mortgagee has been overpaid as may well happen where he is in possession. There was no such provision in the Transfer of Property Act, but the practice followed under that Act was the same as that prescribed by this rule (j).

10. [New. Act 4 of 1882, s. 94.] In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure, sale or redemption, the Court shall, unless in the case of costs of the suit the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him thereto, add to the mortgage-money such costs of the suit and other costs, charges and expenses as have been properly incurred by him since the date of the preliminary decree for foreclosure, sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

Costs of mortgagee subsequent to decree

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r. 10 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows—

10. In finally adjusting the amount to be paid to a mortgagee in case of a foreclosure or sale or redemption, the Court shall, unless the conduct of the mortgagee has been such as to disentitle him to costs, add to the mortgage money such costs of suit as have been properly incurred by him since the decree for foreclosure or sale or redemption up to the time of actual payment.

"Other costs, charges and expenses"—The words "and other costs, charges and expenses" are new. The addition of these words makes it clear that all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by a mortgagee in respect of the payment of the preliminary decree are to be added to the mortgage money and the mortgagor has to pay them before he can redeem the mortgage. Such costs and charges and expenses were added to the mortgage money even before the amendment of the present rule by the Act of 1906. But costs of an appeal by the mortgagee from an order striking off execution proceedings cannot be added. The mortgagor is liable for them personally. (d) If the costs of an appeal from a preliminary decree have not been admitted in the final decree, the Court of execution cannot include them. (e) Subsequent interest not mentioned in the final decree must be taken as refused. (n)

11. [Ayer] In any decree passed in a suit for foreclosure, sale or redemption where interest is legally recoverable the Court may order payment of interest to the mortgagee as follows, namely:—

(a) interest up to the date on or before which payment of the amount found or declared due is under the preliminary decree to be made by the mortgagor or other person redeeming the mortgage—

- (i) on the principal amount found or declared due on the mortgage,—at the rate payable on the principal, or, where no such rate is fixed, at such rate as the Court deems reasonable,
- (ii) on the amount of the costs of the suit awarded to the mortgagee—at such rate as the Court deems reasonable from the date of the preliminary decree, and
- (iii) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee for costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by the mortgagee in respect of the mortgage security up to the date of the preliminary decree and added to the mortgage money,—at the rate agreed between the parties or, failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates, at nine per cent per annum, and

(b) subsequent interest up to the date of realization or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems reasonable—

- (i) on the aggregate of the principal sums specified in clause (a) and of the interest thereon as calculated in accordance with that clause, and

(u) on the amount adjudged due to the mortgagee in respect of such further costs, charges and expenses as may be payable under rule 10

The old rule—This rule relates to interest. The old r 11 had nothing to do with interest. It gave a right to a mesne mortgagee to redeem and foreclose. It is now transferred to the Transfer of Property Act as sec 94. It was as follows—

11 Where property is mortgaged for successive debts to successive mortgagees any mesne mortgagee may institute a suit to redeem the interests of the prior mortgagees and to foreclose the rights of those that are posterior to himself and of the mortgagor

Interest in mortgage suits—This rule is new. It was added by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929. It came into operation on 1st April 1930. It gives effect to judicial decisions under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 and under O 34 of the Code. Summarising those decisions it may be said that in a suit on a mortgage the Court awarded—

- (1) interest on the principal prior to the date of the suit at the rate provided by the mortgage [Usury Laws Repeal Act, 1853, s 2] unless the rate is penal, in which case the Court may award such interest as it deems proper (o) [Indian Contract Act 1872 s 74] or the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it [Usurious Loans Act 1918 s 3], and
- (2) interest on the principal from the date of the suit up to the date fixed by the Court for payment of the mortgage debt, also at the rate provided by the mortgage [Transfer of Property Act, ss 86, 88, now O 34 rr 2 and 4] unless the rate is penal in which case the Court may award interest at such rate as it deems proper (p) or the interest is excessive and the transaction was substantially unfair in which case also the Court may reduce it (q). The interest is on the principal amount only excluding interest up to date of suit (q1)
- (3) interest on the aggregate amount of principal, interest and costs, from the date fixed for the payment of the mortgage debt up to the date of realisation or actual payment at such rate as the Court deems proper. It may be allowed at the Court rate that is 6 per cent per annum (r) or at any other rate (s). The Court is not bound to award it at the contract rate (t).

As to item (3) above it was contended on behalf of the mortgagor before their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maharaja of Bharatpur v Kanno Dei (u) that, according to the true construction of s 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Court had no power to award interest subsequent to the date fixed for payment of the mortgage debt, but this contention was overruled, and it was held that that section did not preclude the payment of such interest and this view was reiterated by their Lordships in Sunder Aker

v. Poo Sham Kishen (r) and Poo G. Lallu v. Sheth Ghaneram (w) O 31 r 4 which is in substance a reproduction of sec. 38 of the Transfer of Property Act now contains an express provision for payment of subsequent interest.

On a preliminary decree for foreclosure sale under r. 2 and 4 a mortgagee is entitled to interest at the rate and with the rests stipulated in the mortgage down to the date fixed for redemption by the decree, and if the decree is varied on appeal, down to the date fixed for redemption by the Appellate Court (x).

Although a mortgage of family security provides for excessive and usurious interest, no presumption arises that it was induced by undue influence in the absence of proof by the mortgagor that the mortgagee was in a position to dominate his will (y).

There was a considerable conflict of decisions as to whether if there was no express provision in the mortgage deed for payment of interest after the due date for payment specified in the deed the Court could allow interest subsequent to that date. It was held in some cases that if on an examination of the deed the Court came to the conclusion that there was an intention to pay interest not only up to the due date but also after that date and up to the date of payment, the Court should allow interest on the footing that the deed contained a provision for the payment of such interest (z). Where the deed contained a stipulation for periodical payment of interest and there was nothing in the deed to suggest that the liability in respect of interest should cease on the due date, it was presumed by the Court that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment (a). If, on the other hand, the Court came to the conclusion that there was no intention to pay interest after the due date, the practice was to allow interest by way of damages at the contract rate. At the same time it was recognised that the contract rate was not necessarily the measure of damages (b). Where interest was allowed by way of damages it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that it could be added to the mortgage money and recovered out of the mortgaged property (c). The High Court of Allahabad held that it could not be recovered out of the mortgaged property and that there could only be a personal decree against the mortgagor for such interest (d). It was thought in some cases that the claim for interest by way of damages being a claim for compensation for breach of contract, the claim would be barred unless it was made in a suit on a mortgage within three years from the due date fixed for payment of the mortgage money in the case of an unregistered instrument and six years in the case of a registered instrument (e). In the undermentioned case (f), however, the Judicial Committee observed that such a claim was a recurring one within the meaning of sec. 23 of the Limitation Act and that so long as the principal was not barred, interest for three or for six years as the case may be could be recovered. These nice distinctions

Although a mortgage for ample security provides for excessive and usurious interest
no presumption arises that it was induced by undue influence in the absence of proof by the mortgagee that the mortgagee was in a position to dominate his will (y)

There was a considerable conflict of decisions as to whether if there was no express provision in the mortgage deed for payment of interest after the due date for payment specified in the deed the Court could allow interest subsequent to that date. It was held in some cases that if on an examination of the deed the Court came to the conclusion that there was an intention to pay interest not only up to the due date but also after that date and up to the date of payment, the Court should allow interest on the footing that the deed contained a provision for the payment of such interest (z). Where the deed contained a stipulation for periodical payment of interest and there was nothing in the deed to suggest that the liability in respect of interest should cease on the due date, it was presumed by the Court that there was an intention to pay interest up to the date of payment (a). If, on the other hand, the Court came to the conclusion that there was no intention to pay interest after the due date the practice was to allow interest by way of damages at the contract rate. At the same time it was recognised that the contract rate was not necessarily the measure of damages (b). Where interest was allowed by way of damages it was held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that it could be added to the mortgage money and recovered out of the mortgaged property (c). The High Court of Allahabad held that it could not be recovered out of the mortgaged property and that there could only be a personal decree against the mortgagor for such interest (d). It was thought in some cases that the claim for interest by way of damages being a claim for compensation for breach of contract, the claim would be barred unless it was made in a suit on a mortgage within three years from the due date fixed for payment of the mortgage money in the case of an unregistered instrument and six years in the case of a registered instrument (e). In the undermentioned case (f), however, the Judicial Committee observed that such a claim was a recurring one within the meaning of sec. 23 of the Limitation Act and that so long as the principal was not barred, interest for three or for six years as the case may be could be recovered. These like distinctions

12. [Act 4 of 1882, s. 96.] Where any property the sale of which is directed under this Order is subject to a prior mortgage, the Court may, with the consent of the prior mortgagee, direct that the property be sold free from the same, giving to such prior mortgagee the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold.

Sale of property subject to prior mortgage

Sale of property free from prior mortgage.—A puisne mortgagee may sue for foreclosure or sale without making the prior mortgagee a party to the suit [see the Explanation to r 1]. In such a case, as also where the prior mortgagee is joined as a party and his mortgage is admitted (h), the prior mortgagee may consent to the property being sold free from his mortgage, in which case he acquires the right to have his claim satisfied first out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property [see r 13 below]

Where the prior mortgagee is a usufructuary mortgage—A holds two mortgages on the same property, the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage. Can A sue for sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage free from the usufructuary mortgage, and claim to be paid out of the sale proceeds the amount due upon the usufructuary mortgage under this and the next rule? Yes, according to the Madras rulings (i). No, according to the Allahabad rulings unless the two mortgages are in favour of different persons (j).

The High Court of Patna has held that where a person holds two mortgages on the same property, the first a usufructuary and the second a simple mortgage, he is entitled to sue for the sale of the mortgaged property on the simple mortgage subject to his prior usufructuary mortgage, and also that he is entitled to have the prior mortgage notified at the sale in execution of the decree obtained on the subsequent mortgage for the information of bidders at the sale though the prior mortgage was not mentioned in his plaint. The omission to mention the prior mortgage in the plaint does not preclude him from keeping alive that mortgage by notifying it at the sale (k).

13. [Act 4 of 1882, s. 97.] (1) Such proceeds shall be brought into Court and applied as follows:—

first, in payment of all expenses incident to the sale or properly incurred in any attempted sale;

secondly, in payment of whatever is due to the prior mortgagee on account of the prior mortgage, and of costs, properly incurred in connection therewith;

This expression includes subsequent incumbrancers (m). But it does not include unsecured creditors who cannot be said to be interested in the property sold, they are at liberty, however, to enforce their claims against any surplus payable to the mortgagor (n).

O. 34, r. 14 substituted for the words "any claim, whether arising under the mortgage or not" The effect of this alteration is to confine the operation of the present rule to cases where a mortgagee has obtained a personal decree against the mortgagor on the mortgage debt. In such a case the rule provides that the mortgagee shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree—he can have the property sold only by instituting a regular suit for sale (o) and obtaining a decree for sale under rules 4 and 5. It is clear that where a mortgagee brings a regular suit for sale, and a decree is passed in such suit, what would be sold is the mortgaged property free from the mortgage, while in the other case where the suit is not for sale, but on the mortgage debt only what would be sold is the mortgaged property subject to the mortgage, in other words it is only the mortgagor's equity of redemption that would be sold. The object of the present rule is to prevent mortgagees from suing their mortgagors on the mortgage debt as such and in the execution selling the bare equity of redemption thereby depriving the mortgagors of the right of redemption that would be given to them by the decree for sale (p) [see r. 4 above]. A mortgages his property to B to secure repayment of Rs. 5,000. B sues A to recover Rs. 5,000, and obtains a personal decree against A. B then applies for attachment and sale of A's interest in the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. The property may be attached, for there is nothing in this rule to bar the attachment (q), but the sale must be refused under this rule. B cannot bring the property to sale except by means of a regular suit for sale. Suppose now that B sues A on a debt unconnected with the mortgage, and obtains a decree against A. Is he entitled to have A's interest in the mortgage sold in execution of such decree? Yes, for the rule only precludes B from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. Under sec. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, however, B could not bring the mortgaged property to sale even if the decree was for a debt unconnected with the mortgage debt (r). The scope of that section was very wide for it precluded a mortgagee from bringing the mortgaged property to sale in execution of a decree for the satisfaction of any claim whether arising under the mortgage or not. It may here be stated that the present rule is a rule of procedure and not a rule of substantive law, it has, therefore, a retrospective operation (s).

Sale made in contravention of this rule is voidable, not void—It was at one time thought that a sale made in contravention of this rule was absolutely void (t) and that the purchaser at such sale was not therefore entitled to recover possession from the mortgagor (u), and that if he did acquire possession, he was bound to account for the rents and profits realized from the mortgaged property during the term of his possession (v). But this view is no longer tenable, and it has been held in recent cases that a sale in contravention of this rule is not void, but only voidable at the instance of the mortgagor or any other person interested in the equity of redemption (w). The rule in other words, is valid until it is set aside. The procedure to set aside the sale is by way of application under sec. 47, a separate suit is barred under that section. The application must be made before confirmation of the sale unless the applicant proves that owing to fraud or other reasons he was kept in ignorance of the sale proceedings preliminary to sale. The sale cannot be set aside after it is confirmed by the Court (x). Nor is it open to the mortgagee after confirmation of the sale to redeem the mortgage, whether the property has been purchased by a third person (y) or by the mortgagee himself (z).

"Decree.—An order directing a person who has stood surety on behalf of a judgment-debtor for the performance of a decree to pay the amount specified in the surety bond is a decree within the meaning of this rule. It is therefore competent to the decree-holder to have the property secured by the bond for the performance of the decree sold in execution under sec. 145 without instituting a regular suit for sale (a).

"Decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage.—This rule does not apply unless the decree obtained by the mortgagee is for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage. The mortgage referred to in this rule must be a mortgage existing prior to the date of the decree, and not one created by the decree [ills (1) and (2)]. Further, it must be a subsisting mortgage, and not one which by reason of the efflux of time or any other like circumstance has ceased to be enforceable at law [ill (3)]. Again the rule is not applicable when a usufructuary mortgagee has leased the mortgaged property to the mortgagor or leases him for rent (b), unless the lease was part of the mortgage transaction (c). Nor does the rule prevent a mortgagee purchasing with leave of the Court the equity of redemption at a Court sale in execution of his money decree on a claim independent of the mortgage (d).

Further, the rule does not prevent a mortgagee who has two distinct mortgages, one on property A and another on property B from selling B, in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on A and selling A in execution of a money decree on a claim arising out of the mortgage on B (e).

Yes, for the claim in respect of costs is not a "claim arising under the mortgage" within the meaning of this rule. It arises under the decree passed for costs (f).

At this date B's remedy on the mortgage had become barred by limitation. The mortgage not being a subsisting mortgage [and A not having to redeem it] B is entitled to have property X sold in execution without bringing a regular suit for sale on the mortgage (h)

(4) A executes a usufructuary mortgage in favour of B to secure a debt of Rs. 8,000 whereby he mortgages a fixed rate holding and his right to receive offerings at a temple. By a subsequent agreement between him and B, A binds himself to pay annually Rs 700 to B in lieu of the offerings. Subsequently B sues A on that agreement and obtains a decree against A for Rs 3,200 being the arrears of the annual payments. This is a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage within the meaning of this rule, and B is not entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree. B's right to receive the money rested on his position as mortgagee (i)

"He may institute such suit notwithstanding anything contained in O 2, r 2"—See notes to O 2, r 2, under the head "Exceptions to the rule against the splitting of reliefs."

Charge—This rule applies not only to mortgages but also to charges (j). The Rangoon High Court decreed a suit for unpaid price on a sale of immovable property and incorporated in the decree an order for sale in realisation of the seller's charge but the Privy Council observed that the procedure was irregular (k). In a Calcutta case the holder of a charge on certain properties brought a suit on the charge and obtained a decree against the defendant personally with a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to a charge on the properties. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to sell the properties in execution but must file a suit to enforce the charge as provided by this rule (l). But where in a suit on a mortgage bond a decree was passed by consent in the terms that 'the plaintiff will be entitled to realise the whole amount by taking out execution the property mortgaged shall remain charged under the mortgage,' it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution (m).

In Patna it has been held that where in a suit for maintenance a decree is passed for the plaintiff, directing the defendant to pay a fixed sum every month and declaring that the allowance fixed by the decree shall be a charge on certain property the plaintiff is entitled to sell the property in execution and no separate suit is necessary (n). In a Bombay case the suit was for money and a consent decree was passed directing the defendant to pay a sum of money to the plaintiffs and declaring a charge on certain properties belonging to the defendant. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to sell the property in execution and that it was not necessary to bring a separate suit for sale (o). But in a similar case the Allahabad High Court held that a suit for sale was necessary (p).

Security bond—A security bond given during the pendency of an appeal creating a charge on the sureties property can be enforced by summary procedure and this rule does not apply when no person is named as mortgagee, for the Court is not a judicial person (q). See note under O 41, r 5, post. Security for the performance of the decree, and see 145.

Consent decree—This rule does not apply to consent-decrees for the mortgagor can waive the benefit of the rule (r).

Transferee of money decree from mortgagee—It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay and Madras that the transferee of a money-decree obtained by a mortgagee against his mortgagor is bound by the restriction imposed upon the mortgagee by this rule, and that he cannot therefore bring the mortgaged property to sale in execution of the decree (s). The contrary has been held by the High Court of Allahabad (t).

Mortgage of movables—O 34 does not apply to mortgages of movable property and so this rule does not enable a mortgagee of movable property who has obtained a personal decree for the sum secured by the mortgage to sue on the mortgage (u).

Sub section (2)—In the Punjab where the Transfer of Property Act does not apply a mortgagee may bring the property mortgaged to sale in execution of a money decree (v).

15. [New. Cf. Act 4 of 1882, ss. 96 and 100.] All the provisions contained in this Order which apply to a simple mortgage shall, so far as may be, apply to a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds within the meaning of sec. 58, and to a charge within the meaning of sec. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

Mortgages by the deposit of title-deeds and charges

The old rule—The above rule was substituted for old r 15 by the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act, 1929, which came into operation on the 1st April 1930. The old rule was as follows—

15. All the provisions contained in this Order as to the sale or redemption of mortgaged property shall, so far as may be, apply to property subject to a charge within the meaning of sec. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

O. 34, r. 14 mortgage or charge prior to the decree, the decree cannot be said to have been obtained 'for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage' within the meaning of this rule. The immovable property must have been made security for the payment of the money before the decree was obtained, otherwise the provisions of this rule do not apply (g)

(3) A mortgages two properties X and Y to B. Subsequently by reason of the wrongful act of A, B is deprived of part of his security, namely, property Y. B thereupon sues A under sec. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, and obtains a personal decree for the mortgage debt against A. In execution of the decree B applies for sale of property X. See in Transfer of Property Act, 1908, Security for the performance of the decree, and see 145.

O. 34, r. 15 The old rule and the new rule.—

- 1 The words "as to the sale or redemption of the mortgaged property" which were in the old rule have been omitted, and instead thereof it is now provided in general terms that the provisions applying to simple mortgages shall apply to charges
- 2 The words "mortgage by deposit of title deeds within the meaning of sec 58 are new

Charge—Where immovable property of one person is by act of parties or operation of law made security for the payment of money to another, and the transaction does not amount to a mortgage, the latter person is said to have a charge on the property [Transfer of Property Act, s 100]. A charge for rent created by sec 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (w), or by sec 5 of the Madras Estates Land Act, I of 1908 (x), is not a charge within the meaning of sec 100 of the Transfer of Property Act. See notes to r 14, "Charge". See Ghose on Mortgage, 5th ed., pp 109-110.

Mortgage by deposit of title deeds.—By sec 96 of the Transfer of Property Act, a mortgage by deposit of title deeds is now placed on the same footing as a simple mortgage.

Sale—A charge is enforced by sale and not foreclosure.

*Interpleader.*O. 35,
rr. 1, 2

1. [S. 471.] In every suit of interpleader the plaintiff shall, in addition to other statements necessary for plaints, state—
 - (a) that the plaintiff claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs;
 - (b) the claims made by the defendants severally; and
 - (c) that there is no collusion between the plaintiff and any of the defendants

Interpleader suits—See sec 88 and notes thereto

2. [S. 472.] Where the thing claimed is capable of being paid into Court, or placed in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff may be required to so pay or place it before he can be entitled to any order in the suit

"May be required to so pay or place it"—These words have been substituted for the words "must so pay or place it" in view of the addition of the words "immovable property" in sec 88. The procedure by payment or deposit is plainly not applicable to immovable property.

3. [S. 47.] Where any of the defendants in an interpleader suit is actually suing the plaintiff in respect of the subject matter of such suit, the Court in which the suit against the plaintiff is pending shall, on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted, stay the proceedings as against him, and his costs in the suit so stayed may be provided for in such suit, but if, and in so far as they are not provided for in that suit, they may be added to his costs incurred in the interpleader suit

Alteration in the rule—The words "on being informed by the Court in which the interpleader suit has been instituted" have been substituted for the words "on being duly informed by the Court which passed the decree in the interpleader suit in favour of the stakeholder that such decree has been passed". Under the old section proceedings in other litigation relating to the same subject matter could only be stayed on the passing of a decree in the interpleader suit. Under the present rule they can be stayed on the very institution of the interpleader suit.

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule (O 43 r 1 cl. (p)).

Procedure at first hearing

4. [S 47, R. S C, O 57, r 7.] (1) At the first hearing the Court may—

- (a) declare that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the thing claimed award him his costs, and dismiss him from the suit, or
- (b) if it thinks that justice or convenience so require, retain all parties until the final disposal of the suit

(2) Where the Court finds that the admissions of the parties or other evidence enable it to do so, it may adjudicate the title to the thing claimed

(3) Where the admissions of the parties do not enable the Court so to adjudicate it may direct—

- (a) that an issue or issues between the parties be framed and tried, and
- (b) that any claimant be made a plaintiff in lieu of or in addition to the original plaintiff, and shall proceed to try the suit in the ordinary manner

O. 34, r. 15 The old rule and the new rule —

Non appearance of claimant-defendants—Where the claimants do not appear at the first hearing the Court may, if the suit is properly instituted, declare under sub r (1) that the plaintiff is discharged from all liability to the defendants in respect of the money claimed, award him his costs and dismiss him from the suit (y)

(a) A deposits a box of jewels with B as his agent C alleges that the jewels were wrongfully obtained from him by A, and claims them from B B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C

Interpleader suit by Agents—In ill (a), C does not claim through A (principal) but adversely to him hence no interpleader suit can be brought In ill (b) C claims through A hence B may institute interpleader suit against A and C

Interpleader suit by tenants—A lets certain lands to B C alleges that the lands never belonged to A and claims the rent from B B cannot institute an interpleader suit against A and C this is because C claims adversely to A (landlord) But if C claims the rent alleging that the lands were sold to him by A after the same were let to B, B may institute an interpleader suit against A and C the reason is that in this case C claims through A, that is as purchaser from A The result is that an interpleader suit by a tenant can only be maintained if the defendant other than the landlord claims through the landlord (z) The following is a peculiar case A grants a perpetual lease of certain villages to his wife B B sub lets the villages to C A alleging that the lease granted by him to B was executed by him benami in the name of B gives notice to C, claiming the rents of the villages B denies that the transaction was benami, and she also claims the rents from C C can maintain an interpleader suit against A and B The reason given is that A must be deemed to claim through B (a) See Indian Evidence Act s 116

Birth after case set down—In the case of the subsequent birth of an infant the former order to set down should be discharged and the special case amended by making the infant a party (d) So also when an infant born a few days before was accidentally omitted to be made a party (e)

Fit to be decided—The Court will not make an abstract declaration in a case where the parties have another specific remedy (f)

ORDER XXXVII.

Summary Procedure on Negotiable Instruments

Application of order 1. [S. 532.] This Order applies only to—

- (a) the High Courts of Judicature at Fort St. George, Madras and Bombay,
- (b) the Chief Court of Lower Burma,
- (c) the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Assam and
- (d) any other Court to which sections 532 to 537 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, have been already applied Courts of Small Causes in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay—The corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1882 applied also to Presidency Small Cause Courts.

Clause (d)—Although sections 532 to 537 have been applied to a subordinate Court, yet the subordinate Judge of that Court when exercising Small Cause Court powers has no jurisdiction under this order (g)

Lahore High Court—The Lahore High Court is not mentioned in clause (a) of the rule. See as to this the undermentioned case (h)

2. [S. 532] (1) All suits upon bills of exchange, hundies or promissory notes may, in case the plaintiff desires to proceed hereunder, be instituted by presenting a plaint in the form prescribed, but the summons shall be in Form No. 4, Appendix B or in such other form as may be from time to time prescribed

(2) In any case in which the plaint and summons are in such forms, respectively, the defendant shall not appear or defend the suit unless he obtains leave from a Judge hereinafter provided so to appear and defend, and, in default of his obtaining such leave or of his appearance and defend

O. 37, r. 2 in pursuance thereof, the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted, and the plaintiff shall be entitled to a decree—

(a) for the principal sum due on the instrument and for interest calculated in accordance with the provisions of section 79 or section 80, as the case may be, of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, up to the date of the institution of the suit, or for the sum mentioned in the summons, whichever is less, and for interest up to the date of the decree at the same rate or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit; and

(b) for such subsequent interest, if any, as the Court may order under section 34 of this Code; and

(c) for such sum for costs as may be prescribed:

Provided that, if the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum for costs, the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way.

(3) A decree passed under this rule may be executed forthwith.

Old Section.—This rule corresponds with s 532 of the Code of 1882 except in the following particulars —

- 1 The explanation to s 532 has been omitted, and in lieu thereof the words "the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted" have been added into sub r (2) See notes below under the head "The allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted"
- 2 The fourth paragraph of s 532, which provided that the Court should not require the defendant to pay the amount claimed into Court or to give security therefor unless the Court thought that the defendant had not a prima facie case or that the defence was not made in good faith, has been omitted See r 3, sub r (2), below
- 3 See also notes below "Changes in sub r (2)"

Changes in sub-rule (2).—Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub r (2), and sub rule (3) were substituted after the words "shall be entitled to a decree" in sub r (2), for the following words, by Act 30 of 1926, s 4 —

"for any sum not exceeding the sum mentioned in the summons, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of the decree, and such sum for costs as may be prescribed unless the plaintiff claims more than such fixed sum, in which case the costs shall be ascertained in the ordinary way, and such decree may be executed forthwith"

See notes below "Interest"

Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable O. instruments:

- (1) A plaintiff enforcing a negotiable instrument may either bring a summary suit or he may bring a suit in the ordinary manner. The advantage of a summary suit is that the defendant is not, as in a suit brought in the ordinary manner, entitled as of right to defend the suit. The defendant in a summary suit must apply for leave to defend within 10 days from the service of the summons upon him (see Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 159), and such leave will be granted only if the affidavit filed by the defendant discloses such facts as would make it incumbent on the plaintiff to prove consideration or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient for granting leave to the defendant to appear and defend the suit. If no leave to defend is granted the plaintiff is entitled to a decree.
- (2) A summary suit must be brought within one year from the date on which the debt becomes due and payable [Limitation Act, 1908, sch. I, art. 5]. The period of limitation for a suit brought in the ordinary manner on a negotiable instrument is 3 years. Article 5 of the Limitation Act, 1908, as it originally stood, referred to suits under the summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2) (f) of the Code, and this was construed as not including suits under O. 37 (a). That article was accordingly amended by Act 30 of 1925 by adding to the entry in the first column the words "where the provision of such summary procedure does not exclude the ordinary procedure in such suits and under O. 37 of the said Code". At the same time the period of limitation was extended from six months to one year.
- (3) A summary suit can only be brought in the Courts mentioned in r. 1.

A negotiable instrument means a promissory note, bill of exchange, or cheque, expressed to be payable to a specified person or his order, or to the order of a specified person or to the bearer thereof, or to a specified person or the bearer thereof (Negotiable Instruments Act 26 of 1881, s. 13).

A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing containing an unconditional order signed by the maker, directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person or to the bearer of the instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 5).

A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank note or a currency note) containing an unconditional undertaking, signed by the maker, to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person, or to the bearer of that instrument (Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 4).

Illustrations

(a) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs. 5,000 to B on demand. By the same instrument it is provided that B should not be entitled to call for payment of the said sum unless A fails to deliver certain goods to B within six months. The instrument is not a promissory note, for the undertaking to pay Rs. 5,000 is conditional upon A's failure to deliver the goods, Simon v Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad 368.

(b) A executes an instrument whereby he promises to pay Rs. 5,000 to B on demand. At the same time a separate agreement is made between the parties whereby B agrees not to demand payment of the sum of Rs. 5,000 unless A fails to deliver certain goods to him within six months. The instrument is a promissory note. Simon v Hakim Mahomed (1896) 19 Mad 368.

37, r 2 Limitation for suit—See notes above Points of difference between summary suit and ordinary suit on negotiable instruments

Limitation for application for leave to defend—The period of limitation for an application for leave to appear and defend is 10 days from the date when the summons is served Limitation Act sch I art 159 The Court has no power to extend the time (3) unless the Court has by a rule framed in that behalf made sec 5 of the Limitation Act applicable to such application as has been done by the High Court of Bombay See App IV below [Rules made by the High Court of Bombay]

Form of summons in a summary suit—The summons in such a suit requires the defendant to obtain leave from the Court within 10 days from the service thereof to appear and defend the suit and within such time to cause an appearance to be entered on his behalf see Appendix B Form No 4

Defendant shall not appear unless he obtains leave—This rule provides that a defendant who has failed to obtain leave to defend cannot be allowed to appear instalments (L1)

Interest—Sub rule (2) before it was amended by Act 30 of 1906 was in almost the same terms as s 39 of the Code of 1859 The sub rule has now been amended and provision has been made for interest first up to the date of the institution of the suit secondly up to the date of the decree and thirdly after the decree As to interest up to the institution of the suit it is to be calculated in accordance with the provisions of sec 79 or sec 80 as the case may be of the Negotiable Instruments Act 1881 See the undernoted case (i) As to interest from the date of the institution of the suit to the date of the decree it may be awarded at the discretion of the Court at the same rate as aforesaid or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit As to interest from and after the date of the decree the same may be awarded under sec 34 of the Code See 79 of the Negotiable

Suit against firm—The question whether when a summary suit is brought against a firm an ex parte service is effected upon a person as an alleged partner, and such person appears under protest denying that he was a partner, he could appear without obtaining leave under this rule is discussed in the unreported case (g)

3. [S. 533.] (1) The Court shall, upon application by the defendant, give leave to appear and to defend the suit, upon affidavits which disclose such facts as would make it incumbent on the holder to prove consideration, or such other facts as the Court may deem sufficient to support the application

defence on merits to have leave to appear

(2) Leave to defend may be given unconditionally or subject to such terms as to payment into Court, giving security, framing and recording issues or otherwise as the Court thinks fit

Alterations in the rule—Under the old sections it was obligatory upon the Court to grant leave to the defendant to appear and defend if he paid into Court the amount claimed by the plaintiff and mentioned in the summons. It is no longer so under the present rule. The words upon the defendant paying into Court the sum mentioned in the summons or, which occurred in s. 533 after the word suit in the third line have been omitted.

Limitation—The application for leave to appear and defend must be made within 10 days from the date of service of the summons on the defendant. The date shown in the Sheriff's return as the date of service is the only date to which reference could be made to determine the question of limitation arising on an application under this section (r).

Sub rule (2)—As a rule leave to defend should be given unconditionally if the defendant shows a prima facie case or raises a triable issue. Leave should be made conditional if the Court doubts the bona fides of the defendant or thinks that the defence is only put in to gain time (s).

Appeal—No appeal is allowed under the Code from an order under this rule. The High Court of Calcutta has held that an order under this rule directing a defendant to give security as a term on which leave to defend should be given is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and not therefore appealable as such (t). But the Bombay High Court holds that an appeal lies from the final judgment in a summary suit (u), and that an appeal also lies from an order refusing leave to appear and defend or an order granting leave on terms for the order though in terms interlocutory has the effect of determining the rights of the parties and is technically a judgment from which an appeal lies under the Letters Patent (v).

4. ORDER XXXVIII

Arrest and Attachment before Judgment

Arrest before judgment

O. 38, r. 1

When defendant may be called upon to furnish security for appearance

1. [Ss. 447, 478.] Where at any stage of a suit, other than a suit of the nature referred to in section 16, clauses (a) to (d) the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise,—

- (a) that the defendant, with intent to delay the plaintiff, or to avoid any process of the Court or to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

- (i) has absconded or left the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(ii) is about to abscond or leave the local limits of O. the jurisdiction of the Court, or

(iii) has disposed of or removed from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court his property or any part thereof, or

(b) that the defendant is about to leave British India under circumstances affording reasonable probability that the plaintiff will or may thereby be obstructed or delayed in the execution of any decree that may be passed against the defendant in the suit, the Court may issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not furnish security for his appearance

Provided that the defendant shall not be arrested if he pays to the officer entrusted with the execution of the warrant any sum specified in the warrant as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, and such sum shall be held in deposit by the Court until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court

The proviso to the rule is new

Scope of the Order—Order 21 deals with the arrest of a judgment debtor and the attachment of his property in execution of a decree passed against him. The present Order lays down rules for the arrest of a defendant and the attachment of his property before judgment. The object of these rules is to secure the plaintiff against any attempt on the part of the defendant to defeat the execution of any decree that may be passed against him.

Reasonable probability—Where the defendant is about to leave British India it is not necessary to prove any intent on his part to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him. It is enough if the circumstances under which he is about to leave British India afford a reasonable probability that any decree that may be passed against him in the suit will thereby be obstructed or delayed in execution (w). The Court must be satisfied on two points (1) that the plaintiff has a cause of action which is prima facie unimpeachable subject to his proving the allegations in his plaint and (2) that the Court should have reason to believe on adequate materials that unless jurisdiction is exercised there is real danger that the defendant will remove himself from the ambit of the powers of the Court (x).

The suit must be bona fide—In every case where an application is made under this rule the Court must be satisfied that the suit is bona fide. Where the plaintiff is indisputably entitled to a part of the relief claimed in the plaint the mere circumstance of the rest of the plaintiff's claim being of a disputable character does not render the suit mala fide (y).

2. [S. 479.] (1) Where the defendant fails to show such cause the Court shall order him either to deposit in Court money or other property sufficient to answer the claim against him, or to furnish security for his appearance at any time when called upon while the suit is pending and until satisfaction of any decree that may be passed against him in the suit, or make such order as it thinks fit in regard to the sum which may have been paid by the defendant under the proviso to the last preceding rule.

(2) Every surety for the appearance of a defendant shall bind himself, in default of such appearance, to pay any sum of money which the defendant may be ordered to pay in the suit.

Rateable distribution—Insolvency of defendant—Where money is deposited by the defendant in Court under this rule, it is a payment into Court to the general credit of the action and charged with a lien in favour of the plaintiff on the latter for obtaining a decree in his favour. Where after payment into Court other judgment-creditors of the defendant attach the money or the defendant becomes an insolvent, the plaintiff on obtaining his decree is entitled to priority over the claims respectively of the attaching creditors and the Official Receiver. The reason is that the amount so paid cannot be taken to have been ordered and levied as security for the defendant's appearance (2). See notes to r 5 below, "Rateable distribution. Insolvency of defendant."

Money sufficient to answer the claim—In a Calcutta case (a), Rankin, C J, said "When one looks at Order 38 Rule 2, and Form 2 of Appendix F, one does not find it contemplated that a defendant, on failing to make deposit, is to give security for appearance in a particular sum to be fixed by the Judge, but that if this security takes the form of a bond by a surety, it is to be the whole amount of the decree. If the defendant can give the security himself, he will give it for the claim by deposit of money or property. Otherwise he will get some one to go bail for his appearance. This is, I think, the scheme of Order 38."

Security for his appearance.—The condition of the surety's bond is to produce the defendant when called upon and the bond is not forfeited if the defendant is adjudicated insolvent and so exempted from arrest (a1).

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43, r 1, cl (q)]

Form.—For form of security, see App F, form no 2

3. [S. 480.] (1) A surety for the appearance of a defendant may at any time apply to the Court in which he became such surety to be discharged from his obligation.

(2) On such application being made, the Court shall summon the defendant to appear or, if it thinks fit, may issue a warrant for his arrest in the first instance

(3) On the appearance of the defendant in pursuance of the summons or warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Court shall direct the surety to be discharged from his obligation, and shall call upon the defendant to find fresh security.

Form—For form of summons to defendant see App F, form no 3

4. [S. 4.] Where the defendant fails to comply with any order under rule 2 or rule 3, the Court may commit him to the civil prison until the decision of the suit or, where a decree is passed against the defendant, until the decree has been satisfied

Procedure where defendant fails to furnish security or find fresh security

Provided that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule in any case for a longer period than six months, nor for a longer period than six weeks when the amount or value of the subject matter of the suit does not exceed fifty rupees

Provided also that no person shall be detained in prison under this rule after he has complied with such order

Appeal—An order for arrest is appealable (b) under section 104 (h) though it is not specified under O 43 r 1

Attachment before Judgment

5. [Ss. 483, 484.] (1) Where, at any stage of a suit, the Court is satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise, that the defendant, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that may be passed against him,—

Where defendant may be called upon to furnish security for production of property

(a) is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property, or

(b) is about to remove the whole or any part of his property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court,

O. 38, r. 5 the Court may direct the defendant, within a time to be fixed by it, either to furnish security, in such sum as may be specified in the order, to produce and place at the disposal of the Court, when required, the said property or the value of the same, or such portion thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree, or to appear and show cause why he should not furnish security.

(2) The plaintiff shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, specify the property required to be attached and the estimated value thereof.

(3) The Court may also in the order direct the conditional attachment of the whole or any portion of the property so specified.

Alterations in the rule.—The words "or has quitted the jurisdiction of the Court leaving therein property belonging to him" which occurred in the old section after cl (b) of sub r (1) have been omitted

Object of the rule.—The main object of an attachment before judgment is to enable the plaintiff to realize the amount of the decree, if one is eventually passed, from the defendant's property (c).

The Court is satisfied—Vague allegations are insufficient (d) The power to attach is not to be exercised lightly and without clear proof of the mischief aimed at (e)

"Is about to dispose of the whole or any part of his property"—The expression "property" includes property of every description whether movable or immovable (f) The expression "his property" refers to the property of the defendant It does not refer to property which is the joint property of the plaintiff and the defendant Thus where A sued B for partnership accounts, and applied for an attachment before judgment of the Partnership property on the allegation that B was about to dispose of the same, it was held that the case was not one for an attachment before judgment, but for the appointment of a receiver under O 40 below (g) A man is not debarred from dealing with his property because a suit is filed against him and an attempt to sell a small portion of a large estate does not warrant the inference that the defendant intends to obstruct or delay execution (h)

Effect of order of adjudication on attachment before judgment—See rules to r 10 below under the same head

Rateable distribution—Where money is paid into Court by the defendant under this rule the plaintiff acquires no charge on the money and it passes to the Official Assignee on the insolvency of the defendant (i) This is because the money is deposited as security to produce and place at the disposal of the Court property which the defendant was about to dispose of or remove from the jurisdiction of the Court (j) For the same reason the amount deposited is subject to rateable distribution under s 73 above (l) But if the defendant deposits money in Court (l1) or with plaintiff's pleader (l2) in part satisfaction of money to which plaintiff may be found entitled as the result of a pending action, the money is earmarked for payment to the plaintiff, and on defendant's insolvency is payable to the plaintiff and not to the Official Receiver

Liability of surety.—The surety is discharged if the suit is compromised without his consent and if the terms of the consent decree are prejudicial to him (l) The Rangoon High Court holds that the liability of the surety ceases with the dismissal of the suit and does not continue during the appeal (m) The Bombay High Court makes the liability continue during the appeal (n) If the defendant dies pending the suit and the cause of action survives against his legal representatives and the legal representatives are brought on the record, the death of the defendant does not operate as a discharge of the surety (o)

Mortgage suit.—An attachment before judgment may be granted in a suit on a mortgage (p) The mortgagee must shew that the mortgagor has been deliberately and fraudulently effecting sales or mortgages of his other property with the purpose of defeating any personal decree the mortgagee may get (q)

Principle of sec. 64 applies to attachment before judgment.—Sec 64 of the Code provides that when property is attached in execution of a decree, any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment The same principle applies to the case of attachment before judgment, provided that a decree is ultimately passed for the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made This clearly appears from r 9 below which provides that an attachment before judgment shall be removed when the suit is dismissed (r)

Section 95 applies to a conditional attachment.—A conditional attachment under rule 3 (3) which is withdrawn on security being furnished is within s 95 and compensation may be awarded if the attachment was procured on insufficient grounds (s)

Property situated outside jurisdiction.—Where the property sought to be attached is outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, the proper course to follow is to transmit the order for attachment to the Court in whose jurisdiction the property is situated (t) See s 136 above The Court has of course no power to attach property outside British India (u)

6. [S. 485.] (1) Where the defendant fails to show cause why he should not furnish security, or fails to furnish the security required, within the time fixed by the Court, the Court may order that the property specified, or such portion thereof as appears sufficient to satisfy any decree which may be passed in the suit, be attached.

Attachment where cause not shown or security not

(2) Where the defendant shows such cause or furnishes the required security and the property specified or any portion of it has been attached, the Court shall order the attachment to be withdrawn, or make such other order as it thinks fit.

"Property specified."—That is, the property specified by the plaintiff as required by r 5, sub r (2). Such property may be within or without the jurisdiction of the Court. The words in sec 483 of the Code of 1882 were, "property within the jurisdiction of the Court." It was accordingly held by the High Courts of Madras and Bombay that the only property that could be attached before judgment was property within the jurisdiction of the Court (w). On the other hand, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta and recently also by the Madras High Court that sec 483 was to be read with sec 648 [now s 136] and that the two sections read together enable the Court to attach before judgment property situate beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (x). The omission of the words "within the jurisdiction of the Court" clearly shows that the Court may attach property before judgment, even though it may be situated beyond the local limits of its jurisdiction (y).

Wrongful attachment.—If the defendant does not obtain an order setting aside the attachment, he will not afterwards be entitled to maintain a suit in tort on the ground that the attachment was wrongfully procured (z). If the attachment was effected by an injunction in restraint of alienation he will not be entitled to damages for wrongful attachment unless he proves that he lost a chance of a profitable sale, and evidence of loss of credit is insufficient (a).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order under this rule in so far as it directs an attachment. The portion of the order which demands security is not appealable (b), but the question whether the property is under s 60 capable of attachment can be determined in the appeal (c). See O 43, r cl (q).

7. [S. 486.] Save as otherwise expressly provided, the attachment shall be made in the manner provided for the attachment of the property in execution of a decree.

revive the attachment and a private transfer made after release from attachment under O 21, r 60, will be void under sec 64 if the right to attach is subsequently established by suit (l) See notes to O 21, r 50, "Effect of order of release"

10. [S. 489.] Attachment before judgment shall not affect the rights, existing prior to the attachment, of persons not parties to the suit, nor bar any person holding a decree against the defendant from applying for the sale of the property under attachment in execution of such decree.

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of strangers nor bar decree holder from applying for sale

Effect of order of adjudication on attachment before judgment—Attachment before judgment does not confer any priority as against the Official Assignee, though the plaintiff at whose instance the attachment was made may ultimately obtain a decree in the suit A sues B, and attaches B's property before judgment A decree is then passed for A Between the date of the attachment and the date of the decree B's property vests in the Official Assignee under a vesting order The Official Assignee applies to the Court for removal of the attachment on the ground that the property has vested in him A contends that the attachment being prior to the date of the vesting order, his claim has a priority over that of the Official Assignee A's contention will not be upheld, and the attachment will be removed (m) See notes to sec 64 under the head, "Effect of order of adjudication on attachment," on p 238 above

Attachment before judgment not to affect rights of persons not parties to the suit—A and B are members of a joint Hindu family C sues A, and obtains an attachment before judgment of A's interest in the joint family property C then obtains a decree against A A dies after the decree On A's death, his interest in the property passes by survivorship to B, and C is not entitled to have A's share sold in execution of the decree (n) But according to the Madras High Court attachment before judgment followed by a decree does operate to defeat the right of survivorship (o)

Attachment before judgment not to bar rights of other decree holders—A institutes a suit against B, and obtains an attachment before judgment of B's property Subsequently C, another creditor of B, obtains a decree against B C is entitled to have the property attached and sold in execution of this decree The attachment before judgment does not confer any right upon A to have his decree satisfied in priority to that of C (p)

Agreement to sell—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether an attachment before judgment will prevail over the contractual obligation created by a previous contract of sale If A agrees to sell property to B, and after the agreement, but before the sale C attaches it, the conveyance would under sec 64 be subject to C's claim under the attachment But does B's previous agreement give him priority over C? In some cases it has been held that it does (q), and in others that it does not (r) See Mulla's Transfer of Property Act note 'Attachment', at p 158

11. [S. 490.] Where property is under attachment by virtue of the provisions of this Order and a decree is subsequently passed in favour of the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for a re-attachment of the property.

Property attached before judgment not to be re-attached in execution of decree

Scope of the rule—The effect of this rule is merely to do away with the necessity for a re-attachment of the property. But it does not exempt the plaintiff, when a decree follows the attachment, from making the usual application for execution under O 21, r 11 (2) (s). This is now made clear by the substitution of the words, "it shall not be necessary upon an application for execution of such decree to apply for re attachment of the property," for the words, 'it shall not be necessary to re attach the property in execution of such decree'. The rule was applied when the property attached before judgment was attached and brought to sale by another decree holder, the judgment-debtor paid the amount of the second decree, and on the sale being set aside, it was held that the attachment before judgment revived and that the first decree holder could in execution bring the property to sale without a fresh attachment (t). The rule does not give the decree holder at whose instance the property was attached before judgment any right to preferential treatment over other decree holders who may have applied for a rateable distribution under sec 73 (u).

The Madras High Court has held that if the execution application is dismissed, O 21, r 57, applies and that the attachment ceases (v). But the Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts hold that O 21 r 57, does not apply to an attachment before judgment (u). The Bombay High Court agrees with the latter view but holds that if the execution application is for the sale of property other than that attached before judgment, the attachment is not affected (x). See note 'Attachment before judgment' under O 21, r. 57, at p. 775.

Whether re attachment in execution operates as a waiver—Re attachment in execution of a decree, though no re attachment is necessary under this rule, is not of itself a waiver or abandonment of the attachment before judgment. The case is different whether there is an express or manifest abandonment (y).

Objection that property attached before judgment is not saleable—The defendant's omission to object to an application for attachment before judgment, on the ground that the property is not saleable within the meaning of sec 60, does not preclude him from raising that objection when an application is made for execution of the decree passed in the suit (z).

ORDER XXXIX

Temporary Injunctions and Interlocutory Orders

Temporary Injunctions

- O. 39, r. 1 1. [S. 402.] Where in any suit it is proved by affidavit or otherwise—
- Cases in which temporary injunction may be granted

- (a) that any property in dispute in a suit is in danger of being wasted, damaged or alienated by any party to the suit, or wrongfully sold in execution of a decree, or
- (b) that the defendant threatens, or intends, to remove or dispose of his property with a view to defraud his creditors, the Court may by order grant a temporary injunction to restrain such act, or make such other order for the purpose of staying and preventing the wasting, damaging alienation sale, removal or disposition of the property as the Court thinks fit, until the disposal of the suit or until further orders

Temporary and perpetual injunctions—Injunctions are of two kinds temporary and perpetual. Temporary injunctions are regulated by rr 1 and 2 of this Order. perpetual injunctions are regulated by sec 55 57 of the Specific Relief Act I of 1877. A party against whom a perpetual injunction is granted is thereby restrained for ever from doing the act complained of. A perpetual injunction can only be granted by final decree made at the hearing and upon the merits of the suit. A temporary or interim injunction on the other hand may be granted on an interlocutory application at any stage of the suit. The injunction is called temporary for it endures only until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court. (b) Thus if A's neighbour commences to build on a plot of land belonging to him a house which if completed would obstruct the access of light and air over the said plot to the windows of A's house in respect of which A claims an easement he may sue his neighbour for a perpetual injunction restraining him from building so as to disturb the easement and may at any time after the institution of the suit apply to the Court under r 2 below for a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from building until the suit is disposed of. Interference with A's easement is an "injury" within the meaning of r 2 below.

Principles governing temporary injunction—"The granting of a temporary injunction under the powers conferred by this [rule] is a matter of discretion. True it is a matter of judicial discretion. But if the Court which grants the injunction rightly appreciate the facts and applies to those facts the true principles, then that is a sound exercise of judicial discretion" (c). One of those principles is that the Court in granting a temporary injunction must first see that there is a bona fide contention between the parties, and then, on which side, in the event of success, will lie the balance of inconvenience if the injunction does not issue (d). Or, as stated in the judgment of Cotton, L. J., in Preston v. Luck (e), to entitle a plaintiff, to an interlocutory injunction the Court should be satisfied that there is a serious question to be tried at the hearing and that on the facts before it there is a probability that the plaintiff is entitled to relief. The real point, upon an application for a temporary injunction, is not how the question ought to be decided at the hearing of the case, but whether there is a substantial question to be investigated and whether matters should not be preserved in statu quo until that question can be finally disposed of (f). Another principle is that where a perpetual injunction is sued for, and the plaintiff applies for a temporary injunction, the Court should grant a temporary injunction if the effect of not granting such an injunction will be to deprive the plaintiff for ever of the right claimed by him in the suit (g). See notes to r 2, "Principles governing temporary injunction to restrain breach of contracts."

Duration of temporary injunction—A temporary injunction may be granted until the suit is disposed of or until the further order of the Court. When a temporary injunction is granted 'until the further order of the Court' and the injunction is not dissolved pending the suit, it comes to an end when the suit is disposed of. After the decree is passed the Court that passed the decree has no power to grant a further temporary injunction (h). But if an appeal is referred from the decree, the Appellate Court, it would seem, may grant a temporary injunction under this rule (i). In an appeal from an order refusing a temporary injunction, the Appellate Court granted a temporary injunction "pending final decision of the suit," and this was held to terminate with the decree of the lower Court (j).

A sues B in the Court of a Subordinate Judge for a declaration of his title to certain property, and obtains a temporary injunction restraining B from selling the property, which B was about to sell, until the suit is disposed of. A fails to prove his title to the property, and the suit is dismissed. A appeals from the decree to the High Court. As the dismissal of the suit has dissolved the injunction and enabled B to sell the property, A applies to the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a further injunction restraining B from selling the property until the appeal to the High Court has been heard. The Subordinate Judge has no power to grant the injunction. Gossain Money v. Guru Pershad (1885) 11 Cal 146. In the above case, the Court said: "If any Court has a right to grant an injunction now, we presume it would be the Court of Appeal."

O. 39, r. 1 Effect of temporary injunction—A temporary injunction granted under this rule has not the effect of making a subsequent alienation of the property void. Hence if a party, against whom a temporary injunction is granted restraining him from alienating the property, sells or mortgages the property pending the injunction, the sale or mortgage is not void. The only penalty A incurs by alienating the property, in spite of the injunction is that prescribed by r. 2 (3), namely, that other property belonging to him may be attached and sold in order to award out of the sale proceeds compensation to the party on whose application the injunction was granted, and he may also be detained in the civil prison. In this respect a temporary injunction has a different effect from an attachment, for it will be seen on referring to s. 64 that when property is attached any private transfer of the property contrary to the attachment is void against all claims enforceable under the attachment (1).

"Property in dispute in a suit."—Note that the property in respect of which an injunction may be granted in the circumstances mentioned in cl. (a) of this rule must be property in dispute in the suit, and no other (1), for you cannot get an injunction to restrain a man who is alleged to be a debtor from parting with his property (m). Where a plaintiff who is out of possession claims possession, the Court will not grant an injunction against the defendant in possession under a claim of right unless the threatened injury will be irreparable, and an injunction may be granted as to the user of premises which the plaintiff has leased to the defendant (n). In any event the plaintiff must show a prima facie case in support of the title asserted by him (o). For this reason the Court will as a rule refuse interim injunctions to protect patents of recent origin (p). See notes to r. 7 below.

An application for an injunction restraining a party to the suit from interfering with the applicant's right to worship in, and to have free access, to a temple which was the subject matter of the suit, pending the disposal of the suit, does not fall either under cl. (a) or cl. (b) of this rule (q).

The Court has no jurisdiction to grant an injunction restraining the President of the Legislative Assembly from proceeding with a Bill as that is an act which inflicts no legal wrong upon the plaintiff (r).

Disposal of property in fraud of creditors—The threat or intent to remove or dispose of property with a view to defraud creditors must be proved by definite evidence (s).

"Property in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of a decree."—Certain property attached in execution of a decree obtained by A against B is notified for sale at the instance of A. C, alleging that the property belongs to him and not to B, sues A and B for a declaration of his title to the property, and applied for an injunction under this rule to restrain A from bringing the property to sale until the suit is disposed of. Has the Court power to grant the injunction under this rule? Yes, for the case is one in which the property in dispute in the suit is "in danger of being wrongfully sold in execution of the decree." It is immaterial that the Court in which the suit is brought is different from the Court executing the decree, or, so long as it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, that it is a Court of lower grade than the Court executing the decree. Thus if the Court executing the decree is the Court of a District Judge,

O. 39, r. 1 can be exercised if A is not resident within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, for Sale, J., held that the power can be exercised even if A did not reside within the limits of the jurisdiction (d), while Fletcher, J., (e) and Stephen, J. (f) held that it cannot be exercised unless A resided within those limits. The point arose in a Bombay case but it was there held that as A had been served and had appeared in the suit without protest, he must be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the Bombay Court and the Court had therefore power to grant the injunction (g), so also in a Patna case (h)

The High Court of Bombay has also held that it has inherent power to restrain by injunction a defendant in a suit in the High Court from proceeding with a suit filed by him in the Small Causes Court at Bombay referring to the same matter (i)

The Allahabad High Court holds that its inherent powers do not justify its granting an injunction to restrain a party from continuing partition proceedings in a Revenue Court pending a suit on title (j)

The next question to consider is, whether the power of a Chartered High Court to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court is confined to suits pending in a Court subordinate thereto, or whether it extends to suits pending in any Court in British India. In one of the cases cited above (k), the High Court of Calcutta made an order restraining a party from proceeding with a suit pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, a Court subordinate to the High Court of Allahabad. In a recent Bombay case, Macleod, J., expressed the opinion that though the High Court has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Court subordinate to it, it has no such power in respect of a suit, pending in a Court not subordinate to it (l). In support of the above view the learned Judge relied on the provisions of s. 56, cl. (b), of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, by which it is enacted that an injunction cannot be granted to stay proceedings in a Court not subordinate to that from which the injunction is sought.

A further question that arises in this connection is whether a British Indian Court has power to restrain a party from proceeding with a suit pending in a Court of a Native State. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that it has if there was a real hardship on the party before it or something vexatious or oppressive (m). The Calcutta High Court will grant such an injunction if applied for promptly and before time and trouble has been expended in the foreign suit (n). In England an injunction is granted to stay an action commenced in a foreign jurisdiction only if the applicant proves a substantial case of vexation resulting from the identity of proceedings, remedies and benefits or from the existence of some motive other than a bona fide desire to determine disputes (o).

Appeal.—No appeal lies from an order of a High Court refusing to restrain a defendant from prosecuting his suit in another Court. Such an order is not appealable under the Code. Nor is it a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Charter (p).

Power of High Court "to stay proceedings" pending in a subordinate Court—The preceding paragraph refers to the power of a Chartered High Court to restrain a party to a suit pending before it from proceeding with a suit pending in another Court. The question now to be considered is whether a Chartered High Court has power in a suit pending before it to issue a prohibition to a subordinate Court in the mufassal from proceeding with a suit pending before the latter Court, and if so, whether that power can be exercised by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court. It has been held by a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court that a Chartered High Court has power to make an order directing a Subordinate Court not to proceed and that it cannot be made by a single Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court (q). In the case cited above, an order was made by Macleod, J., in a suit pending before him, staying a suit pending in the Ratnagiri Court. It was assumed by a majority of the Full Bench that such an order was a prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court, and not merely to the parties, from proceeding with the suit in that Court, and it was held that Macleod, J., had no jurisdiction to make an order. On the other hand, Macleod, J., who was one of the Judges constituting the Full Bench, declined to read his order as a direct prohibition to the Ratnagiri Court, and held that a single Judge sitting on the Original Side was competent to restrain the parties in a suit before him from proceeding with a suit in a Subordinate Judge's Court in the mufassal, and so in effect stay the proceedings within the meaning of sec 56, cl (b) referred to above. As to transfer of suits from Presidency Small Cause Courts to High Court, see notes to cl 13 of the Letters Patent.

This rule does not apply to probate proceedings—An injunction cannot be granted under this rule in a probate proceeding. The reason is that the only question in controversy in such a proceeding is that of representation of the estate of the deceased, there is no question of title in such a proceeding, and it cannot therefore be said that there is "any property in dispute" in such a proceeding as contemplated by this rule. If the Court is satisfied that the estate of the deceased is in danger of being wasted or wrongfully alienated, it may appoint an administrator pendente lite, and it may also make an order under r 7 below, but it cannot grant an injunction under this rule (r).

Form.—For form of temporary injunction see App F, form no 8

(2) The Court may by order grant such injunction, on such terms as to the duration of the injunction, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as the Court thinks fit.

(3) In case of disobedience, or of breach of any such terms, the Court granting an injunction may order the property of the person guilty of such disobedience or breach to be attached, and may also order such person to be detained in the civil prison for a term not exceeding six months, unless in the meantime the Court directs his release.

(4) No attachment under this rule shall remain in force for more than one year, at the end of which time, if the disobedience or breach continues, the property attached may be sold, and out of the proceeds the Court may award such compensation as it thinks fit, and shall pay the balance, if any, to the party entitled thereto.

Alterations in the rule:—

1. The words "of any kind" after the word "injury" in sub r (1) are new See notes below under the head "Scope of the rule"
2. The words, "unless in the meantime the Court directs his release" in sub r. (3) are also new See in this connection the undermentioned case (s)

Scope of the rule.—Rule 1 enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions in the cases specified in cls (a) and (b) thereof. The present rule enables the Court to grant temporary injunctions to restrain a defendant from committing the breach of a contract or other injury of any kind. The words "of any kind" are new. They have been added to supersede an Allahabad decision where it was held that the words "other injury" in the old section did not include acts of trespass upon property (t). Such acts are now within this rule. In a Bombay case a lessee sought to execute a decree to evict his sub lessee. But at the date of the decree the term of the head lease had expired and the head lessor sued to restrain the lessee from taking possession. Macleod, C.J., held that neither rule 1 nor rule 2 applied (u). A Court hearing an election petition under rules framed under the Madras District Municipalities Act cannot grant a temporary injunction restraining the candidate from taking his seat (s).

Principles governing temporary injunction to restrain breach of contract.—Temporary injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the present rule. Perpetual injunctions to restrain the breach of a contract are regulated by the Specific Relief Act, 1877, s 56, cl (f) and s 57. Section 56, cl (f), of the Specific Relief Act, provides that a perpetual injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced. Now the performance of a contract is not specifically enforced where damages would afford adequate relief. Hence no injunction can be granted where damages afford adequate relief. "The very first principle of injunction law is that prima facie you do not obtain injunctions to restrain actionable wrongs [or for breach of contracts] for which damages are the proper remedy" (w) In the Bombay case of Aussererungji v Gordon (x) Sir Charles Sargent said that the issue of a temporary injunction is governed by the same principles as the granting of a permanent injunction at the trial of a case Referring to these observations, Sir Arnold White in a Madras case said "Now, having regard to the fact that the law with regard to the granting of a perpetual injunction is to be found in the Specific Relief Act and is laid down with great precision, and that the law with regard to the granting of a temporary injunction is to be found in the Code of Civil Procedure and is declared to be a matter for discretion, if it were necessary to consider the point, I am not sure I should be prepared to go quite so far as Sir Charles Sargent" (y) However that may be, the following two rules seem to govern all cases on the subject now under consideration —

1 If a suit is brought for specific performance of a contract and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from committing a breach of the contract, and the plaintiff applies for a temporary injunction to prevent the breach of the contract until the suit is disposed of, the Court will decline to grant a temporary injunction if the plaint and the affidavits filed by the parties show on the face of them that the case is not one for a perpetual injunction or for specific performance The refusal of the application for a temporary injunction in (1) Bhaskar v Bapu Saju (z), (2) Haji Abdul v Haji Abdul (a), (3) Aussererungji v Gordon (b), (4) Assur v Ratanbai (c), and (5) In the matter of Ganpat Narain (d) may be referred to this rule In the first case, the suit was by an association of artisans consisting of 57 members for an injunction against one of them to restrain him from committing the breach of a contract which provided that all the members of the association should bring the business of working and carving in wood into one shop and should divide the profits among them and that no member should take any order on his own account The plaintiffs applied for a temporary injunction against the defendant to prevent the breach of the contract until the disposal of the suit, but the injunction was refused for the agreement being on the face of it illegal (as the association though it consisted of 57 members was not registered as a Company), no specific performance or injunction could be granted In the second case the suit was for a perpetual injunction to prevent the breach of an agreement for a charter party The Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach on the ground that a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the breach of such an agreement, though a perpetual injunction might be granted to prevent the breach of an actually completed charter party In the third case an application for a temporary injunction was made by the agents of a company as plaintiffs to restrain the company from employing a firm of solicitors in contravention of an agreement between the company and the agents where by the plaintiff's firm were appointed agents of the company for 25 years and the agents were empowered to employ solicitors for the company during that period The Court refused the application on the ground that since a perpetual injunction could not be granted to restrain the company from employing persons other than the plaintiff's firm as agents of the company, a temporary injunction should not be granted to restrain the company from employing solicitors other than those of the plaintiff's choice In the fourth case, the Court refused to grant a temporary injunction to restrain a Hindu widow from adopting a son in breach of an agreement entered into by her not to adopt a son The order of refusal was based on the ground that the Court could not grant a perpetual

O. 39, r. 2 daughter in marriage to the plaintiff. The plaintiff applied for an interim injunction to restrain the defendant from giving away the girl in marriage to another person but the application was refused on the ground that the contract was not one of which specific performance could be enforced or the breach of which could be restrained by a perpetual injunction.

2 The converse of rule (1) is not always true, that is the Court will not grant a temporary injunction before the hearing in every case where a perpetual injunction might fitly be granted at the hearing, for to justify a temporary injunction, not only must the case be such that an injunction is the appropriate relief, but there must be the further ingredient that unless the defendant is restrained forthwith by a temporary injunction, irreparable injury or inconvenience may result to the plaintiff before the suit is decided upon its merits (e). But if a case is a proper one for specific performance, and irreparable injury is likely to be caused to the plaintiff unless the breach of the contract is forthwith restrained, the Court will grant a temporary injunction to restrain the breach of the contract. Thus where A sued B for specific performance of a contract whereby in consideration of A having advanced money to B to working certain mica mines B had agreed to deliver all the mica produced from the mines to A, and not to deliver any part on thereof to any other person, and also sued for an injunction to restrain the breach of this agreement and in the suit applied for a temporary injunction to restrain B from delivering any portion of the mica to another firm to whom B had arranged in breach of his contract to consign a portion the Court held that the case was a fit one for a temporary injunction, and the injunction was granted (f). But if the existence of the contract itself is denied no temporary injunction can be granted (g), nor should a temporary injunction be granted merely because the suit would otherwise be infructuous (h).

Sub rule (3)—The powers conferred by this sub rule can only be exercised if the Court is set in motion by a party who deems himself aggrieved, hence where a District Court committed a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction of the Court, it was held that the order of committal was ultra vires. Note however, that a High Court has inherent power to commit a defaulting party for contempt, hence a High Court can commit a defendant to jail of its own motion for disobeying an injunction issued by such Court (i). See sec 151 above.

Under sub r (3) the Court can in its discretion order either arrest or attachment on property, it is not bound in the first instance to make an order of attachment and then order imprisonment (j). There is no foundation for the proposition that the Court can only make an order of imprisonment after an order of attachment. Persons who abet disobedience of an injunction cannot be punished under this rule (k).

If the application to commit was made while the suit was pending the fact that the order on the application was made after the suit was dismissed does not affect the powers of the Court to take action for disobedience to the injunction (l).

A Court to which the business of the Court granting the injunction is transferred can exercise powers of punishment under this sub rule (m).

Temporary mandatory injunction—The Courts in England have the power to grant mandatory injunctions on interlocutory applications (n) And so have Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction (o) The same power is possessed by Courts in the mofussil (p)

Appeal—An appeal lies under O 43 r 1 (r) from an order declining to order arrest or attachment of property for disobedience of an interlocutory injunction granted under this rule and the Appellate Court may on appeal pass the order which the lower Court should have passed (q) An undertaking not to dispose of property during the pendency of a suit given by a defendant in order to avoid an attachment has the effect of the grant of an injunction An appeal lies from an order refusing to take proceedings for breach of such an undertaking (r)

3. [S. 494.] The Court shall in all cases, except where it appears that the object of granting the injunction would be defeated by the delay, before granting an injunction, direct notice of the application for the same to be given to the opposite party

ORDER XL

Appointment of Receivers

1. [S. 503.] (1) Where it appears O. 4 to the Court to be just and convenient, the Court may by order—

Appointment of Receivers

(a) appoint a receiver of any property, whether before or after decree,

O. 40, r. 1

- (b) remove any person from the possession or custody of the property ;
- (c) commit the same to the possession, custody or management of the receiver ; and
- (d) confer upon the receiver all such powers, as to bringing and defending suits and for the realisation, management, protection, preservation and improvement of the property, the collection of the rents and profits thereof, the application and disposal of such rents and profits, and the execution of documents as the owner himself has, or such of those powers as the Court thinks fit.

(2) Nothing in this rule shall authorize the Court to remove from the possession or custody of property any person whom any party to the suit has not a present right so to remove.

Alterations in the rule—

- 1 The words "to be just and convenient" have been substituted for the words "to be necessary for the realization, preservation or better custody, or management of any property, movable or immovable, the subject of a suit or attachment" The effect of this amendment is that the Court may now appoint a receiver not only in the particular cases specified in the old section, but in every case in which it appears to the Court to be just and convenient to do so Thus a receiver may be appointed in a suit for partition (w) See notes below under the head "Just and convenient" As to execution of decrees by appointment of a receiver, see s 51, cl (d)
- 2 The words "whether before or after decree" in cl (a) are new They give effect to the undermentioned decision under the old section (x)
- 3 The words "subject matter of a suit" which occurred in the corresponding s 503 of the Code of 1882 have been omitted See notes below under the head "Receiver in proceedings other than a suit"

Receiver in proceedings other than a suit—Sec 503 of the Code of 1882 contained the words "subject matter of a suit" The result was that under that section a receiver could only be appointed in a suit Those words have been omitted in the present rule so that a receiver may now be appointed even in proceedings other than a suit (y) A Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in proceedings under the Succession Certificate Act (z) ; or in proceedings for the removal of a trustee under s 74 of the Trusts Act (a), but may appoint a receiver in a testamentary suit (b), or proceeding under the Guardian and Wards Act (c) If no suit or litigious proceeding is pending with reference to the property, the Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of it A receiver therefore cannot be appointed after the suit is compromised (d)

Application in open Court—The appointment of a receiver is a serious matter involving serious consequences and orders for the appointment of a receiver should be made in open Court and not in the summary manner in which directions are given in Chambers in Commercial causes (e)

Courts empowered under this order.—Under the Code of 1882 (s 505), a receiver could only be appointed by High Courts and District Courts, and not by the Courts subordinate to District Courts This bar has been now removed by the omission of s. 505 A receiver may now be appointed by subordinate Judges also

A Receiver is an officer of the Court.—"The object and purpose of the appointment of a receiver may generally be stated to be the preservation of the subject-matter of the litigation pending a judicial determination of the rights of the parties thereto" (f) "The receiver is appointed for the benefit of all concerned, he is the representative of the Court and of all parties interested in the litigation, wherein he is appointed" (g) The appointment [of a receiver] is the act of the Court and made in the interests of justice [A receiver] is an officer or representative of the Court, and subject to its orders His possession is the possession of the Court by its receiver, and the tenants in possession, when he is appointed to receive rents and profits of immovable property, become virtually tenants pro hac vice of the Court, their landlord His possession is the possession of all the parties to the proceedings according to their titles The moneys in his hands are in custodia legis for the person who can make a title to them (h)

Legal consequences arising from the fact that a receiver is an officer of the Court —

(1) Attachment—Property in the hands of a receiver cannot be attached without the leave of the Court first obtained Thus if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B, and C obtains a decree against A or B, C cannot in execution of his decree attach the property in the hands of the receiver without the leave of the Court, such an attachment is an interference with the Court's possession through its officer, the receiver (i) But if a receiver is appointed of certain property in a suit between A and B, and the property was mortgaged by A to C before the receiver was appointed, and C obtains a decree for sale of the mortgaged property C may bring the property to sale, though it may be in the hands of the receiver, without the leave of the Court The reason is that no attachment is necessary before sale in the case of a mortgage-decree and no attachment being necessary, there cannot be any interference with the possession of the receiver (j)

(2) Suit by or against receiver Leave of Court—A receiver cannot sue or be sued except with the leave of the Court by which he was appointed receiver (k) A party feeling aggrieved by the conduct of a receiver may seek redress against him in the very suit in which he was appointed receiver, or he may bring a separate suit against the

O. 40, r. 1 receiver in which case he must obtain the leave of the Court (i) The application in the suit is for an examination pro interesse suo (m) The Court will dispose of the matter summarily in simple cases (n) and if the applicant has shown diligence (o) But if questions of title are involved, the Court will authorize a suit to be brought against the receiver (p) No appeal lies against an order granting leave to sue a receiver (q) There is no statutory provision which requires a party to take the leave of the Court to sue a receiver The rule has come down to us as a part of the rules of equity, binding upon all Courts of Justice in this country It is a rule based upon public policy which requires that when the Court has assumed possession of a property in the interest of the litigants before it the authority of the Court is not to be obstructed by suits designed to disturb the possession of the Court The institution of such suits is in the eye of the law a contempt of the authority of the Court, and therefore the party contemplating such a suit is required to take the leave of the Court so as to absolve himself from that charge The grant of such leave is made not in exercise of any power conferred by statute but in exercise of the inherent power which every Court possesses to prevent acts which constitute or are akin to an abuse of its authority (r) By giving leave to sue its receiver the Court does not relinquish possession of the property to the Court where the claim of the third party is asserted (s) The Court in which the suit is filed has no jurisdiction to issue an injunction restraining the receiver from dealing with the property (t) nor can the third party if he obtains a decree enforce it in execution His proper course is to apply to the Court which appointed the receiver to direct the receiver to act in accordance with the decree (u) In Pramatha Nath v Khetra Nath (v) Bodilly, J held that the leave of the Court to sue a receiver was a condition precedent to the right to sue, and that if the leave was not obtained before suit it could not be granted subsequent to the institution of the suit and the suit should be dismissed This decision was dissented from in subsequent Calcutta cases where it was held that the leave may be granted even after the institution of the suit (w) In the recent Bombay case (x) Pratt, J, after an exhaustive review of the case law on the subject, came to the same conclusion the learned judge held that failure to obtain leave prior to the institution of the suit was cured by subsequent leave As regards suits by a receiver, it has been recently held by the High Court of Calcutta that if the suit is instituted without the leave of the Court, the Court may grant leave after the institution of the suit to continue the suit (y) So also by the Madras High Court (z) No leave is necessary to sue a receiver who has been discharged by the Court and is no longer an officer of the Court when the suit is brought (a)

(2A) Suit against receiver—Notice under s 80—A receiver appointed under this section upon whom the powers under clause (d) have been conferred is a Public Officer under s 2 (17) and no suit can be filed against him without notice under s 80 The leave of the Court does not dispense with the necessity of notice under sec 80 of the Code (b)

(3) Debts incurred by receiver in business—If a receiver is appointed of the estate of a deceased person with authority to continue the business carried on by the deceased and in the course of such business debts are properly incurred by the receiver the person to whom the debts have become due may proceed not only against the receiver personally but also against the estate of the deceased, for the recovery of their debts, and they are entitled to payment of their debts in priority to other creditors of the estate. The right to proceed against the estate is founded on the just and equitable principle that as the acts of a receiver acting within his authority are the acts of the Court, the estate cannot be permitted to enjoy the benefits of those acts without being held liable for the obligations arising out of them (c)

(4) Receiver cannot purchase—A receiver may not purchase property of which he has been appointed receiver (d). Such a purchase offends against the principle that no one should allow himself to get into a position where his interest conflicts with his duty (e).

(5) Agreement controlling receiver's powers—A receiver being an officer of the Court, it is contempt of Court on the part of any of the parties to enter into an agreement with him restricting and controlling his powers. The Court alone has the power to determine the powers of a receiver (f).

(6) Remuneration—A receiver being an officer of the Court it is for the Court to determine his fees or remuneration (r 2 below). Hence a promise by a party to pay the remuneration of a receiver without leave of the Court is against law, and is not binding on the promisor (g).

(7) Criminal Procedure Code s 145—Where a receiver is appointed by a Court of property the subject of a suit a Magistrate has no jurisdiction under sec 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to interfere with him in respect of his possession of the property without the sanction of the Court, his possession being the possession of the Court (h). It may here be noted that a Civil Court has no power under this rule to appoint a receiver in supersession of a receiver appointed by a Magistrate under sec 146, cl. (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code (i). See sub rule (2).

(8) Prosecution of receiver—A receiver appointed by the High Court who has under its orders taken possession of property, cannot be prosecuted for criminal breach of trust in respect thereof without first obtaining the leave of the Court (j).

(9) Attorney of party—The attorney of a party should not be appointed receiver, as such an appointment interrupts the arrangement made by the party for his defence in the suit (l).

"Just and convenient"—These words have been taken from the Judicature Act 1873 s 25 sub s (8). The words in that Act are 'just or convenient', but they have been constructed to mean just and convenient (l). The words just and convenient do not mean that the Court is to appoint a receiver simply because the Court thinks it convenient; they mean that the Court should appoint a receiver for the protection of rights or for the prevention of injury according to legal principles (m). O. 40, r. 1 is discretionary and the discretion must be exercised in accordance with the principles on which judicial discretion is exercised (n). Hence the Court should not appoint a receiver of property in the possession of the defendant who claims it by a legal title, unless the plaintiff can show prima facie that he has a strong case and a good title to the property (o). The Court must consider whether special interference with the possession of a defendant is required there being a well founded fear that the property in question will be dissipated or that other irreparable mischief may be done unless the Court gives its protection (p). On the other hand, where property is shown to be in medio i.e. in the enjoyment of no one the Court can hardly do wrong in appointing a receiver, for it is the common interest of all parties to prevent a scramble (q). The mere circumstance that the appointment of a receiver will do no harm to any one is no ground for appointing a receiver (r), and a receiver cannot be appointed merely for the purpose of ascertaining the income of an estate in order to fix the amount of maintenance to be paid out of it (s). See notes above Alterations in the rules, No. 1 and notes below "Cases in which a receiver may be appointed" See also Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877, s. 44

Which Court may appoint a receiver—The power to appoint a receiver rests only with the Court trying the suit in which it is sought to appoint a receiver. Hence a District Judge has no power to appoint a receiver of property which is the subject of a suit in another Court, even though subordinate to his own (t). A Court should not appoint a receiver when another receiver has been appointed of the same property by another Court in another suit for such a procedure will lead to a conflict of jurisdiction (u).

Whether a receiver can be appointed when an executor is in possession—In England the rule is that the Court will not appoint a receiver against an executor unless gross misconduct is shown (v) and the same rule, it is submitted, applies to the case of an executor of the will of a person subject to the provisions of the Indian Succession Act. This rule, however, does not apply in the case of an executor of the will of a Mahomedan. The reason is that while in the case of persons governed by the Succession Act, a testator can dispose of the whole of his property by his will a Mahomedan testator cannot dispose of more than one third of the property by his will (w).

Where a receiver is appointed of the estate of a deceased person and the estate is being administered by the Court the Court may authorize the receiver to pay out of the estate in his hands pressing claims against the estate (x).

Company—The Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of a company (y). If it is necessary to protect the assets recourse must be had to the provisions of the Companies Acts.

Reference to arbitration—The Court has power to appoint a receiver even after a suit has been referred to arbitration (z).

Temporary injunctions and appointment of receiver—The distinction between a case in which a temporary injunction may be granted and a case in which a receiver may be appointed is that while in either case it must be shown that the property should be preserved from waste or alienation, in the former case it is sufficient if it be shown that the plaintiff in the suit has a fair question to raise as to the existence of the right alleged, while in the latter case a good prima facie title to the property over which the receiver is sought to be appointed has to be made out (a)

When receiver may be appointed—The appointment of a receiver is in the discretion of the Court. The power to appoint a receiver is not to be exercised as a matter of course or for the reason that it can do no harm to appoint one. A receiver should not be appointed in supersession of a bona fide possessor of the property in dispute unless there is some substantial ground for interference (b). The Court has to consider whether special interference with the possession of the defendant is required, there being a well founded fear that the property in question will be dissipated or that other irreparable mischief may be done unless the Court gives its protection (c). The mere fact that a plaintiff in his plaint makes violent and wholesale charges of waste is no ground for the appointment of a receiver (d). The Court will not in a suit against trustees for the possession of land and for mesne profits appoint a receiver merely because the trustee is a poor man from whom mesne profits, if awarded, could not be recovered, unless it is alleged and shown that he was wasting the property (e). The removal, however, under suspicious circumstances of a large amount of property by the defendant during the pendency of a suit in which the question of title to that property would be determined is a good ground for the appointment of a receiver (f). The anxiety of a life tenant to transfer lands to a stranger is a danger to the interests of the reversioner, and it is a matter to be taken into consideration on an application for the appointment of a receiver (g).

Joint Hindu family—The Court will not as a general rule appoint a receiver in a partition suit between members of a joint Hindu family especially where the family property consists of immovable property. To appoint a receiver in such a case special circumstances must be proved (h). A receiver may be appointed in a suit for partition of joint Hindu family property where there is a prima facie case of misappropriation by the manager of the family (i).

Mortgage suits—In a mortgagee's suit for foreclosure or sale where the mortgagee is entitled to enter into possession on default in payment of the mortgage moneys the mortgagee is entitled prima facie to an order for the appointment of a receiver (j). The mortgagee in possession also is entitled to the appointment of a receiver, notwithstanding that he has been paid all his interest and costs out of rents received by him while in possession and that he has surplus rent in his hands. It was so held in Mason v Westoby (k). In that case Bacon V C, said: "It is said that the appointment of a receiver will cause great expense to the mortgagors, but that cannot be helped. The mortgagee acting in accordance with her strict right, enters into possession because she cannot get her interest. As mortgagee in possession she becomes subject to heavy responsibilities, and from those responsibilities she is entitled to be relieved by the appointment of a receiver. She has, however, while in possession, received more than the amount of her interest and costs, but that surplus she must pay to the receiver."

O. 40, r. 1 The appointment of a receiver will be made almost as a matter of course in the case of an English mortgage on an application of the mortgagee if the interest payable under the mortgage is in arrears and the mortgagee is entitled to sell the property for default in payment of interest (l) A receiver is appointed to safeguard the interests of the mortgagee and if after the appointment of a receiver the mortgagor's interest is attached and sold in execution of a money decree, the purchaser is not entitled to the income of the property realized by the receiver before the sale (m) In making the appointment it has been held that the Court will not consider matters that have happened since the application though these may be the subject of a fresh application (n) A receiver may be appointed at the instance of an equitable mortgagee (o), or of a simple mortgagee (p)

A Lahore Judge seems to have held that as O 34 is self contained a receiver should not be appointed in execution of a mortgage decree (g), but this view has been dissented from by the Madras High Court (r)

Testamentary suit—A receiver may be appointed in a testamentary suit (s

Charity suits.—A receiver may be appointed in a suit by the Advocate General under sec 92 of the Code for the administration of public, religious or charitable trusts (f). A decree settling a scheme for the management of a Temple may be enforced by the appointment in execution of a receiver of properties which the scheme placed under the control of the Temple trustee (u).

Partnership suits.—In considering the question of the appointment of a receiver in partnership suits, a distinction has to be drawn between cases in which the contest is between partners and cases in which the contest is between partners on the one hand and non partners on the other.

In the first class of cases that is, where one partner seeks to have a receiver appointed against his co partners, it is necessary to distinguish cases in which the partnership has already been dissolved from those in which the partnership is still subsisting. If the partnership is already dissolved the Court usually appoints a receiver, almost as a matter of course (v). The jurisdiction of the Court to appoint a receiver is not ousted by an arbitration clause providing for a reference to arbitration of all matters in dispute between the parties (w). But if the partnership is still subsisting no receiver will be appointed unless some special grounds for the appointment can be shown. There must be fraud or gross misconduct of some kind (x), or wilful denial of the complaining partners' rights (y) or persistence under cover of right in conduct endangering the assets (z).

In the second class of cases that is, where the contest is between partners on the one hand and non partners on the other, e.g., legal representatives of a late partner, a receiver will not be granted against a member of the firm at the instance of the legal representatives unless some special grounds for the interference of the Court can be established. But it is a matter of course to appoint a receiver where such appointment is sought by a partner against the legal representatives of his late co partner, or where all the partners are dead and an action is pending between their representatives (a)

Rent suit — A receiver cannot be appointed in a suit for rent in which it is not sought to enforce the forfeiture clause, for, in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, a contract creditor before judgment is not entitled to a receiver of property on which he has no lien (b)

Decree for maintenance—Where a decree is passed for maintenance and a charge is created on a specified property to secure payment of the allowance, it is desirable, in order to facilitate execution and to avoid further litigation to appoint a receiver by the decree itself with directions, in case of default of payment to take possession of the property and sell the same, and out of the sale proceeds to pay the allowance (c)

Criminal Procedure Code, sec 145—The fact that there exists in respect of any immovable property an order of a Magistrate passed under sec 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is no bar to the exercise by a Civil Court of the power conferred on it by this rule to appoint a receiver in respect of the same property (d) It is, however, different where a receiver is appointed by a Magistrate under sec 146, cl. (2), of that Code. See note above. Legal consequences arising from the fact that a receiver is an officer of the Court,' no (7)

Receiver and administrator pendente lite—A receiver may be appointed under this rule in a testamentary suit governed by the Probate Act, 1881 (e). The Chancery Division of the High Court of England may appoint a receiver of the estate of the deceased, though proceedings have been commenced by the defendant in the Probate Court and though the defendant is prepared to apply at once in that Court for an administrator pendente lite (f).

Remove any person—This refers to a person other than the receiver (g) The Court should inquire into any claims by persons not parties to the suit before appointing a receiver (h) A usufructuary mortgagee who has obtained a decree for sale is not entitled to possession as against the receiver on an agreement made with the mortgagor (i)

Where security not furnished by receiver—Where the order whereby a person is appointed receiver requires him to give security so that the order is conditional upon his giving the security, he cannot be receiver until the security is given (j) It is otherwise where the order is not conditional but absolute in its terms in such a case the order takes effect immediately, it is made (k)

Receiver of future earnings of judgment debtor—The Court has no jurisdiction to enforce satisfaction of a judgment debt by appointing a receiver of the future earnings of the judgment debtor. Unless a man has assigned or charged his future earnings or has made a sum payable out of them they cannot be prospectively impounded by any of his creditors by any ordinary process of execution whether legal or equitable" (1). the lower Court, and the case is remanded to the lower Court for trial on the merits. After the appeal is over, T forcibly enters into possession of the property in the possession of R as receiver. R applies to the High Court that T may be committed for contempt. It is contended for T that the appeal being over, R must be decreed to have been discharged from the office of receiver when the appellate decree was passed. This contention will not prevail, for though the appeal may be over, R must be regarded as receiver of the property until he is finally discharged by the Court. Therefore R is entitled to make the application to commit T for contempt (y).

A receiver in a partition suit is not discharged merely by the passing of a preliminary decree for partition (z).

Receiver's liability to account.—The Court appointing a receiver in a suit has authority, incidental to its jurisdiction, to order him to account, although the suit may be no longer pending (a). Although the dismissal of a suit may in some cases mean the discharge of the receiver, still the Court has jurisdiction over the receiver who is an officer of the Court. The Court has jurisdiction to require accounts from a receiver, to allow parties to examine accounts and to deal with all matters connected with the management of the receiver (b). Under the rules of the Bombay High Court the receiver has to file his accounts before the Commissioner. The Commissioner if he passes the accounts may issue a certificate, and the accounts so passed are on the footing of an adjusted account and cannot be re opened except for good cause shown (b1). See r 3 (b) below.

Suit by subsequent against former receiver.—A suit cannot be maintained by a present receiver of an estate against the former receiver for the recovery of money alleged to be due by the former receiver to the estate (c).

Receiver's lien—A receiver, though discharged, is entitled to a lien on the estate for all his just claims and allowances. Hence the Court will not compel a receiver, who has been discharged, to make over the property in his possession, until his lien has been satisfied or provided for by a sufficient indemnity (d).

Joint receivers—As a general rule appointment of more than one receiver whether by the same or a different Court, except in case of joint receivers, is not allowable (e). When a receiver is appointed by one Court to take charge of certain properties, another receiver cannot, as a rule, be appointed by a different Court to take possession or exercise control over the same properties without the leave of the former Court, for such an appointment would result in a conflict of jurisdiction (e1).

Appeal—An appeal lies not only from an order granting an application to appoint a receiver, but from an order rejecting such application (f) [O 43, r 1, cl. (s)]. The Calcutta High Court holds that no appeal lies from an order appointing a receiver on condition of his furnishing security until the security is furnished (g), but such an order is appealable as a judgment under the Letters Patent (h). But, no appeal lies from directions given by a Court in passing receiver's accounts. Such directions do not come within any of the four clauses of sub r (1) (i). No appeal, however, lies to the appointment would result in a conflict of jurisdiction (e1).

Suit by subsequent against former receiver.—A suit cannot be maintained by a present receiver of an estate against the former receiver for the recovery of money alleged to be due by the former receiver to the estate (c).

Joint receivers.—As a general rule appointment of more than one receiver whether by the same or a different Court, except in case of joint receivers, is not allowable (e).

Appeal.—An appeal lies not only from an order granting an application to appoint a receiver, but from an order rejecting such application (f) [O 43, r. 1, cl. (s)]. The Calcutta High Court holds that no appeal lies from an order appointing a receiver on condition of his furnishing security until the security is furnished (g), but such an order is appealable as a judgment under the Letters Patent (h). But, no appeal lies from directions given by a Court in passing receiver's accounts. Such directions do not come within any of the four clauses of sub r. 11 (i). No appeal lies from

O. 40, r. 1 Privy Council from an order refusing to appoint a receiver (j) An order refusing to remove a receiver is not appealable (k) The Calcutta High Court has held that an appeal lies under O 43 r 1 cl (s) from an order removing a receiver on the ground that a power to appoint includes a power to remove (l) But the receiver himself cannot appeal from an order removing him (m)

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (n) Bombay (o) and Allahabad (p) that an order that a receiver be appointed without appointing anybody by name as receiver and adjourning the application to a later date for nominating a receiver is not an order within the meaning of this rule and it is not therefore appealable under O 43 r 1 cl (s) The contrary has been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (q) and by the Patna High Court (r) No appeal lies from an order merely expressing an intention of appointing a receiver and calling upon parties to suggest names (s)

A receiver is appointed of B's property in a suit by A against B C claims to be in possession of the property under an agreement between him and B and he objects to the appointment of the receiver but the objection is dismissed The order comes within this rule though C is not a party to the suit and is therefore appealable (t) But a stranger who is not in possession has no right to object and no appeal lies from an order dismissing his objection (u) An order appointing a receiver pending an appeal on for the appointment of a common manager under sec 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 also falls under this rule and is therefore appealable under O 43 r 1 cl (s) (v)

Letters Patent appeal—An order directing a receiver in a suit to advance money to a guardian ad litem to enable him to conduct the defence on behalf of a minor defendant is not a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and no appeal lies therefrom A receiver appointed under the Letters Patent and a appointment of a receiver observed that as a unusual occasion for its exercise the power of making interlocutory orders is one which is not a suitable subject for review (z)

Revision—If a Court appoints a receiver in a case in which it has no jurisdiction to do so as for instance in a proceeding under the Succession Certificate Act 1889 the High Court may interfere in revision (a)

A receiver cannot delegate his powers to others—Where a receiver is appointed to collect the rents of an estate it is his duty to collect the rents himself or where the rents are collected by a clerk on his behalf to receive the rents and to keep proper accounts thereof If the rents received by the clerk are misappropriated the receiver is bound to make good the loss He is not justified in delegating or entrusting to another a duty entrusted to him by the Court (b)

Summary jurisdiction—Where the matter complained of rests on an agreement which has not been carried out the Court may interfere to prevent its receiver giving effect to the proposed agreement, and this it may do on the mere application of a party to the suit (c). But where the matter has passed out of the stage of agreement as where a lease has already been granted by the receiver, no summary order could be passed to set aside the lease but the party aggrieved must proceed by suit against the receiver (d).

Foreign receiver—A receiver appointed by a Baroda Court of property in British India is entitled to sue in British Courts (e).

When receiver should be joined as a party to a suit—A receiver is not a necessary party to a suit for a declaration of title and possession of property of which he is appointed receiver (f) nor can he be made a party to a proceeding under sec. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code merely in his capacity of receiver (g). There is no right of action against a Tahsildar or manager appointed by a receiver (h). It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that where the property in the hands of a receiver is intended to be affected by the result of a suit, the receiver is a proper and necessary party to the suit by way of addition to the parties primarily responsible the reason given being that although the appointment of a receiver does not of itself debar the creditor of the person over whose estate the receiver has been appointed from suing for his claim, yet if the object of the suit is to interfere with the possession of the receiver of the jurisdiction of the Court appointing the receiver, leave of the Court must be obtained and the receiver made a party to the suit (i). In one of these cases (j) a receiver was appointed of the estate of a deceased Hindu in a suit brought by his sons for administration of his estate. One of the creditors of the deceased filed a suit against the sons and joined the receiver as a party to the suit. It was held that the receiver was a proper and a necessary party to the suit and that if he were not added as a party to the suit the suit was liable to be dismissed. In a Bombay case (k) also a creditor of the deceased in a suit brought by him against the sons of the deceased joined as a party the receiver of the estate of the deceased appointed in an administration suit brought by the sons. The Small Causes Court passed a decree not only against the sons but also against the receiver. In revision it was held that no relief could be granted against the receiver in a suit filed in the Small Causes Court and the decree passed by that Court was set aside. In the course of the judgment Macleod C. J., said: "If a party makes a claim for money due by a person who is dead against his representatives then he can only get a decree against the representatives, to the extent of the assets in their hands and if the estate is not in their hands but in the hands of a receiver the plaintiff will have to go to the Court that appointed the receiver, in order to attach the property in his hands. But by no possible conception could the receiver be a necessary party in a suit to decide whether the plaintiff was entitled against the legal representatives of the deceased to recover money which he had advanced to the deceased in his life time."

2. [S. 503, cl. (d).] The Court may by general or special order fix the amount to be paid as remuneration for the services of the receiver.

Remuneration

Remuneration.—See notes to r 1 above under the same head. See also notes to r 1, “Receiver’s lien”. If the remuneration fixed by the Court is 5 per cent of the gross sales, the amount is calculated on the actual sale proceeds not including trade discount (i). It has been held that the Court has inherent jurisdiction to order a plaintiff to refund to a party whom he has wrongly impleaded in a suit, the commission and charges incurred by a receiver of the property of that party when the suit as against him is dismissed and the receivership cancelled (m).

3. [S. 503, 2nd part.] Every receiver so appointed shall—

Duties

- (a) furnish such security (if any) as the Court thinks fit, duly to account for what he shall receive in respect of the property,
- (b) submit his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs,
- (c) pay the amount due from him as the Court directs; and
- (d) be responsible for any loss occasioned to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence.

Security.—Under clause (a) the Court has a discretion to appoint a receiver without security but the Privy Council have said that this should be done only in the most exceptional circumstances (n).

Submit his accounts.—The accounts should be supported by vouchers which will be admitted as evidence of payment unless reasonable ground for impeaching them is shown (o). Objections to the system of management adopted by the receiver cannot be heard as exceptions to the receiver’s accounts, but may be the subject of a scheme to be submitted for the orders of the Court (p). An application to take accounts against a receiver on a footing of wilful default and neglect must be made by suit and cannot be entertained when the receiver is passing his accounts (q). See notes to r 1 above, “Receiver’s liability to account”.

Appeal.—There is no right of appeal from the orders of the Court giving directions in passing a receiver’s accounts (r).

4. [New] Where a receiver—

- (a) fails to submit his accounts at such periods and in such form as the Court directs or
- (b) fails to pay the amount due from him as the Court directs, or
- (c) occasions loss to the property by his wilful default or gross negligence, the Court may direct his property to be attached and may sell such property, and may apply the proceeds to make good any amount found to be due from him or any loss occasioned by him, and shall pay the balance (if any) to the receiver.

"Loss to property"—The word "property" includes the income of property (a) If any loss is occasioned to the property by the wilful default or gross negligence of the receiver, the party on whose application the receiver was appointed is not liable (for the receiver is not his agent) but the estate bears the loss in the first instance. The party damaged may then proceed against the receiver (t)

In Brij Indar v Jas Indar (u), a preliminary decree was passed in an administration suit under which a scheme was framed for the payment by the respondent to the appellant of an annuity charged upon properties bequeathed to the respondent. A receiver was appointed with power to sell certain securities which were part of the estate in order to pay the arrears of the annuity. The receiver sold the securities but misappropriated the sum realized. The Privy Council held that the charge created by the decree was in no way affected by the embezzlement of the receiver. Besides the arrears the receiver also embezzled some instalments of the annuity which fell due after the decree. As to this their Lordships said: "Counsel for the respondent have been unable to point to any order of the Court under which the respondent paid or even was authorized to pay these sums to the receiver and it would be impossible to hold that he was the agent of the appellant with authority to receive payment on her behalf." The appellant was therefore entitled to enforce her charge both as to past and future annuities.

"Removal of receiver"—A receiver should not be allowed to continue in office if he fails to comply with the order of the Court to submit his accounts. Applications for removal should be made to the Court which appointed him (v)

The Court may direct his property to be attached—The property may be attached, even after the receiver's death, in the hands of his legal representatives (w)

"Wilful default."—In Calcutta, when a party seeks accounts against a receiver on the basis of wilful default and neglect, the practice is to proceed by a suit and not by an application (x)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this rule [O 43, r 1, cl. (s)] But no appeal lies from an order declaring a receiver liable in respect of a sum of money (y)

Nor does an appeal lie from an order deciding that a receiver is liable to submit accounts (a), or to pay a sum of money into Court (a), or to pay damages (b). In such cases the order is made by the Court in the exercise of its control over the receiver's administration and no appeal lies. But if after the order is passed the receiver disobeys the order and the Court enforces the order by an attachment of the receiver's property an appeal lies (c). Again if the Court finds the receiver liable for gross negligence and in default of payment by the receiver orders the plaintiff to realise the amount from the receiver's security, that is an order under this rule and an appeal lies (d).

A receiver disobeying an order of a Chartered High Court for the payment of money is liable to be committed for contempt of Court (e).

Appeals from Original Decrees.

O. 41, r. 1

1. [S. 541.] (1) Every appeal shall be preferred in the form of a memorandum signed by the appellant or his pleader and presented to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf. The memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and (unless the Appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded.

Memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of decree and of judgment.—O 41, r 1, makes it an inflexible rule that in the case of appeals from decrees the memorandum of appeal shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree. The Court cannot dispense with it, for the rule is imperative (i). A copy merely of the judgment is not sufficient even if the decree has not yet been drawn up (j), nor will a copy of a translation suffice (l). If a copy of the decree is filed after the expiration of the period

Grounds of objection.—The grounds of objection must be such as arise from the pleadings and evidence, and are necessary for the decision of the case (o). The appellant

supplementary proceeding, and not an appeal, is the right procedure (s).

Grounds of objection which may be taken for the first time in appeal.—There are certain points which, though not taken in the lower Court, may yet be taken for the first time before the appellate Court. Thus an objection to the jurisdiction of the lower Court to entertain the suit may be taken for the first time in appeal (t). Similarly a point of law arising out of admitted facts and which does not take the opponent by surprise (u) or an objection on the score of a defect fatal to the suit

Limitation—As to the period of limitation for appeals, see Limitation Act, 1908, sch I, arts. 151, 152 and 156 Sec 5 of the Limitation Act provides that an appeal may be admitted after the period of limitation, if the appellant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal within such period Sec 12 of the same Act provides that in computing the period of limitation provided for an appeal, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree appealed from should be excluded An appeal under sec 169 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, to which the Code of Civil Procedure applies was filed as a joint appeal under the mistaken impression that the cases had been consolidated, but the Lahore High Court on the ground that the mistake was one of form, allowed the second appellant to put in a separate appeal (b) See notes to r 2 below, "Leave of Court Limitation"

When appellate Court may not interfere with findings of fact—Two conflicting view points have to be reconciled, namely, on the one hand, the undoubted duty of the Court of appeal to review the recorded evidence and to draw its own inferences and conclusions, and, on the other hand, the unquestioned weight which must be attached to the opinion of the Judge of the primary Court who had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and noting their looks and manner (c) Generally speaking, it is undesirable for an appellate Court to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial judge who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attaches to one or other of conflicting witnesses The view of the trial judge as to the credibility of witnesses should not be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the appellate Court (d)

Consolidation of appeals—The Code contains no provisions for consolidating suits or appeals Whether or not the Court has jurisdiction to consolidate appeals, it will not do so unless before the hearing of the suits consolidation is asked for of the suits and unless the evidence given in the two cases is common to both of them (e) See notes to sec 151, "Inherent powers of Court" cl (a)

2. [S. 542.] The appellant shall not, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal, but the Appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this rule

Grounds which may be taken in appeal

Appellate Court, in deciding the appeal, shall not be confined to the grounds of objection set forth in the memorandum of appeal or taken by leave of the Court under this rule

Provided that the Court shall not rest its decision on any other ground unless the party who may be affected thereby has had a sufficient opportunity of contesting the case on that ground

Leave of Court Limitation—The appellant cannot, except by leave of the Court, urge or be heard in support of any ground of objection not set forth in the memorandum of appeal. Thus if the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is not taken

But the leave should not be refused if the point of limitation arises on the face of the plea (g). Again, under the latter part of this rule, the appellate Court can of its own motion take cognizance of the question as to whether the suit is barred by limitation, though the plea of limitation has not been taken in the memorandum of appeal and rest its decision on that ground, provided the opposite party is given an opportunity of being heard on the point. In either case, however, the bar of limitation must be patent on the face of the proceedings (h). If it is not, and the plea involves a fresh finding of fact, the plea should not be allowed (i). The same rules apply where the plea that the suit is barred by limitation is raised for the first time in second appeal (j).

The case put above must be distinguished from the case contemplated by s 3 of the Limitation Act, 1908. That section provides that every suit instituted and every appeal preferred after the period of limitation shall be dismissed although limitation has not been set up as a defence. This means that under s 3 it is the duty of the Court of first instance to dismiss a suit if it is barred by limitation, whether the plea of limitation has been taken by the defendant or not (k). Similarly it is the duty of the appellate Court to dismiss an appeal before it, if the appeal was barred by limitation when presented, barred. Similarly the said section does not impose any duty upon the second appellate Court to entertain the plea of limitation, if the question is not whether the second appeal is barred by limitation but whether the first appeal was so barred. It is the provisions of the present rule that apply to the two last mentioned cases, and not the provisions of s 3 of the Limitation Act. Hence in those cases the plea of limitation must be specifically taken in the memorandum of appeal or by leave of the Court under this rule.

Proviso to the rule—The appellate Court is not precluded from basing its decision upon a ground not set forth in the memorandum of appeal nor taken by leave of the Court under this rule (l), but this power is exercised by the Court alone and neither party can claim it as of right (m). A litigant who has all along maintained a position in support of one branch of his suit cannot be permitted when he fails upon this branch, to withdraw from that position and assert the contrary before the appellate Court more especially when he thereby places his opponent at a great disadvantage. In such a case, the doctrine of estoppel owing to the conduct of the litigant applies (n). Further a litigant should not be allowed to take in appeal a point in the pleadings which has been deliberately abandoned by a party at the trial of the suit before the lower Court (o). See notes to r 1 above, 'Grounds of objection which may be taken for the first time in appeal.'

New questions of fact—In this connection may be noted the following observations made in the course of a judgment in a Madras case. Though we may perhaps consider in appeal any question of law arising from facts which are either admitted or undisputed we cannot allow without any satisfactory reason new questions of fact to be raised for the first time in appeal (p).

Making a new case in appeal—A court of appeal is not justified in exposing a party after he has obtained his decree to the brunt of a new attack of which he had never had notice during the hearing of the suit (q).

3. [S. 543.] (1) Where the memorandum of appeal is not drawn up in the manner herein before prescribed, it may be rejected, or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court or be amended then and there.

Rejection or amendment of memorandum

(2) Where the Court rejects any memorandum of appeal, it shall record the reasons for such rejection.

(3) Where a memorandum of appeal is amended, the Judge, or such officer as he appoints in this behalf, shall sign or initial the amendment.

Returned for amendment—When a memorandum of appeal is returned for amendment, the Court should fix a time for its return (r). See s 107.

Appeal—The Calcutta High Court has held that the rejection of a memorandum of appeal as insufficiently stamped is not a decree and that the effect of O 7 read with s 107 (2) is that an appellant may present a fresh memorandum of appeal (s). But there have been decisions allowing an appeal when a memorandum of appeal was rejected. See note under s 2 Rejection of memorandum of appeal, at p 10 above. See also note under s 149 'Appeals and applications for review of judgment', at p 431 above. If the Court is of opinion that the memorandum of appeal is insufficiently stamped it may proceed under s 12 (2) of the Court Fees Act but it has no power to call upon the appellant to prove that the Court fee is correct (i). If the memorandum of appeal is dismissed as time barred, such dismissal disposes of the appeal and is appealable as a decree (u).

Appellate Court to have same power as Courts of original jurisdiction—It is important to note at this stage the provisions of s 107. That section provides that the appellate Court shall have the same powers and shall perform as nearly as may be the same duties as are conferred and imposed on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein.

4. [S. 544.] Where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit, and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, any one of the plaintiffs or of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree, and thereupon the Appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

One of several plaintiffs or defendants may obtain reversal of whole decree where it proceeds on ground common to all

Ground common to all defendants—This rule provides that where there are more defendants than one and the decree appealed from proceeds on any ground common to all the defendants any one of the defendants may appeal from the whole decree and thereupon the appellate Court may reverse or vary the decree in favour of all the defendants (v). The rule will not apply to different appeals on a common ground unless they have been consolidated (w). It is not necessary for the application of this rule that the decree should proceed on every ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants, it is quite sufficient if it proceeds on any ground common to all the plaintiffs or to all the defendants. A sues B, C and D for recovering possession of certain lands and for declaration of title thereto alleging that he was dispossessed by all the defendants together in pursuance of a conspiracy between them. B, C and D file separate written statements denying A's title and also denying dispossession and each claiming to hold separate parcels of land from third parties. The Court of first instance finds in favour of the title and the possession of A and that A was dispossessed by B, C and D. B alone appeals from the decree. The appellate Court finds that A had failed to prove the title set up by him or that he was in possession of the land. Should the appellate Court reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour of B alone who appealed from the decree, or should it reverse the decree of the lower Court in favour also of C and D though they did not join in the appeal? The answer is that if the decree of the lower Court proceeded on a ground common to all the three defendants the decree should be reversed under this rule not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D. Now the ground of defence common to all the defendants was that A had no title to the lands and the decree of the lower Court proceeded on the ground that A had a title to the lands. The decree therefore proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants. The appellate Court should therefore reverse the decree not only in favour of B but also in favour of C and D. It is quite immaterial that the defendants claimed to be interested by different titles in separate portions of lands. It is enough if any one ground on which the decree appealed from proceeds is common to all the defendants (2). But the provisions of this rule do not apply, unless the lower Court whose decree is appealed from has proceeded upon some ground common to all the plaintiffs, or all the defendants. If the lower Court has not proceeded upon any such ground, it is not competent to the appellate Court to reverse the decree as to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants upon a ground which the appellate Court considers to be common to all the plaintiffs or all the defendants (y).

If in the case put above, the appellate Court while reversing the decree in favour of B refuses to reverse it in favour also of C and D— common to all the defendants, the appellate Court may reverse the decree in favour of all the defendants even if some of the defendants suffered the decree to be passed ex parte against them (a).

Ground common to all the plaintiffs—A and his son B jointly sue C to recover Rs 2,000. A decree is passed for the plaintiffs for Rs 500 only. A alone appeals from the decree. C files cross objections under r 22 below. The appellate Court rejects the plaintiff's claim in toto, and reverses the decree of the lower Court. Subsequently B, who did not join in the appeal, applies for execution of the original decree against C. B is not entitled to take out execution, for although he was not a party to the appeal, he is bound under this rule by the decree of the appellate Court (b). A and B each claiming to be the heir of the deceased sue to set aside an alienation by his widow. The suit is dismissed. A alone appeals and makes B a pro forma respondent. The appellate Court finds that B is the heir and not A. The appellate Court cannot make a decree in B's favour for the rights of A and B are not identical (c).

See notes to r 22 below, "A respondent may urge cross objections against the appellant but not as a rule against a co respondent."

May reverse decree in favour of all plaintiffs or defendants—The word "may" shows that the appellate Court is given a discretion in the matter. It may therefore reverse the decree in favour of some only of the plaintiffs or defendants. It is not bound to do so in favour of all of them (d).

Death of one of several appellants in cases where the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all of them—See notes to O 22, r 3. This rule applies to appeals.

If in the case put above, the appellate Court while reversing the decree in favour of B, refuses to reverse it in favour also of C and D on the ground that it has no power to do so, the decree of the appellate Court will be subject to revision for failure of exercise of jurisdiction (z). See s 115, cl (b). If the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants, the appellate Court may reverse the decree in favour of all the defendants even if some of the defendants suffered the decree to be passed ex parte against them (a).

Alterations in the rule—

- 1 The first part of sub r (1) namely, An appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or order appealed from except so far as the Appellate Court may order is new. The object is to make express provision for a stay of proceedings from a decree pending an appeal from the decree. Thus if a preliminary decree is passed in a suit for accounts between a principal and an agent [O 20 r 16] and an appeal is preferred from the decree the Appellate Court may under this rule stay the inquiry into the accounts pending the appeal from the decree. Under the Code of 1882 the Court directed a stay in cases like these in the exercise of its inherent power, as there was no express provision in the Code in that behalf (e)
- 2 Sub r (4) is new. It authorizes an ex parte stay. The need for such an order constantly arises in practice

'Stay of proceeding'—Under this part of the rule the Bombay High Court in appeal suspended a sentence of imprisonment for an offence under s 43 of the Provincial Insolvency Act 1907 now Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, s 69, the provisions of the Code being applicable to such appeal (f). D. 41, r. 5 Stay of execution—Once an appeal is preferred from a decree, it is the Appellate Court alone that is seized of the matter, and an application for a stay of execution should be made to that Court. Where no appeal is preferred, the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction not being seized of the case and cannot stay execution even on the assurance of a pleader that an appeal will be filed (g). The application for a stay in that case should be made to the Court which passed the decree, but the application must not be entertained unless the decree is one from which an appeal lies, and the application is made before the expiry of the time allowed by law for appealing therefrom (h). The application should be made to the Judge who decided the case and without unreasonable delay (i).

Though the Appellate Court may under this rule stay proceedings in execution when an appeal is preferred from a decree, it has no power to stay execution of a decree when an appeal is preferred from an order appealable under s 104. A obtains a decree ex parte against B. B applies under O 9, r 13, to have the decree set aside, but the application is rejected, B appeals from the order rejecting the application under O 43 r 1, cl (d), and applies to the Appellate Court to stay execution of the ex parte decree against him. But as no appeal has been preferred from the decree the Appellate Court is not competent to stay execution (j). Contrast r 8 below.

Award—In an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an award under the Arbitration Act, the High Court has inherent jurisdiction to stay the execution of the award, and in exercising this jurisdiction it will see that the provisions of this rule are complied with (k).

Where no order for execution has been made—The Appellate Court may order stay of execution whether an order for execution has been made or not (l).

Where decree has been executed—An order for a stay of execution implies that the decree has not been executed. Therefore where a decree has been executed, no order can be made under this rule (m). See r 6 below.

Circumstances under which stay of execution may be granted—The Court has power under this rule to make an order for a stay of execution for "sufficient cause". But no order should be made for a stay of execution unless the Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result to the party applying for a stay of execution if the execution is not stayed (n). And even if the Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result, no order should be made unless the application has been made without unreasonable delay, and, further, unless the Court is satisfied that security has been given by the applicant for the due performance of such decree as may ultimately be binding upon him (sub r (3)). The Court should not accept a security the validity of which is not free from reasonable doubt and the enforcement of which may lead to protracted litigation (o). It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that where the decree appealed from is for the payment of money, execution should be stayed unless the respondent gives security for the repayment of the money in the event of the decree being reversed (p).

Notice to decree holder—It has been held by the High Court of Bombay O. 4 that a final order staying execution should not be made without notice to the decree holder if it is made without notice it is illegal and it may be set aside under s 115 above (g) The High Court of Patna however differs (r) An interim stay, however, may be granted ex parte [see sub r (4)]

Application of the rule—A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immovable property, and applies for execution of the decree If B has preferred an appeal from the decree B may apply to the Appellate Court for a stay of execution on the ground that if execution is not stayed and the property is delivered to A, A may do away with the property which may result in substantial loss to him If the Appellate Court is satisfied that substantial loss may result if the execution is not stayed and if the application has been made without unreasonable delay, the Appellate Court may order execution to be stayed under this rule upon security being given by B that if the decree of the lower Court is confirmed he will deliver possession of the property to A If the decree of the lower Court is confirmed and if B fails to deliver possession of the property to A A may proceed against the surety

Security for performance of decree—The nature and extent of the liability of a surety under this rule depends on the words of the security bond (s) Thus where the bond was to perform all orders and decrees passed in appeal it was held that the obligation under the bond extended to the final decree passed in second appeal (t) When immovable property is given by a judgment debtor as security for the due performance of a decree under sub r (3) (c), it can be realized in execution without attachment The provisions of O 34, r 14 do not apply to such a case, and, the matter being one relating to execution, s 47 bars a separate suit (u) As to the mode of enforcing a security bond given under this rule see notes to s 145, Security for the performance of any decree

There is a conflict of opinion whether a security bond given under this rule mortgaging immovable property exceeding Rs 100 in value requires registration under the Transfer of Property Act s 59, and the Registration Act s 17, it being held in some cases that it does (v) and in some that it does not (w)

When respondent insolvent—In an application for stay of execution for costs when the respondent was insolvent the Madras High Court directed the appellant to pay the costs to the respondent's solicitor on his personal undertaking to return them in the event of the success of the appeal (x)

Effect of uncommunicated order staying execution—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta (y) that where an order is made by an appellate Court staying execution of a decree but before the order is communicated to the Court executing the decree the property of the judgment debtor is sold in execution the sale is invalid and cannot stand the reason given being that when an unconditional order for stay of execution is made, the order becomes operative the moment it is made and suspends the power of the lower Court to continue the proceedings in execution On

41, r. 5 the other hand it has been held by the Madras High Court (2) that such sale is valid the reason given being that the Court of first instance retains jurisdiction to execute its decree notwithstanding the appeal and that the power to execute the decree can only be taken away by some communication to it of the order of the Appellate Court. The latter view it is submitted is correct and is also taken by the Allahabad High Court in a Full Bench case (a) which however suggests that there is a distinction when the decree holder purchases the property for he takes it subject to all orders made in the suit. The Rangoon High Court has held that a sale held by a bailiff in ignorance of an order of a Court staying the sale is void (a1)

Insolvency of appellant and deposit—If a stay of execution is granted by the Appellate Court on the appellant depositing in Court to the credit of the suit the decretal amount and the appellant becomes insolvent before the hearing of the appeal and the appeal is subsequently dismissed the amount so deposited is payable to the decree holder and not to the Official Assignee (b)

Attachment of deposit—If a stay of execution of a decree for damages is granted on the appellant depositing the decretal amount into Court the sum deposited is not answerable only for damages and nothing but damages but must abide by whatever order the Court of Appeal may make. If the money deposited is attached by creditors of the appellant the creditors have no higher right than the appellant. If the amount of the decree is reduced in appeal the Court may order the balance to be applied to the payment of costs in priority to the attaching creditors (c)

Costs—The Calcutta High Court holds that as the stay of execution is an indulgence which will have the effect of interfering for the time being with the enforcement of the decree the applicant should in the absence of special circumstances pay the costs of the application in any event (d). A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has laid it down as a rule of practice that in the absence of special circumstances the costs of the application for stay of execution should be costs in the appeal (e)

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order by the Appellate Court refusing to stay execution under this section. Such an order is not a decree within the meaning of s 2 cl 2 (f). It is now agreed by the Calcutta (g) Madras (h) and Lahore (i) High Courts that such an order is a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and therefore appealable as such.

When the order for stay of execution is made by the Court which passed the decree there is a conflict of decisions as to whether an appeal lies. See note under s 47 Stay of execution at p 183

When an order for stay of execution on security being furnished by the judgment debtor is made and security is furnished no appeal lies on the ground that the security is insufficient. Such an order is not a decree under s 47 (j) nor is it a judgment under the Letters Patent (k).

Review—The Court making an order under this rule may cancel or vary it at any time (l)

6. [S. 546.] (1) Where an order is made for the execution of a decree from which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be taken for the restitution of any property which may be or has been taken in execution of the decree or for the payment of the value of such property and for the due performance of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the Appellate Court may for like cause direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security

(2) Where an order has been made for the sale of immovable property in execution of a decree, and an appeal is pending from such decree, the sale shall, on the application of the judgment-debtor to the Court which made the order, be stayed on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court thinks fit until the appeal is disposed of

- 1 The words "or has been taken" have been added in sub r (1) to make it clear that security may be required though the property has already been taken in execution. These words give effect to a Calcutta decision (m)
- 2 The words "of money," which occurred in the old section after the words "in the execution of a decree" have been omitted
- 3 The words "to the Court which made the order" in sub r (2) are new. These words show that an application for a stay of sale is to be made to the Court which made the order for sale

Application of the rule—This rule does not apply unless (1) there is an order made for the execution of a decree and (2) there is an appeal pending from that decree (n). A judgment-debtor whose application for a stay of execution is refused under r 5 may apply under this rule. The application contemplated by sub r (1) is an application by the judgment-debtor (who has appealed from the decree) for security to be given by the decree holder for the restitution of any property that may be taken in execution or for the payment of the value of such property if the decree of the lower Court is reversed in appeal. Thus if A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immovable property and an order is made for execution of the decree B may, after filing an appeal from the decree apply for an order requiring A to give security for the restitution of the property to him (B) or for the payment of the value thereof, if the appeal is decided in his favour. The application may be made to the Court which passed the decree or to the appellate Court (o). If the

O. 41, r. 5 the other hand it has been held by the Madras High Court (2) that such sale is valid the reason given being that the Court of first instance retains jurisdiction to execute its decree notwithstanding the appeal, and that the power to execute the decree can only be taken away by some communication to it of the order of the Appellate Court. The latter view it is submitted, is correct, and is also taken by the Allahabad High Court in a Full Bench case (a) which however suggests that there is a distinction when the decree holder purchases the property for he takes it subject to all orders made in the suit. The Rangoon High Court has held that a sale held by a bailiff in ignorance of an order of a Court staying the sale is void (a).

Insolvency of appellant and deposit—If a stay of execution is granted by the Appellate Court on the appellant depositing in Court to the credit of the suit the decretal amount and the appellant becomes insolvent before the hearing of the appeal and the appeal is subsequently dismissed, the amount so deposited is payable to the decree holder and not to the Official Assignee (b).

Attachment of deposit—If a stay of execution of a decree for damages is granted on the appellant depositing the decretal amount into Court, the sum deposited is not answerable only for damages and nothing but damages but must abide by whatever order the Court of Appeal may make. If the money deposited is attached by creditors of the appellant the creditors have no higher right than the appellant. If the amount of the decree is reduced in appeal the Court may order the balance to be applied to the payment of costs in priority to the attaching creditors (c).

Costs—The Calcutta High Court holds that as the stay of execution is an indulgence which will have the effect of interfering for the time being with the enforcement of the decree, the applicant should, in the absence of special circumstances, pay the costs of the application in any event (d). A Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has laid it down as a rule of practice that in the absence of special circumstances the costs of the application for stay of execution should be costs in the appeal (e).

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order by the Appellate Court refusing to stay execution under this section. Such an order is not a decree within the meaning of s. 2, cl. 2 (f). It is now agreed by the Calcutta (g), Madras (h) and Lahore (i) High Courts that such an order is a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and therefore appealable as such.

When the order for stay of execution is made by the Court which passed the decree there is a conflict of decisions as to whether an appeal lies. See note under s. 47. Stay of execution at p. 183.

When an order for stay of execution on security being furnished by the judgment debtor is made and security is furnished no appeal lies on the ground that the security is insufficient. Such an order is not a decree under s. 47 (j) nor is it a judgment under the Letters Patent (k).

Review—The Court making an order under this rule may cancel or vary it at any time (l)

6. [S. 546.] (1) Where an order is made for the execution of a decree from which an appeal is pending, the Court which passed the decree shall, on sufficient cause being shown by the appellant, require security to be taken for the restitution of any property which may be or has been taken in execution of the decree or for the payment of the value of such property and for the due performance of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the Appellate Court may for like cause direct the Court which passed the decree to take such security

(2) Where an order has been made for the sale of immovable property in execution of a decree, and an appeal is pending from such decree, the sale shall, on the application of the judgment debtor to the Court which made the order, be stayed on such terms as to giving security or otherwise as the Court thinks fit until the appeal is disposed of

- 1 The words "or has been taken" have been added in sub r (1) to make it clear that security may be required though the property has already been taken in execution. These words give effect to a Calcutta decision (m)
- 2 The words "of money, which occurred in the old section after the words in the execution of a decree" have been omitted
- 3 The words "to the Court which made the order" in sub r (2) are new. These words show that an application for a stay of sale is to be made to the Court which made the order for sale

Application of the rule—This rule does not apply unless (1) there is an order made for the execution of a decree and (2) there is an appeal pending from that decree (n). A judgment-debtor whose application for a stay of execution is refused under r 5 may apply under this rule. The application contemplated by sub r (1) is an application by the judgment debtor (who has appealed from the decree) for security to be given by the decree holder for the restitution of any property that may be taken in execution or for the payment of the value of such property if the decree of the lower Court is reversed in appeal. Thus if A obtains a decree against B for the recovery of certain immovable property and an order is made for execution of the decree B may, after filing an appeal from the decree apply for an order requiring A to give security for the restitution of the property to him (B) or for the payment of the value thereof if the appeal is decided in his favour. The application may be made to the Court which passed the decree or to the appellate Court (o). If the discretion, either before the respondent is called upon to appear and answer or afterwards on the application of the respondent, demand from the appellant security for the costs of the appeal, or of the original suit, or of both :

Provided that the Court shall demand such security in all cases in which the appellant is residing out of British India, and is not possessed of any sufficient immovable property within British India other than the property (if any) to which the appeal relates

Where an appellant resides out of British India

(2) Where such security is not furnished within such time as the Court orders, the Court shall reject the appeal.

Scope and object of the rule—The object of the rule is to secure the respondent in an appeal from the risk of having to incur further costs which he might never recover from the appellant. Under sub r (1) the appellate Court may, in its discretion, require security for costs. Under the proviso to that sub rule the Court shall demand security for costs. If no security is furnished, the Court should reject the appeal, whether the order for security is made under the sub rule or the proviso (r)

To what appeals the rule applies—This rule applies not only to appeals from substantive decrees but also to appeals from interlocutory orders under sec 104 and to appeals from orders in execution under sec 47 (e). The Privy Council have recently decided that it applies also to appeals under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (t). The Madras High Court has held that it was not so applicable because the Code dealt with appeals from one Court to another of higher grade, while cl. 15 of the Letters Patent dealt with a different class of appeals (u). This was a good reason for holding that the right of appeal under the Letters Patent was not excluded by the words "and from no other orders" occurring in sec 588 of the Code of 1882 corresponding to sec 104 of the present Code (t), but it does not follow that the procedure of the Court in dealing with an appeal under the Letters Patent (now expressly saved by the words "save as otherwise provided by any law" inserted in sec 104) is not regulated by the Code. Where any part of the Code does not apply to High Courts, specific provision is made to that effect. There is no such provision in respect of this rule. However a Chartered High Court is competent under sec 129 to make a rule inconsistent with O 41, r 10, and, if it does, the Code rule would not apply (w). Bombay High Court rule 736 prescribes a deposit of Rs 500 as security for respondent's costs as a condition of filing the appeal, but this is not inconsistent with the present rule (x). Nor is rule 331 of the Madras High Court rules inconsistent (y). The Bombay High Court has held that the deposit should not be increased on the ground that the costs of the appeal are likely to exceed the sum fixed by the rule (z).

Register of Appeals

D. 41, r. 10

Appeals in forma pauperis—It has been held by the High Court of Madras (a) that this rule applies to pauper appeals, thus an appellant, who has presented his appeal in forma pauperis, may be called upon to give security for costs under this rule, but very special grounds must be shown to support such an application. On the other hand, it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta (b), Bombay (c), and Lahore (d) that this rule does not apply to appeals preferred in forma pauperis.

"In its discretion."—Rankin, C J, has observed that some confusion has arisen out of the failure to realise the great distinction between an application for security for costs to be given by the plaintiff at the original trial and such an application in connection with an appeal. The learned Chief Justice referred to Harlock v Ashberry (e) where Jessel, M R, said "For some time past it has been the settled practice, if the respondent asks for it, to require security for costs to be given by an appellant who would be unable through poverty to pay the respondent's costs of the appeal if it should be unsuccessful." The learned Chief Justice made an order for security on the ground that the appellant had not paid the respondent's costs in the lower Court and costs awarded against her in other suits (f). But in other cases, and these are probably the cases referred to by Rankin, C J, it has been held that the mere fact that the appellant is poor or insolvent is no ground for demanding security for costs (g). Similarly mere non payment of the costs of the original suit is no ground for calling upon the appellant to furnish security under this rule, unless his conduct be shown to be vexatious, that is, such as indicates a wilful determination on his part not to obey the order of the Court in respect of costs (h). On the other hand, when the respondent had failed to recover his costs in the lower Court, Macleod, C J, made an order for security observing that the Court's discretion was absolute and could not be fettered by cases (i), and the Court will, as a general rule, demand security for costs from a poor or insolvent appellant if it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the appellant is not the real litigant, but a mere puppet in the hands of others who are well able to furnish security (j), or if the merits of the case are plainly in favour of the respondent (k). See notes to O 25, r 1, "Poverty of plaintiff."

At what stage respondent should apply for security—The respondent should apply promptly, or else it might be urged that he had waived his right (l).

Order for security.—When an order is made under this rule for security for costs, it is not necessary that any specific sum should be named in the order. It is sufficient if the order directs the appellant to furnish security "for the costs of the original suit" or "for the costs of the appeal" or "for the costs of the appeal and the original suit" (m). A surety for the costs of the appeal is discharged if the appeal is decided in favour of the appellant even if the appellate decree is reversed on second appeal (n). If a rule is issued for security for costs and is adjourned to the hearing, no order is necessary on the rule after the disposal of the appeal (o).

The taxing officer's decision as to the amount of the security is subject to revision by O 41, the High Court (n).

Extension of time for furnishing security.—The appellate Court may, under exceptional circumstances, extend the time for furnishing security [see s 148]. Thus where the appellant alleged that he was unable on account of plague in Bombay to raise the money required for security within the time fixed by the Court, the Court extended the time for giving security. The time for giving security may be extended either before or after its expiry (a).

"Court shall reject the appeal"—These words are mandatory and the Court is bound to reject the appeal if security is not furnished within the time fixed (r). But the appeal should not be rejected if the order for security has been made without notice to the appellant (s).

Restoring of appeal—An appeal, although it may have been rejected by the appellate Court under this rule upon failure of the appellant to furnish security, may be restored on sufficient grounds at the Court's discretion (t). Limitation for the application for restoration is under art. 163 of the Limitation Act (u). It is no excuse for not furnishing security in time that the appellant is a wandering fakir, for it is the duty of every litigant to keep in touch with his case (v). Where the applicant applies for extension of time, and the Court after hearing him on the application refuses to extend the time and rejects the appeal, the appeal should not subsequently be restored (w). No appeal lies from an order refusing to restore an appeal (x).

Appeal from order rejecting appeal under sub rule (2)—An order rejecting an appeal under this rule is not appealable as an order under O 43 for it is not one of the orders specified therein. Nor is it appealable as a decree, for it does not conclusively determine the rights of the parties with regard to any of the matters in controversy in the appeal within the meaning of the definition of decree[s 2, cl (2)] (v)

Appeal from order dismissing application to receive security for costs — An order is made under sub rule (1) directing an appellant to furnish security for costs. The order is indefinite in that it does not fix the exact date on or before which security is to be given. The appellant, believing that the time for giving security has expired, applies to the Court to receive the amount fixed by the order as security. The Court holds that the time for furnishing security has expired, and refuses the application. The appellant is entitled to appeal from the order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent, as the effect of the order would be to finally deprive the appellant of his right of prosecuting his appeal (2)

Insolvency appeal.—There is a conflict of decisions as to whether this rule applies to the case of an appeal from an order passed by a Judge of the High Court exercising

(3) The dismissal of an appeal under this rule shall be notified to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred

Alteration in the rule —

- 1 In sub r (1) the words after sending for the record if it thinks fit to do so are new These words have been added to empower the Court to send for the record if it thinks fit to do so before summarily dismissing an appeal without giving notice to the respondent
- 2 The words the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed have been substituted for the words the appeal shall be dismissed for default to make it clear that no appeal lies from an order of dismissal for default See sec 5 cl (2) sub-cl (b) Under the old section it was held that a decision dismissing an appeal for default was a decree and was therefore appealable (c)

Dismissal of appeal under sub rule (1) whether judgment necessary — Under the corresponding section of the Code of 1859 it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the dismissal of an appeal under sub r (1) did not relieve the lower appellate Court from the necessity of writing a judgment in the manner prescribed by sec 574 of that Code [now r 31 of this Order] (d) The Allahabad High Court has adopted the same rule (e) The present Order is divided into distinct parts under appropriate headings an arrangement which did not appear in the corresponding Chapter of the Code of 1859 Rule 11 comes under the heading Procedure on admission of appeal The next heading of the Order is Procedure on hearing and r 31 comes under the next following heading Judgment in appeal Relying upon this classification it was held by the High Court of Bombay in Taizy v Shankar (f) that under the present Code it is not obligatory upon the lower appellate Court in dismissing an appeal under this rule, to write a judgment as required by r 31. But this decision has since been overruled by a Full Bench of the same Court, on the ground that it was in conflict with the previous practice of that Court which was based on a Civil Circular being Circular 51, published in 1890 under the provisions of the High Courts Act, 1861, by which it is provided that when an appellate Court dismisses an appeal under sec. 551 [now r. 11 of this Order], a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up. In the course of the judgment Sir Basil Scott, C J, said: "There is nothing in the new Code of Civil Procedure which introduces any change in the law, except in so far as the rules commencing with rule 9 of Order XLI are headed 'Procedure on admission of appeal.' That change is not sufficient to abrogate the rule published under the High Courts Act which is quite consistent with the provisions of the Code" (g). The result is that, according to the Bombay High Court, when an appeal is dismissed under this rule a judgment should be written and a formal decree drawn up. The High Courts of Calcutta and Rangoon have given the same decision under the present Code (h). Even if the judgment is not pronounced in the form prescribed by rule 31 the decision is a decree (i).

Dismissal of appeal for default under sub rule (2).—Where an appeal is dismissed for default, it is the decree of the lower Court alone that can be enforced in execution (j). See notes to sec. 36, "What decrees may be executed."

Review.—Dismissal of an appeal under this rule bars a review of the judgment appealed against. see notes under O 47, r 1. The order under this rule dismissing the appeal is itself subject to review and the practice of the Calcutta High Court is to grant a review and order the rehearing of the appeal ex parte (l). When a second appeal is dismissed under this rule, the High Court has no power to review its judgment on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter (f). See notes to O 47, r 1, "No review allowed on a question of fact after decision of second appeal."

Re admission of appeal dismissed for default under sub rule (2).—An appeal dismissed under sub r (2) may be re admitted under r 19.

Dismissal of appeal where notice not served in consequence of appellant's failure to deposit costs

18. [S. 557.] Where on the day fixed, or on any other day to which the hearing may be adjourned, it is found that the notice to the respondent has not been served in consequence of the failure of the appellant to deposit, within the period fixed, the sum required to defray the cost of serving the notice, the Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed.

Provided that no such order shall be made although the notice has not been served upon the respondent, if on any such day the respondent appears when the appeal is called on for hearing

The Court may make an order that the appeal be dismissed'—The language of the rule clearly shows that the order of dismissal should not be made before the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal (s). If the appellant has deposited the costs of service the appeal cannot be dismissed under this rule for the appellant's failure to prove the identity of the person served (t).

Re admission of appeal dismissed under the rule—See r 19 below

Appeal—An order under this rule is not open to appeal. The proper remedy is an application under r 19 below for re admission (u).

Effect of dismissal of appeal against one or several respondents for non service of notice—A, B and C obtain a decree for joint possession against D. D appeals from the decree. A and B are served with the notice of appeal but C is not. The appeal is thereupon dismissed as against C. Is D entitled to proceed with the appeal as against A and B? No for even if the appellate Court heard the appeal and reversed the decree of the lower Court as regards A and B, the decree of the lower Court not being reversed as regards C, C could execute the entire decree (the decree being a joint decree) so as to nullify the decree of the appellate Court (v). See notes to O 22 r 4, Cases in which suit or appeal held to abate as a whole.

19. [S. 558.] Where an appeal is dismissed under rule 11, sub rule (2), or rule 17 or rule 18, the appellant may apply to the Appellate Court for the re admission of the appeal, and, where it is proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the appeal was called on for hearing or from depositing the sum so required, the Court shall re-admit the appeal on such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit.

"Shall re admit the appeal."—These words have been substituted for the words "may re-admit the appeal." The word "may" in the old section was construed by the High Court of Madras to mean "shall" (1c)

"Sufficient cause"—The carelessness of an advocates clerk does not constitute sufficient cause (x) But where the appellant's pleader appeared soon after the appeal was dismissed, it was restored on the ground that the failure to appear was unintentional (y) The absence of appellant's pleader owing to an engagement in another Court has been held to be sufficient cause (z) The Allahabad High Court has restored an appeal on the ground that the Court did not send for an absent pleader (a)

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order of refusal to re-admit an appeal [O 23, r 1, cl (t)]. But no appeal lies from an order re-admitting an appeal (b).

Dismissal of appeal for failure to deposit costs of paper book or to pay court fees—Where an appeal is dismissed under the rules of a High Court for failure to deposit the costs of preparation of the paper book as required by the rules, the decree may be set aside not by an order under this rule, but by an order on an application for a review (c). So also if it is dismissed for failure to pay Court fees (d).

Inherent power to restore appeal dismissed for default.—Although a cause may not amount to a “sufficient cause” within the meaning of this rule, the Court has inherent power to pass an order of restoration if it considers that a case for restoration has been made out (e). According to the Bombay High Court (f), the Court has inherent power to admit an application for re-admission that is time barred under art. 168 of the Limitation Act, but the Lahore (g) and Madras (h) High Courts differ following Neelaven v. Narayana (i). See note under O 9, r 9. Inherent power to restore suit dismissed for default.”

Other remedy—The applicant is not confined to the remedy of restoration but may file another appeal if he is still within the period of limitation (3) elapsed he is not interested in the result of the appeal within the meaning of the rule. The rule therefore gives no jurisdiction to the appellate Court to join him (k). See notes to r 23 below.

Limitation—A person who was a party to the proceeding in the Court below may be added as a respondent though the time to appeal against him has expired (l). But this cannot be done if the misjoinder has rendered the appeal incompetent as when an appeal is filed against some only of several joint decree holders (m).

Adding of parties under this rule discretionary—It is a question for the Court in its discretion to determine in each case whether or not it will make an order for the addition of a party as contemplated by this rule (n). A party will not be added merely in order to enable a respondent to file cross objections against him (o). According to the Madras High Court its powers are not limited by this rule and it can also act under O 1 r 10 (p). But the Allahabad High Court has held that a Court of appeal cannot add a party who was not a party to the suit (q). The Appellate Court has no power under this rule to add as a respondent to the appeal a person who was not a party to the original suit (r).

The Court will not under this rule add representatives of a deceased party to save an appeal that has abated (s). Nor will it add a respondent after the appeal against him is time barred (t).

Adding of parties in second appeal—Has the High Court power in second appeal to add a party who was a party to the suit but not a party in the first appeal? No according to the Allahabad High Court (u). Yes according to the Madras (v) Calcutta (w) and Patna (x) High Courts. A second appeal is not bad for misjoinder if parties who had not appeared in the suit and who were not made parties for that reason in the first appeal are not impleaded (y).

not authorize the respondent to make out a case for a decree for the same amount by questioning some adjudication as to the right found against him and as to which no appeal or objection has been filed. The expression "support the decree" means support the decision and does not refer to the quantum of the decree (j)

Sub rule (4) where the appeal is withdrawn or has abated or is dismissed for default.—The old section commenced with the words, "any respondent may upon the hearing not only support the decree," etc. It was accordingly held that a respondent can be heard in support of his cross objections only upon the hearing of the appeal. If the appeal was withdrawn before the hearing, the respondent it was held, had no right to be heard in support of his cross objections (k) though the Court might in such a case allow him to prefer a regular appeal from the decree (l). But if the hearing had once commenced, the appeal, it was held, could not be withdrawn so as to prevent the cross objections being heard and determined (m). This distinction has now been done away with by the omission of the words "upon the hearing" in sub r (1) and by the addition of sub r (4). Under the present rule the withdrawal of an appeal is no bar to the hearing of cross objection filed by a respondent, whether the appeal is withdrawn before or after the hearing. Similarly the dismissal of an appeal for default is no bar to the hearing of cross objections. This was correctly admitted in Bhimsena v Venugopal (n), a Letters Patent appeal, but the reasoning, so far as it proceeds on the assumption that O 41 does not apply to Letters Patent appeals, seems opposed to the Privy Council decision in Sabitu v Sati (o). The dismissal of an appeal upon the

Under the old section the High Court of Allahabad held that the dismissal of an appeal as filed out of time was a bar to the hearing of cross objections (r). A Full Bench of the Madras High Court holds that the law is the same under the present rule (s). If heard so that a defendant in on his share, and such an appeal is a valid appeal to which cross objections may be heard (u). Cross objections cannot be heard if the appeal is dismissed for insufficiency of court fee (v).

mortgage suit has been held not to be a bar to the hearing of cross objections, the reason given being that in such a case the appeal is heard, the question of non joinder being one that arises in the appeal itself and is not extraneous to it, as would be a question as to whether it was presented in proper time or not (w).

(5) The provisions relating to pauper appeals shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to an objection under this rule

Alterations in the rule—The words 'upon the hearing' which occurred in the first paragraph of sec 561 of the Code of 1882 [now sub r 1] between the words 'may' and 'not only support,' have been omitted, and sub rule (4) has been added. See notes below under the head "Sub rule (4) where the appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default." The words 'the party who may be affected by such objection' in sub r (3) have been substituted for the words "the appellant" which occurred in sec 561

Cross objections—If in a suit brought by A against B, B sets up two defences and the Court of first instance decides both in B's favour, and A appeals there is no scope for cross objections, for cross objections cannot be filed as criticisms of any cross objections (e) In the case put above the decree was entirely in B's (respondent's) favour. But if A's claim is decreed in part, A may appeal from the decree, alleging that the decree ought to have been for the full amount claimed by him. And B also may appeal from the decree, alleging that the decree is too small. And B missed altogether. If A appeals from the decree it is a cross appeal. But instead of filing a cross appeal under this rule. In cross objections, B may take any objection to the decree which he could have taken by way of appeal (f) If no cross objections are filed by a respondent the appellate Court has no power to grant any relief to him in a case where the granting of such relief is not necessarily incidental to the relief granted to the appellant (g) nor has it the power, in the absence of cross objections, to disturb so much of the original decree as is favourable to the appellant so as to place the appellant in a worse position (h) Appellate Court should not proceed to decide on a point not raised either by the appellant or respondent (i)

Support the decree—The respondent without filing cross objections may 'support the decree' on grounds decided against him by the lower Court. But this does against B, but also against C, in respect of that portion of his claim that was disallowed by the Court of first instance, namely, Rs 2,000 (d). According to the Madras (e) and Lahore (f) High Courts, a respondent may urge cross objections against a co-respondent in any and every case. Note in this connection the substitution in sub r (3) of the words 'the party who may be affected by such objection' for the words "the appellant" which occurred in sec 261 of the Code of 1882.

Application for leave to file cross objections in forma pauperis—An application for leave to file cross objections in forma pauperis may be received by the Court at any time (g)

"Or within such further time"—This rule requires that cross objections should be filed by the respondent within one month from the date of the service of notice of the appeal. But the time may be extended if sufficient cause is shown (h)

Application of the rule—Cross objections may be filed not only in first appeal but also in second appeal (O 42). They may also be filed in appeals from orders preferred under sec. 104 and O 43 [See O 43, r. 2].

Second appeal—A second appeal will lie from a decree of the first Appellate Court disallowing the cross objections of a respondent (i)

Letters Patent appeal.—The Allahabad and Calcutta High Courts have held that the provision for respondents filing cross objections does not apply to Letters Patent appeals (j), but it is doubtful if this is correct in view of the Privy Council decision in Sabitra v. Sari (l).

Who may file cross objections—Cross objections under this rule can only be filed by a party who might have appealed from the decree of the Court below, but has not done so. It is not open to the party who has appealed and whose appeal has been dismissed, subsequently to prefer cross objections under this rule. A sues B for damages. A's claim is decreed in part. A appeals from that part of the decree which is against him. B also appeals from that part of the decree which is against him. A's appeal is heard and dismissed. Before B's appeal is heard, A files cross objections in B's appeal setting up the same grounds upon which in his own appeal he had asked for relief. A's cross objections should not be heard (x). Again A obtains a decree in a partnership suit which is against B, one of the defendants as ex parte. B does not apply under O 9, r 13, to set aside the ex parte decree. B cannot therefore file cross objections in A's appeal that he should have been given a hearing (y). But in a case where B before the ex parte decree was passed presented a petition asking to be heard under the erroneous impression that the ex parte decree had already been passed, it was held that he was not barred from filing cross objections on the ground that he was not heard (z). Cross objections as to costs in the Courts below will not be entertained in second appeal (a).

A respondent may urge cross objections against the appellant but not as a rule against a co respondent—It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay and Allahabad, that as a general rule the right of a respondent to urge cross objections should be limited to his urging them only against the appellant and that it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge cross objections as against other respondents, the exception holding good in those cases in which the appeal opens up questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co respondents (b). Thus in suits for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, it is open to one respondent to prefer cross objections against a co respondent on any item in dispute between them. The reason is that in such suits accounts are taken not between the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other, but between all the partners. A, B and C constitute a partnership firm. A sues B and C for dissolution of partnership and for accounts. A decree is passed in the suit declaring the amount coming to the share of each partner on the taking of accounts. A appeals from the decree. B and C are joined as respondents to the appeal. In such a case it is open to B to prefer cross objections against C in respect of an item in dispute between B and C (c). Similarly, when the decree appealed from proceeds on a ground common to all the parties against whom it is passed, and the appeal is preferred by some only of such parties e.g., where the suit is—A v B and C, and a decree is passed both against B and C, and the appeal is—B v A and C, A who is the plaintiff respondent may prefer cross objections not only against B, the appellant, but against C, the co respondent. A sues B and C to recover Rs 5,000, alleged to be his share of the profits of certain lands. A decree is passed for A for Rs 3,000 against B and C. B appeals from the decree. C does not join B in the appeal and he is therefore made a party respondent. The appeal thus is—B v A and C. In such a case it is open to A to prefer cross objections not only

O. 41, r. 23 Scope of the rule—It is not competent to the Appellate Court under this rule to remand the case for further evidence to the lower Court and to require that Court to pass another decree. All that the Appellate Court is empowered to do is to frame an issue and to send down that issue to the Court below for the return of a finding and it is the duty of the Appellate Court after receiving that finding to dispose of the appeal upon the evidence before it (l). The Appellate Court cannot after finding on facts remand the case to the lower Court to pass a decree in accordance with that finding (m).

Preliminary point—This rule enables the Appellate Court to remand a case to the lower Court for determination on the merits if the lower Court has disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree of that Court is reversed in appeal. The expression preliminary point is not confined to such legal points only as may be pleaded in bar of a suit but comprehends all points or issues whether of fact or of law the determination of which has precluded the necessity for determining other points or issues which have therefore been left undetermined (n). A Full Bench of the Madras High Court defined it as any point whether of fact or of law the decision of which avoids the necessity for a full hearing of the suit (o). Thus where the lower Court dismisses the plaintiff's suit on the ground that it is barred by limitation or that the Court has no jurisdiction to hear the suit or that the necessary leave has not been obtained or that the plaint does not on the face of it disclose any cause of action (p) or that it is barred by the events in an earlier suit (q) and the Appellate Court reverses the decree of the lower Court on those grounds it may remand the case to the lower Court to be proceeded with on the merits. Where several issues are raised in a suit one of which is that of undue influence and the Court dismisses the suit on a finding that there was undue influence without a finding on the other issues the decision amounts to a disposal of the suit upon a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (r). Similarly if a sues B to recover a sum of money on the basis of an award and four issues are framed one of which is whether the award is valid and binding and the Court after recording evidence on all the issues dismisses the suit on the ground that the award is invalid leaving the other issues undecided the Appellate Court may if it finds that the decision of the lower Court on the issue as to the validity of the award is wrong remand the case to the lower Court to be disposed of on the merits. It does not matter that evidence has been recorded on all the issues (s). But where the first Court has decided a suit on the merits of the whole case as where the suit is decided on all the evidence and on all the issues the Appellate Court cannot remand the case under this rule (t). Where the first Court heard the entire suit and found all issues in favour of the plaintiff except one namely whether the suit was maintainable having regard to the provisions of O 21 r 99 and dismissed the suit on the finding that the suit was not maintainable it was held by the Patna High Court that the suit was disposed of on a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule (u) This decision is in conflict with the decisions referred to above, and, it is submitted, is not good law To pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff on the strength of a plan put in by the plaintiff in a suit for possession of land is not a decision of the suit on a preliminary point, and no remand can be made in such a case under this rule (t) In a Bombay case, the Appellate Court was of opinion that certain findings of facts were necessary for the disposal of the appeal, and that evidence should be taken on those points, and it made an order of remand under this rule It was held that the Court had no power to make the order under this rule though such an order could be made under rule 25 below (w) When the Appellate Court after the suit had been tried on the merits allowed an amendment of the plaint and remanded the suit for trial on a different cause of action pleaded in the amendment a Madras Judge said that it was almost an abuse of language to say that the suit was disposed of on a preliminary point (x) On the other hand in another case the lower Court made an unconditional decree for redemption but the suit was remanded after the trial on the merits on the ground the decree holder was himself subject to be redeemed by a puisne mortgagee, and this was held to be a remand under this rule (y)

No order of remand can be made under this rule unless the lower Court has disposed of the whole suit upon a preliminary point This rule authorises a remand only where the entire suit, and not only a portion of it, has been disposed of by the Court below on a preliminary point (z) Assuming that the entire suit is decided on a preliminary point, it is further necessary, before an order of remand can be made under this rule, that the Appellate Court should also find that the decision on the preliminary point is wrong It is not a good ground, therefore, for making an order under this rule, that the preliminary issue, e.g., an issue of limitation has been decided by the Court of first instance on a wrong view of the burden of proof, unless the Appellate Court finds that the issue itself has been wrongly decided (a) Again if the lower Court decides the suit on several preliminary points, the Appellate Court should not remand the suit without deciding all those preliminary points (b)

Inherent power of remand Remand in case of error, omission or irregularity—No order of remand can be made under the present rule except when the suit has been disposed of on a preliminary point There are, however, cases in which suits have not been disposed of on a preliminary point, and yet the Courts have claimed the power to remand the case professing to do so in the exercise of their inherent power [see s 151]. These are cases in which the lower Court has committed any error, omission or irregularity, by reason of which there has not been a proper trial or an effectual or complete adjudication of the suit, and the party complaining of such error, omission or irregularity has been materially prejudiced thereby Thus if a suit is defective for misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action, the proper course is to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment and not to dismiss the suit (see notes to O 2, r 3, on p 494 above) If the lower Court dismisses the suit instead of returning the plaint for amendment the Appellate Court may set aside the decree, and remand the suit with a direction to the lower Court to return the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment and to proceed with the suit after the plaint is amended (c) Similarly where a suit is brought in the name of

O. 41, r. 23 a wrong person as plaintiff, the Appellate Court may direct the plaint to be amended and remand the case for re trial (d) Where time was granted to the plaintiff to produce his evidence—but neither he nor his pleader appeared on the day to which the hearing was adjourned, and the lower Court instead of proceeding to dispose of the suit under O 17, r. 3, dismissed the suit for default under O 17, r. 2, it was held that the Appellate Court had power to remand the case to be disposed of in the manner prescribed by O 17, r. 3 (e) A case may also be remanded where the decision of the lower Court is given without taking the defendant's evidence (f) In a Bombay case (g) the lower Court had erroneously presumed the death of the mortgagor and decreed redemption by a person claiming to be his heir and the High Court reversed the decree and remanded the case for re trial after joining the mortgagor as a party

Sections 562 and 566 of the Code of 1882 [now rr 23 and 25 of this Order] were the only sections that provided for a remand. The cases cited in the preceding paragraph did not fall under either of those sections. Moreover, the Code of 1882 contained a section, (s 564) which prohibited the Appellate Court from remanding a case except as provided by s 562. This section was found in its working to be embarrassing, and to get over the difficulty presented by cases of the kind cited in the preceding paragraph, the Courts resorted to their inherent jurisdiction. That section has been omitted in this Code on the ground that it was unduly restrictive. The absolute prohibition of s 564 having been removed, the Court, it is said, is free under s 151 to make an order of remand though the case may not fall either under this rule or rule 25 (k). It has accordingly been held that as under the old Code, so under the new Code, an order of remand can be made though the suit was not disposed of on a point which can be called a preliminary point within the meaning of this rule, provided such an order is necessary for the ends of justice (s). In Nabin Chand v. Stephen and Mullick, JJ, expressed the opinion that if power to remand, that power was taken away and that under s 107 an Appellate Court can only remand a case "subject to such limitations as may be prescribed," that is, prescribed by rules 23 and 25 of O 41. The view so expressed ignores entirely the specific provisions of s 151 of the Code. In Mani Mohan v Ramtaran (k), Jenkins, C J, after observing that the combined effect of s 107 and O 41, r 23, was to limit the power of remand to the position described in O 41, r 23, said "And this is the general rule except under special conditions which have no application in the circumstances of this case. The view taken by Stephen and Mullick, JJ, was dissented from by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Ghurnani v The Allahabad Bank, Ltd (l), where it was held that the powers of the Appellate Court as regards remand are not restricted to the case specified in O 41, r 23, but that the Court, by reason of its inherent jurisdiction recognized and preserved in the Code [s 151], may order a remand in cases other than the case specified in O 41, r 23, if it be

Remand in appeal from ex parte decree.—See notes to s 90, "Appeal from ex parte decree"

Remand in appeal from an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree.—In an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree the only case which can be remanded is the application under O 9, r 13, and not the original suit A obtains a decree ex parte against B B applies under O 9, r 13, for an order to set aside the decree on the ground that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing at the hearing, but the application is refused B appeals from the order rejecting the application [O 43, r 1, cl (d)] If the order is reversed by the appellate Court, the proper course for that Court is to remand the application to the lower Court to dispose of that application with due regard to the conditions of O 9, r 13, but not to remand the original suit for re trial (s)

Appeal.—An appeal lies under O 43, r 1, cl (u), from an order remanding a case, where an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court (t) This means that the order of remand is appealable only in cases in which an appeal would lie from the decree, which would have been passed by the appellate Court had that Court decided the case without a remand (u) No appeal lies from a remand order in an appeal from an execution proceeding if the suit is of such a nature that by reason of s 102 no second appeal lies (v) If no appeal is preferred from the order of remand, the party aggrieved by the order cannot afterwards dispute its correctness in an appeal from the final decree, see s 105, sub s (2), and notes thereto But though an appeal lies from an order of remand it must be preferred according to the Calcutta High Court before the final disposal of the remanded suit, otherwise it cannot be entertained The reason given is that the right of appeal given by s 104 and O 43 from orders specified therein ceases with the disposal of the suit (w) This decision has been adversely criticised in a subsequent Full Bench decision of the same High Court (x) and the Allahabad High Court has held that the appeal may be preferred even after the decision of the remanded suit, provided it is within the period of limitation The Allahabad Court proceeds on the ground that there is no provision in the Code imposing any such restriction on the right of appeal (y) The period of limitation for an appeal from an order of remand is 90 days from the date of the order [Limitation Act, art 156]

Though an appeal lies under rule 1 of Order 43 from an order of remand, no appeal will lie from the order when the order is itself made in an appeal preferred under any other clause of that rule. Thus if an appeal is preferred under O 43, r 1, cl. (a), from an order under O 7, r 10, or under O 43, r 1, cl. (j), from an order under O 21, r 92 or under O 43, r 1, cl. (q), from an order under O 38, r 6, or under any other clause of Order 43 r 1, and the appellate Court allows the appeal and makes an order of remand, no appeal will lie from the order of remand under O 43, r 1, cl. (u). The reason is that cl. (u) of r 1 of O 43 is subject to s 104, sub s (2), which provides that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal [it may be an order of remand] under that section (z).

Appeal from remand under the inherent power—When the order of remand is made under the inherent jurisdiction recognized in Ghuzna v The Allahabad Bank (a) is it appealable? There are several decisions against such an appeal (b). Mukerji, J., says an appeal lies because the order of remand is itself a decree (c), but if that were so, the provisions of O 43, r 1, cl. (u) would be superfluous. The correct answer seems to be that rule 23 should be construed as widely as possible and that the right of appeal should not be curtailed except on very clear proof of circumstances justifying such curtailment. Therefore, even if the order of remand cannot be justified under the rule yet if it is in substance an order under that rule, an appeal will lie (d). This is, of course subject to the same condition that an appeal would lie from the decree of the appellate Court. The Madras High Court has held that an order of remand in the inherent jurisdiction is not subject to revision (e). The Calcutta High Court says that if the order cannot be justified either under rule 23 or the inherent jurisdiction, the proper remedy is to challenge its validity by revision (f).

Powers of High Court in appeal from order of remand—In an appeal from an order of remand preferred under O 43, r 1, cl. (u), the High Court is not confined to the question whether the order satisfies the requirements of the present rule, but may also determine the correctness of the lower appellate Court's decision on the "preliminary point" on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case. Thus if the Court of first instance dismisses a suit as barred by limitation and the appellate Court reverses the decree and remands the case under this rule, and an appeal is preferred to the High Court from the order of remand the High Court has the power to determine whether the point of limitation was correctly decided by the lower appellate Court (g).

Letters Patent appeal—An order of remand made by a single Judge of the High Court in second appeal is a "judgment" within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, and is appealable as such (h).

Chief Court of Oudh—Under the Oudh Courts Act, 1925, no appeal lies from an order of remand passed by a single Judge of the Chief Court of Oudh in the exercise of his appellate jurisdiction (i)

Privy Council appeal—See notes to s 109

Improper order of remand—Under the Code of 1882 an order under s 562 was appealable and a party might impeach the order of remand on appeal from the final decree. When no appeal was preferred from the order of remand, but the order was impeached on appeal from the final decree, and the Court found that the order was improperly made, the question arose as to whether the order should be treated as illegal, or merely irregular. The High Court of Allahabad held that if a remand was ordered in a case in which it ought not to have been ordered, both the order of remand, and all the proceedings subsequent thereto are void and illegal (j). On the other hand, the Calcutta High Court held that the remand order and the subsequent proceedings are not illegal but merely irregular, and the subsequent proceedings should not be set aside unless the remand had substantially affected the decision of the remanded suit on the merits and the party complaining of the irregularity was materially prejudiced thereby (k) [see s 99]. The Madras High Court held that though an order of remand made in contravention of the provisions of s 562 is illegal, yet the error may be cured by the consent of parties or by waiver (l). The whole difficulty has been got over in the present Code by enacting that a party who does not appeal from an order of remand in the first instance cannot afterwards dispute the correctness of the order on appeal from the final decree (m) see s 105, sub s (2).

Remand of case by consent for trial on issues not raised in appeal—The effect of an appeal is to re-open the decree of the lower Court and it is competent to the appellate Court on the agreement of parties to remand the case to the lower Court for trial on issues not raised in the memorandum of appeal (n).

Trial Court—Jurisdiction to try the case remanded depends entirely upon the order of the appellate Court (o).

24. [S. 565.] Where the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce judgment, the Appellate Court may, after settling the issues, if necessary, finally determine the suit, notwithstanding that the judgment of the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has proceeded wholly upon some ground other than that on which the Appellate Court proceeds.

Scope of the rule—The scope of this rule is limited to cases in which the evidence upon the record is sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit (p).

O. 41,

This rule does not enable an appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been framed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court (q)

Second appeal—See s 103 and notes thereto

25. [S. 566.] Where the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted to frame or try any issue, or to determine any question of fact, which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the right decision of the suit upon the merits, the Appellate Court may, if necessary, frame issues, and refer the same for trial to the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, and in such case shall direct such Court to take the additional evidence required, and such Court shall proceed to try such issues, and shall return the evidence to the Appellate Court together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor.

The words "and the reasons therefor" in paragraph 2 are new

Scope of the rule—This rule refers to cases in which the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the appellate Court to determine the suit

"May, if necessary, frame issues"—In framing issues under this rule the Appellate Court should have regard to the provisions of O 14, r 3, which indicate the materials from which issues are to be framed. The issues may be on points not taken in the grounds of appeal (r). See notes to O 14, rr 1 to 5

Power of Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule—The Court to which issues are referred for trial under this rule has no power to try and decide the case, but to try issues only. It should then return the evidence to the Appellate Court together with its findings thereon and the reasons therefor (s). Nor has it the power to make an order of reference under schedule II, para 3 of the Code (t)

Court by which issues should be tried—Where issues are referred for trial under this rule, they are triable only by the Court which was originally seized of the case, and by no other Court (u)

New issue raised before High Court.—"Even if it be competent to the High Court [in second appeal] to remit a case for re-hearing on an issue not raised in the pleadings or even suggested in the Courts below, this ought only to be done in exceptional cases for good cause shown and on payment of all costs thrown away" (v)

Appeal—No appeal lies under the Code from an order referring issues for trial under this rule (w). But the Court may treat the memorandum of appeal as an

26. [S. 567.] (1) Such evidence and findings shall form part of the record in the suit; and either party may, within a time to be fixed by the Appellate Court, present a memorandum of objections to any finding.

Findings and evidence to be put on record
Objections to finding

(2) After the expiration of the period so fixed for presenting such memorandum the Appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal.

Determination of appeal

Where no memorandum of objection is filed.—This rule provides that either party may file a memorandum of objection to the findings by the lower Court on the issues referred to it by the appellate Court It is not to be supposed, however, that if no objections are filed by either party, the appellate Court is absolved from hearing the appeal (a) But the Lahore High Court has held that the Court may in its discretion decline to hear objections if none have been filed (b). Sub r (2) clearly indicates that even if no objections are filed, the appellate Court "shall proceed to determine the appeal" That is to say, even if no objections are filed to the findings, the Appellate Court is bound to examine the correctness of the findings and to state in its judgment the reasons (r 31) for which it either accepts or rejects the findings (c) It should not accept the findings blindly without examining the evidence on which they are based (d) See notes to r. 31, "Shall state the reasons for the decision"

Where the appellate Court has heard arguments on some of the issues and has expressed its views thereon and remitted other issues under r 25, it is not bound, on the return of findings, to hear the case de novo, but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings (e)

Court fee.—No Court fee is payable on a memorandum of objections (f)

The appellate Court shall proceed to determine the appeal—When an Appellate Court has made an order referring issues for trial under r 25, the return to such order must be made to the same Court, and such Court is not competent to transfer the appeal for disposal to another Court (g)

Unnecessary reference—In the case of a unnecessary reference under r 25, can the Court disregard the findings returned? It can, if the reference order is of a single Judge and the appeal is heard ultimately by a Bench of two Judges (h) But not otherwise for it is an interlocutory order made with jurisdiction and operative in law until set aside in review (i) If the findings conflict with other findings of fact in the judgment, this will not embarrass a Court of first appeal where the entire evidence is examined. A Court of second appeal may, however, be embarrassed and it is therefore preferable not to resort to the rule in second appeal (j) but to remand under the inherent jurisdiction (k)

Second appeal—The provisions of this and the preceding rule apply so far as may be by virtue of O 42 to second appeals. Hence the High Court may in second appeal refer issues of fact for trial to the lower Appellate Court, but when the finding and evidence upon such issues are returned to the High Court, the finding is conclusive and it cannot be challenged upon the evidence before the High Court as in first appeal. The reason is that second appeal is not allowed on questions of fact. The only grounds on which a second appeal is allowed are those mentioned in sec 100, and these relate to errors of law or usage having the force of law or a substantial error or defect in procedure which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits. The objections to the findings must, therefore, be restricted to the limits within which the original pleas in second appeal are confined (l)

Sending back case for revised finding—An Appellate Court has no power to send back a case to the lower Court to submit a revised finding on the fact on evidence already recorded. Such a course is not warranted by any one of the rules 23 to 26 of this Order (m). But if it does so it is a mere irregularity within the meaning of sec 99 and if the Appellate Court, on the revised finding returned to it, itself considers the evidence on which it is based, the decree will not be set aside in appeal (n)

27. [S. 598.] (1) The parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the Appellate Court. But if—

- (a) the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has refused to admit evidence which ought to have been admitted, or
- (b) the Appellate Court requires any document to be produced or any witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment, or for any other substantial cause, the Appellate Court may allow such evidence or document to be produced, or witness to be examined

When additional evidence may be admitted—Under this rule the admissibility of additional evidence is made to depend not upon the relevancy or materiality to the issue before the Court of the evidence sought to be admitted, or upon the fact whether or not the applicants had an opportunity of adducing evidence at some earlier stage, but upon whether or not the Appellate Court requires the evidence to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause (o). Additional evidence under this rule shall not be taken until the appellate Court has examined the evidence on the record and has after such examination come to the conclusion that the evidence as it stands is inherently defective, as, for instance, when the lower Court has omitted to take the evidence of an attesting witness to a mortgage deed (p). Until this is done the appellate Court has no power to admit additional evidence, not even if the evidence offered be the evidence of new matter discovered after the Court of first instance had pronounced its judgment. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kessourji Issur v. G. P. I. Py (q), "the legitimate occasion for the application of the present rule is when, on examining the evidence as it stands some inherent lacuna or defect becomes apparent, not where a discovery is made, outside the Court, of fresh evidence and the application is made to import it." In the subsequent case of Parsootim v. Lal Mohan (r) the Privy Council emphasized the construction put upon the rule in Kessourji's case and said that the rule is not intended to allow a litigant who has been unsuccessful in the lower Court to patch up the weak points in his case and to fill up omissions in the Court of Appeal. It is only when the appellate Court "requires it" (i.e., finds it needful) that additional evidence can be admitted. Their Lordships distinguished the case of Indrajit v. Amar Singh (s) as one in which the Privy Council had exercised a power not governed or restricted by the Code to admit documents which had been rejected by the High Court. Their Lordships also said that incidental remarks made by Mr. Ameer Ali in that case should not be regarded as affecting the meaning of the rule. In a case where additional evidence had been improperly admitted by the High Court the Privy Council left it out of consideration in their judgment (t). On the other hand when additional evidence has been taken with the consent of both parties it is not open to either party to complain of it (u).

Even before Kessourji's case the Privy Council and the Courts in India had said that the power given by this rule should be exercised very sparingly and that great caution should be exercised in admitting new evidence (v). Additional evidence should not be admitted to enable a plaintiff to make out a fresh case in appeal. If cases were remanded for the purpose of allowing parties to make out a fresh case or to improve their case by calling further evidence, there would be no end to litigation (w). The Appellate Court should not admit a document which a party omitted to tender in the lower Court (x), nor allow additional evidence to prove the genuineness of a document held by the lower Court to be a forgery (y). An appellant who has ample opportunity of giving evidence in the lower Court and elects not to do so, but rests his case on the evidence as it stood ought not to be allowed to give evidence which he could have given below (z). For if the party could have applied to the lower Court for an adjournment to call further evidence, for it is an interlocutory order made with jurisdiction and operative in law until set aside in review (4). If the findings conflict with other findings of fact in the judgment this will not embarrass a Court of first appeal where the entire evidence is examined. A Court of second appeal may, however, be embarrassed, and it is therefore preferable not to resort to the rule in second appeal (5) but to remand under the inherent jurisdiction (6).

O. 41, r. 27 but does not do so, and takes the chance of a judgment in his favour on the evidence at his disposal he will not be allowed to call it in the appellate Court (a)

Where the lower Court has refused to admit evidence—An appellate Court should not reverse the decree of the first Court without allowing the decree holder to give evidence which he offered in the first Court, and which that Court declined to take (b) But it has been suggested that this practice should be reviewed, for it is the duty of counsel to prove his case and if counsel acts in deference to an observation of the Court he runs the risk of the Court of Appeal taking a different view of the evidence (c) The improper rejection of evidence does not justify the reversal of the decree and the appellate Court should in that case act under this rule (d) But if the lower Court has rejected evidence which was tendered after the case was closed, the appellate Court should not admit it (e)

Where the appellate Court requires any document to be produced—An appellate Court has no power under this rule to require a document to be produced unless it is required to enable it to pronounce judgment Where judgment could be pronounced in the absence of the document, the appellate Court should not allow the document to be produced (f) The word 'requires' means nothing more than "needs" or 'finds needful' (g) It may be required to enable the Court to pronounce judgment or for other substantial cause, but in either case it must be the Court that requires it (h)

Where the appellate Court requires a witness to be examined—The appellate Court should not under cl. (b) of this rule take additional evidence which impeaches the testimony of a witness called in the Court below, unless that witness is also called and given an opportunity to contradict or explain the additional evidence so given otherwise no witness, whatever his standing, would be safe from adverse judicial comment (i) Where a witness was examined and cross examined in the Court of first instance, and there was no gap in the evidence nor any new matter about which it was necessary to examine him, and the appellate Judge merely cross examined him on his previous evidence 'in order to enable him to pronounce judgment' it was held that the examination of the witness by the Court was not warranted by the provisions of this rule (j)

"Or for any other substantial cause"—These words refer to the requirement of the Court This is made clear in the judgment of the Privy Council in Parseolis case for it is the Court that must require the additional evidence for some substantial cause In Radhakrishnan v Khurshed Hussain (k) the Privy Council refused to allow the record of a previous suit to be admitted when its omission was due to the negligence of the party and their Lordships were able to pronounce judgment without it. If the evidence could have been tendered in the lower Court it is not a substantial cause for producing it in appeal that its omission was due to ignorance of law (l), or to the neglect of the party or his pleader (m) But if the evidence is evidence which it was impossible for the party to produce in the lower Court there may be substantial cause for its

No appeal lies from a refusal by the lower Appellate Court to admit fresh evidence under this rule (c). Hence if the lower Appellate Court refuses to admit a document as additional evidence in appeal under this rule the High Court cannot interfere in second appeal and hold that such additional evidence ought to have been admitted by the lower Appellate Court (d). But in Jethalal v Parajlal (e) a case was remanded under the inherent jurisdiction to the first Appellate Court with a direction to admit additional evidence.

Privy Council appeal—The rejection of an application under this rule does not give a right of appeal to the Privy Council (f).

28. [s. 560] Wherever additional evidence is allowed to be produced, the Appellate Court may either take such evidence, or direct the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, or any other subordinate Court, to take such evidence and to send it when taken to the Appellate Court.

It need hardly be stated that where the additional evidence taken by the Court consists of documents they should be exhibited in the case (g). The lower Appellate Court resumes its functions as a Court of first appeal and can appoint under s. 73 a commissioner for the examination of witnesses (h).

29. [s. 570] Where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the Appellate Court shall specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined, and record on its proceedings the points so specified.

Judgment in Appeal.

30. [s. 571.] The Appellate Court, after hearing the parties or their pleaders and referring to any part of the proceedings, whether on appeal or in the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred, to which reference may be considered necessary, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

After hearing the parties or their pleaders—This rule authorizes the Court to pronounce judgment after hearing the parties or their pleaders. Hence a judgment pronounced without hearing the parties or their representatives if they are lead is unauthorized by the Code. Thus where an Appellate Court heard and decided an appeal without being aware of the death of the appellant the decree was held to be a nullity (i)

Contents, date and signature of judgment

31. [S. 574.] The judgment of the Appellate Court shall be in writing and shall state—

- (a) the points for determination ;
- (b) the decision thereon ;
- (c) the reasons for the decision , and,
- (d) where the decree appealed from is reversed or varied, the relief to which the appellant is entitled ,

and shall at the time that it is pronounced be signed and dated by the Judge or by the Judges concurring therein

Shall state the reasons for the decision—The judgment of the Appellate Court should state the reasons for the decision. The reason of the rule has been stated to be to afford the litigant parties an opportunity of knowing and understanding the grounds upon which the decision proceeds with a view to enable them to exercise if they see fit and are so advised the right of second appeal conferred by s. 100. If an Appellate Court could dispose of appeals simply by giving it in a judgment which does not state the reasons for the decision the right of second appeal might altogether be neutralized (j). The reason for the decision should be stated not only when the decree of the first Court is varied or set aside but also when it is confirmed (k). If this rule is not observed, the proper form of the order to be made by the High Court in second appeal is to set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and send back the case to that Court in order that the appeal may be disposed of according to law (l). This course was adopted where the judgment was appeal dismissed with costs (m) and in another case where the judgment was appeal rejected under s. 501 (now O 41 r 11) of the Civil Procedure Code (n). Even when an appeal is dismissed under r 11 a judgment is necessary.—See note under that rule at p. 1036. Where the decree of the first Court is confirmed in appeal the Judge of the Appellate Court should state his own reasons and should not confine himself to approving of the reasons of the Court of first instance (o). This is because the judgment should show on the face of it that the points in dispute were clearly before the mind of the Judge and that he exercised his own discrimination in deciding them (p). Thus where the judgment was— To deal with the grounds of appeal would be simply to repeat the judgment of the District Munsif. I concur in the decision the District Munsif has given on each point. The judgment of the lower Court is confirmed, for the reasons therein set forth and this appeal is dismissed with costs the judgment was set aside (q). In the last mentioned case the Court observed. Such a general and

Privy Council appeal—Non-compliance with the requirements of this rule is not a ground of appeal to the Privy Council (2)

32. [S. 577.] The judgment may be for confirming, varying or reversing the decree from which the appeal is preferred, or, if the parties to the appeal agree as to the form which the decree in appeal shall take, or as to the order to be made in appeal, the Appellate Court may pass a decree or make an order accordingly.

33. [Nec.] The Appellate Court shall have power to pass any decree and make any order which ought to have been passed or made and to pass or make such further or other decree or order as the case may require, and this power may be exercised by the Court notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and may be exercised in favour of all or any of the respondents or parties, although such respondents or parties may not have filed any appeal or objection.

Provided that the Appellate Court shall not make any order under sec 35-A, in pursuance of any objection on which the Court from whose decree the appeal is preferred has omitted or refused to make such order (a)

Illustration

A claims a sum of money as due to him from X or Y, and in a suit against both obtains a decree against X. A appeals and A and Y are respondents. The appellate Court decides in favour of X. It has power to pass a decree against Y.

Cases to which rule applies—This rule is new. It is taken for the most part from O 58, r 4, of the Rules of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England. The object of the rule is to empower the appellate Court to do complete justice between the parties. O 41, r 4, and this rule give the Court ample power to make the order appropriate to the ends of justice. Under the former rule upon an appeal by one of the parties on a ground common to all, the decree may be varied in favour of all, under the latter rule the Court has power to make the proper decree notwithstanding that the appeal is as to part only of the decree and such power may be exercised in favour of all or any of the parties even though they may not have filed an appeal or objection (b). The illustration to the rule indicates a type of case for which provision is intended to be made. The following are further instances.—

(1) A sues B and C for contribution. A decree is passed against B, but as against C the suit is dismissed. B appeals making A alone respondent to the appeal. A does not appeal from the decree dismissing the suit as against C. If the appellate Court is of opinion that C is liable, and not B, it may under r 20 direct that C be added as a respondent as being a person "interested in the result of the appeal" and may under the present rule alter the decree so as to make C liable though no appeal

(a) The proviso was added by Act 9 of 1922

O. 41, r. 33 was preferred by A from the dismissal of the suit against C. This is in accordance with the Calcutta ruling under the Code of 1892 (c). According to the Allahabad rulings under that Code C could neither be added as a respondent nor even if he were joined as a respondent from the first could any decree be passed against him, no appeal having been preferred against him (d). The Allahabad ruling that C could not be added as a respondent (under r. 20) was followed by the Madras High Court (e). The present rule gives effect to the Calcutta rulings and supersedes the Allahabad and Madras ruling. The undernoted case is a Calcutta decision on all fours with the illustration (f).

(2) A suit is brought on behalf of the public for (1) a declaration that the public are entitled to use certain locks on a certain river without payment of tolls, and (2) a declaration that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair. A decree is passed for the plaintiff awarding the relief as to the use of the locks without payment of tolls, but declaring that the defendant is under no obligation to repair the locks. The defendant appeals. The plaintiff neither files a cross appeal nor objections. The Appellate Court finds that the public are not entitled to use the locks without payment of tolls to the defendant. At the same time it finds that the defendant is under an obligation to keep the locks in repair. The appellate Court has power, while declaring by its decree that the public are liable to pay tolls, also to declare that the defendant is liable to keep the locks in repair, notwithstanding that no appeal or objection was taken to that part of the decree by the plaintiff (g).

(3) Plaintiff sued for ejectment of tenants in possession of land that he had purchased and in the alternative for compensation against his vendor. The first Court dismissed the suit against the tenants and awarded compensation against the vendor. The plaintiff did not appeal, but the vendor appealed and established that he had conveyed a good title to the plaintiff. The Court of appeal reversed the decree for compensation and gave the plaintiff a decree for possession and mesne profits against the tenants (h).

The cases referred to in illustration (1) shew that a person against whom a suit has been dismissed may be made a party to the appeal of a co defendant under rule 20 and a decree may be passed against him under rule 33. But after time for filing an appeal against him has expired the Rangoon High Court has held that he is not a party interested in the result of the appeal and that he cannot be added as a respondent (i). The Privy Council affirmed this decision but seem to have suggested the possibility of such a person being added as a party under rule 33. Their Lordships said "In these circumstances the Appellate Court, in the exercise of their discretion, refused to take action under the rule so as to deprive the defendants of the very valuable right they had acquired in consequence of the plaintiff's failure to appeal against the decrees in so far as they affected them. Assuming that under this rule the Court in a proper case might add a defendant as respondent for the purpose of passing a decree against him their Lordships see no sufficient reason for interfering with the refusal of the Appellate Court to do so in this instance (j).

It does constantly occur where some persons appeal and others do not that the Court is put in a position of having to make impossible or contradictory or unworkable orders. Accordingly it has been given power to make a decree in favour of persons who have not — approached. The power may be exercised by the Court in favour of any of the parties who may not have filed any appeal or objection (1). The Appellate Court may under this rule vary the decree of the lower Court though the variation may benefit a defendant who has not appealed from the decree (2). Thus when plaintiff's claim was decreed partly against A and partly against B, and A appealed and B did not, the Appellate Court under this rule made a decree exempting B and making A liable for the whole amount (a). Again in a case where A obtained a decree for redemption against B and appealed on the ground that the amount he was decreed to pay was too large, the Court of appeal finding that A was not entitled to redeem, not only dismissed the appeal but dismissed the suit although B had not appealed (b). The power is however discretionary and Sir Lawrence Jenkins said 'the rules are widely expressed but they must be applied with discretion (c)'. In a recent Allahabad case (p), a mother and son sued as legal representatives of a reversionary heir to recover property, and the suit was decreed in favour of the son, but dismissed as regards the mother. The mother did not appeal as she was satisfied with a decree in favour of the son. On appeal to the High Court the son's suit was dismissed on the ground that he was a son by a former marriage. The effect of the decision was that the mother was entitled, but the Court refused to exercise its power under this rule. The Allahabad High Court has held that when there is a common defence a Court of appeal may dismiss a suit as against a defendant who has not appealed (q), but not if there is no common ground of defence (r). In a Patna Case (s) the plaintiff obtained a decree in the first Court against A, B and C for contribution. A alone appealed and the High Court under this rule dismissed the suit not only against A but against B and C as well. The plaintiff appealed and the Privy Council restored the decree of the first Court. In execution proceedings it was contended that this had not the effect of reviving the decree against B and C which had become time barred. But it was held that as O 11, r 31 enables an Appellate Court to deal with the entire decree although the appeal may be as to part only, the entire decree becomes the subject matter of the appeal even when the appeal is from part of the decree and by some only of the parties, so that the final decree for purposes of limitation under art 182 (2) was the decree of the Privy Council, and that the application for execution was therefore within time. Similarly the Appellate Court has power under this rule to make an order for extension of time for making an award in a matter governed by the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899 (t).

Cases to which rule does not apply.—A sues B to recover rent, Rs 205. A decree is passed in favour of A for Rs 95 only. A appeals against the disallowance of the balance of the amount claimed. B neither files a cross appeal nor objections against the decree. The appellate Court finds that nothing is due to A from B. The Appellate Court has no power to dismiss A's claim in toto. If B was aggrieved by the decree against him for Rs 95, he ought to have appealed or filed objections (u). But the limitation

O. 41, r. 33 against interference in favour of a person who has not appealed is not always observed, at any rate by the Madras High Court, A obtained an ex parte decree against B and C. B applied to set aside the ex parte decree and it was set aside against both B and C. In appeal the High Court confirmed the order as to B, but reversed the order setting aside the ex parte decree against C. When the suit against B was tried, it was found that the document on which the suit was filed was not genuine, and the High Court then dismissed the suit not only against B but also against C (v). Again it has been held that the rule does not apply when the decree is really a combination of several decrees against several defendants (w). But the Madras High Court has not observed this rule in a suit by reversioners to set aside a number of alienations to different alienees. The suit was decreed against all the alienees. Some only of the alienees appealed yet the suit was dismissed against all the alienees including those who had not appealed (x). A a minor and her mother were the heirs of a mortgagee. The mother for herself and as guardian of A assigned the mortgage to B. B realized the mortgage debt by execution of a decree for sale, the auction purchaser being C. The assignment was not binding on the minor, and A on attaining majority sued to recover her share of the mortgage debt from the hypotheca in C's hands, and in the alternative from B personally. The suit was decreed as against the hypotheca, but was dismissed as against B. A did not appeal against the dismissal of the suit against B. C however appealed and in that appeal the Madras High Court joined B as a party in order to see whether a decree could be made against him in case the decree against the hypotheca should be set aside. The Court then reversed the decree against the hypotheca and decreed the suit as against B (z1). The Court distinguished the Privy Council decision in Choralingham v. See'hai (z2) that, when a person has acquired a valuable right, by reason of an appeal against him being time barred he cannot be added as a respondent. This decision was held not to be applicable as A was not to blame for not appealing against the dismissal of his suit against B so long as the decree against the hypotheca was not set aside. This case answers for the Madras High Court the point raised but not decided the Privy Council in the case cited as to whether a respondent can be added for the purpose of having a decree made against him under O. 41, r. 33. Mukerji, J., on a review of all the cases said the rule should be cautiously applied and only in cases where but for recourse to it the ends of justice would be defeated (y). The High Court of Allahabad has held that the Court has no power under this rule to pass a decree against a person who is not to the wife for the maintenance and education of the children under this rule to hold that complete justice cannot be done to the wife for alimony is increased (c)

C for costs only. A does not appeal, but B and C each appeal. C's appeal is allowed. To B's appeal A files cross objections directed against C, but does not make C a party. The Court cannot in B's appeal make an order under this rule against C, for C was not a party to that appeal (a). Again if the whole appeal has abated owing to the death of a necessary party it is impossible to invoke this rule for the benefit of the survivors (b).

Privy Council appeal—In an appeal to Privy Council from a High Court under the rule to a party who has not appealed to the High Court, the agent C for damages for breach of two contracts. The first Court found B liable in respect of both contracts and as against C made an order for costs. On appeal against the dismissal of the suit as against C but by the High Court modified the decree making B liable only as to one contract. On appeal A appealed to Privy Council making both B and C respondents. The Privy Council found that C was liable as regards the contract as to which the High Court had found in favour of B. But the Lordships said that the appeal against C was an appeal from a judgment of a Judge who was not all-wise (f).

Such other decree as the case may require.—The power of the court is not limited to determining the question whether the original Court was competent to the law in force at the date of its judgment. It may pass a decree in accordance with any later enactment which came into operation subsequent to the judgment.

Remand — I sue B for three sums of money λ , γ and z . A claims a verdict as to items λ and γ but disallows as to item z . A appeals from the lower court as to z . B appeals from the decree as to items λ and γ . The appellate court disallows A's appeal and allows B's appeal as to item λ only with the result that item γ is decreed in A's favour. A then appeals to the High Court as to items λ and z . The High Court has power under this rule to remand the whole case for determination on the merits. The effect of such an order is to empower the lower Court to re-argue the case even as to item γ which was decided by the lower appellate Court in favour of A and from which decision B had not referred an appeal to the High Court.

Proviso—The proviso was added by Act 9 of 1937. Its effect is that the appellate Court cannot allow a claim for compensatory costs which has been allowed by the original Court.

Inherent power of High Court. The Court of first instance declined to set aside the decree on the ground that the documentary evidence was in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff was allowed to produce oral evidence in second appeal, that though there was no evidence to the case, the High Court was warranted in setting aside the proceedings of both the Courts below and in directing a new trial. See notes to r 33, "Remand".

ORDER XLIV.

Pauper Appeals.

O. 44, r. 1 1. [S. 592.] Any person entitled to prefer an appeal, who is unable to pay the fee required for the memorandum of appeal, may present an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal, and may be allowed to appeal as a pauper, subject, in all matters, including the presentation of such application, to the provisions relating to suits by paupers, in so far as those provisions are applicable

Who may appeal as pauper

Provided that the Court shall reject the application unless, upon a perusal thereof and of the judgment and decree appealed from, it sees reason to think that the decree is contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law, or is otherwise erroneous or unjust

Procedure on application for admission of appeal

Alteration in the rule.—The words in all matters including the presentation of such application in the first paragraph are new See notes below under those words

Unable to pay the fee.—In a Madras case (v) the petitioner had obtained a decree for maintenance and sought to appeal in forma pauperis for higher maintenance but the defendant paid Rs 571 arrears of maintenance into Court to her credit and the petition was dismissed on the ground that she had sufficient means to pay the Court fee on the memorandum of appeal. See however note under O 33 r 1, Subject matter of the suit

* In all matters including the presentation of such application.—The present rule provides that the provisions relating to suits by paupers shall apply so far as may be to appeals by paupers. Therefore the application referred to in this rule for leave to appeal as a pauper must be presented by the applicant in person just as an application for leave to sue as a pauper [See O 33 r 3]. This is now made clear by the addition of the words in all matters including the presentation of such application. In the absence of these words in the old section it was held by the Madras High Court that the rule as to the presentation of a pauper's petition (now contained in O 33 r 3) did not apply to pauper appeals (x). The Madras decision is no longer law.

* Subject to the provision relating to suits by paupers.—A sues B to recover certain properties as the heir of her deceased husband. The suit is dismissed. A applies for leave to appeal as a pauper. It is found on inquiry that A had before instituting the suit entered into an agreement falling within the terms of O 33 r 5(d) which would have disentitled A to sue to as a pauper. The appellate Court should under these circumstances refuse leave to A to appeal as a pauper (x).

(c) Mahalakshmi In re (1906) 50 Mad L J 114 94 J C 33 (26) A 31 567
(e) Mulathi v Somappa (1903) 28 Mad 369

(x) Hanfa Bai v Haji Sidi (1903) 30 Mad 54

Application and memorandum of appeal.—This rule requires two separate documents to be presented,—a memorandum of appeal and an application for leave to appeal as a pauper. When the Judge disposes of the pauper application, he does not thereby necessarily dispose of the appeal. He may still treat it as an existing appeal if the appellant desires to pay the full court fees on the appeal and to continue it as an ordinary appeal. The Judge is under no legal obligation to dismiss the appeal when he refuses the appellant leave to appeal as a pauper (y). Following this reasoning, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that where an application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected owing to the memorandum of appeal which accompanied it being unstamped, the rejection of the application does not carry with it the rejection of the memorandum of appeal. The result is that if the pauper applies for time to pay the court fee, and time is granted to him [a 149], and the court fee is paid within the time fixed by the Court, the appeal must be held to be in time, though the court fee may have been paid after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed for filing the appeal (z).

Proviso to the rule.—The proviso is mandatory (a) and is a necessary safeguard introduced by the legislature for the benefit of litigants who find themselves opposed by paupers. To provide a safeguard against the proviso being overlooked, the Judge admitting a pauper appeal should express and record briefly the reasons on which the leave proceeds (b). Leave to appeal in forma pauperis was refused against a judgment which held that the Secretary of State was not liable for an alleged tort committed by the police (c). The Madras High Court has held that it is sufficient that the appellant has a good prima facie case and that it is not necessary for the Court to arrive at a definite conclusion that the decree complained of is contrary to law or is otherwise unjust or erroneous (d), but this decision has been disapproved of by another Bench of the same High Court (e).

The Patna and Lahore High Courts hold that if the Court does not reject the application under the proviso and issues notice to the Government pleader and the opposite party, they are entitled on the analogy of rules 5 and 7 of O 33 to show not only that the applicant is not a pauper but also that the application should be rejected under the proviso (f). The Madras High Court differs and holds that the analogy of rules 5 and 7 of O 33 does not apply. Therefore according to the Madras High Court the opposite party is not entitled as of right to be heard on the question as to whether the application should be rejected under the proviso and after the issue of notice for the inquiry into pauperism it is not open to the respondent to object that the application should have been rejected (g). The Allahabad High Court takes the same view but following an overruled Patna decision (h).

The proviso is of course not applicable unless the appeal is in forma pauperis (1).

judgments were very nearly identical (i) It need hardly be observed that suits that can be consolidated for the purposes of pecuniary valuation must be suits actually instituted and not merely suits in gremio futuris (j)

Judgment—The judgment referred to in this rule is the judgment appealed against and not the judgment of the lower Court (k)

Inherent power to consolidate cases—This rule provides for consolidation of cases "for the purposes of pecuniary valuation" The High Court of Patna has held that the High Court has inherent powers to permit consolidation of cases on grounds other than those specified in this rule Accordingly where two appeals to His Majesty on Council were in substance one, the two were ordered to be consolidated and tried together, the Court observing that 'in the interests of justice and to save unnecessary expense the appeals ought to be consolidated' (l)

5. [New.] In the event of any dispute arising between the parties as to the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance, or as to the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute on appeal to His Majesty in Council, the Court to which a petition for a certificate is made under rule 2 may, if it thinks fit, refer such dispute for report to the Court of first instance, which last mentioned Court shall proceed to determine such amount or value and shall return its report together with the evidence to the Court by which the reference was made.

Dispute as to value of subject matter—This rule is new It gives legislative recognition to the practice followed under the Code of 1882 in cases where there was a dispute as to the value of the subject matter of the suit This practice is referred to in the undermentioned Calcutta case (m) where it was held that a plaintiff in a suit for damages cannot ensure an appeal to the Privy Council by merely placing his damages at a sufficiently high figure A claims Rs 10,000 as damages for an alleged defamation The suit is dismissed on the ground that the libel was privileged, and the decision is affirmed in appeal A applies for leave to appeal to the Privy Council The mere fact that A claimed Rs 10,000 as damages is not sufficient proof that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs 10,000 Therefore if the other party dispute the correctness of the amount A must show that the amount of the matter in dispute is Rs 10,000 When there is a contest as to the true value of the matter in dispute it has been the invariable practice—a practice sanctioned by the Judicial Committee—to ascertain by evidence and enquiry what the true value is But where an inquiry has already been made at the trial of the suit by the Court of first instance as to the value of the subject matter of the suit, and the finding as to the value has been acquiesced in by the applicant, the High Court need not direct a fresh inquiry under this rule (n) In this connection it may be noted that a defendant who has adopted a value given by the plaintiff in an appeal to the High Court cannot when applying for leave to appeal

(2) Where the applicant prefers to print in India the copy of the record, except as aforesaid, he shall also within the time mentioned in sub-rule (1) deposit the amount required to defray the expense of printing such copy.

Rule amended—The italicized words were added into this rule by Act 26 of 1920. In sub-rule (1), the words originally were "within six months". The period is now reduced to 90 days. See notes below "Extension of time". The provisions were also added by the same Act.

Date of the decree—This means the date on which the decree is pronounced not that on which it is signed (r).

Extension of time—It has been held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the High Court may extend the time allowed for giving the security and making the deposit provided there are "cogent reasons" for doing so (s). According to the Madras High Court the "cogent reasons" must be such as would lead the Court to believe that the party was diligent in due time to be prepared to lodge the deposit within the limited period, and that he was prevented from doing so not owing to the absence and difficulty of getting funds, but owing to some circumstances accidental or otherwise over which he had no control or owing to mistake which the Court would consider not unreasonable or caused by negligence (t). On the other hand, it has been held by the Chief Court of the Punjab that poverty is a cogent reason for extending the time if the amount required is large and the applicant has deposited a substantial portion of the amount within the time originally allowed (u). Prior to Act 26 of 1920 it was the uniform practice to extend time on good cause shown. But the object of the amending Act was to expedite Privy Council appeals and the restrictive words used limit the Court's discretion so that the Court can in no case grant an extension of more than sixty days (v). The Allahabad High Court has held that the shorter period allowed by the amending Act does not apply when the decree was passed before the Act came into force (w). The Bombay High Court has however held that under rule 9 of the Privy Council Rules, 1920, an extension can be granted (x). But the Madras High Court and the Oudh Chief Court differ and hold that the Privy Council rule does not empower the Court to extend time beyond that specified in this rule (y).

Change of security—The Bombay High Court has held that if the appellant fails to furnish the security required the High Court may under rule 9 of the Privy Council rules change the form of the security (z).

Security in case of consolidated appeal—Where two or more appeals are consolidated for purposes of pecuniary valuation, the security required by this rule is the whole security which the appellants together have to furnish and not only a part of it. Therefore if two or more appeals are consolidated, and some sets of appellants furnish the security required from them, but others do not, the consolidated appeals cannot be admitted under r. 8 below (a).

Costs in England paid out of deposit—The High Court may order the amounts deposited as security to be paid to the respondent's solicitors in England in satisfaction of their bill of costs taxed before the Privy Council (b)

Records.—The Privy Council have strongly condemned the inclusion in the record of unnecessary papers and disallowed the costs occasioned thereby (c)

Delay—If delay in the preparation of the record is due to the inaction of the appellant it seems that the appeal may be certified as not effectually prosecuted (d)

Compromise Inadmissible—After the grant of the certificate the High Court has no jurisdiction to pass a decree in terms of a compromise in supersession of the decree appealed against (e)

Appeal—No appeal lies under cl 15 of the Charter from an order refusing to extend the time for furnishing security for costs and directing the appeal to be struck off (f)

8. [S. 603.] Where such security has been furnished and deposit made to the satisfaction of the Court, the Court shall—

- (a) declare the appeal admitted,
- (b) give notice thereof to the respondent,
- (c) transmit to His Majesty in Council under the seal of the Court a correct copy of the said record, except as aforesaid, and
- (d) give to either party one or more authenticated copies of any of the papers in the suit on his applying therefor and paying the reasonable expenses incurred in preparing them

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, on special cause shown by any party interested in the suit, or otherwise appearing to the Court,—

- (a) impound any movable property in dispute or any part thereof, or
- (b) allow the decree appealed from to be executed, taking such security from the respondent as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal, or
- (c) stay the execution of the decree appealed from, taking such security from the appellant as the Court thinks fit for the due performance of the decree appealed from, or of any order which His Majesty in Council may make on the appeal or
- (d) place any party seeking the assistance of the Court under such conditions or give such other direction respecting the subject matter of the appeal, as it thinks fit, by the appointment of a receiver or otherwise.

Alterations in the rule —

1 The words "admitting the appeal" which occurred in the first paragraph of the old section after the word "Court" have been omitted. Those words gave rise to a conflict of decisions on the question whether the Court had power under the old section to stay the execution of the decree appealed from after a petition had been presented for leave to appeal but before the appeal was admitted. It was held by the High Court of Bombay that the Court had the power (h). On other hand, it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that the Court had no such power, the decision being based on the ground that the words "the Court admitting the appeal" indicated that no stay could be granted until the appeal was admitted (i). The words "admitting the appeal" have been omitted to make it clear that the power conferred by this rule may be exercised at any time after the presenting of the petition, and even before the grant of a certificate for the admission of the appeal.

Another result of the omission of the words "admitting the appeal" after the word "Court" is to invest the High Court with power to stay execution, notwithstanding that an appeal has been admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (j). Under the Code of 1882 it was held that since the powers conferred by the corresponding s 608 O. could only be exercised by the Court admitting the appeal the High Court had no power to stay execution where the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (l)

It seems unnecessary to add that a District Court cannot stay execution and that the provisions of O 41, r 6, have no application (l)

2 The words 'by the appointment of a receiver or otherwise' at the end of cl. (d) are new

"The Court.—The Court referred to in this rule and r 14 is the High Court (m)

Stay of execution before grant of certificate—See notes above Alterations in the rule, no 1

Stay of execution in view of an application for special leave to appeal—The High Court has an inherent power to make an order for stay of execution in view of an application by the judgment-debtor to the Judicial Committee for special leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council (n)

Stay of hearing of the suit—The High Court reversed an ex parte decree on a mortgage and directed the suit to be reheard The mortgagee's appeal to the Privy Council was admitted and the Calcutta High Court held that the Court had power either under this rule or in its inherent jurisdiction to stay the hearing of the suit pending the appeal (o)

Clause (b)—The respondent decree holder's failure to give security will not deprive him of the benefit of sec 15 of the Limitation Act (p)

Clause (c)—If the Court fixes a time for furnishing security as a condition of stay of execution it is advisable that the time for tender of security should be specified with further directions for the inquiry as to its sufficiency (q) Proceedings for final decree for partition after a preliminary decree has been passed are not execution proceedings which can be stayed under this rule (r)

Security after execution—The Court has power to require security to be given under this rule even after the decree has been executed wholly or in part (s) It has also the power to stay further execution after the decree has been partially executed (t)

Stay of execution where appeal admitted by special leave—See notes above Alterations in the rule No 1 second paragraph

Appointment of receiver where appeal admitted by special leave—The High Court has power to appoint a receiver under cl. (d) notwithstanding that the appeal was admitted by special leave of His Majesty in Council (u)

Practice—Applications of the character mentioned in this rule ought always to be made in the first instance at any rate to the Court in India which has ample power to deal with the matter according to the circumstances of the particular case, and his knowledge of details which the Judicial Committee cannot possess on an interlocutory application (i) If the application is refused by the High Court, and the Judicial Committee is of opinion that the application ought to have been granted, it may grant a stay of execution, and will give leave to the respondent to apply to the High Court for an order as to security or any other relief. As the order is that of the King in Council, the High Court is bound to take notice of it and to govern itself accordingly (ii)

14. [S. 609.] Where at any time during the pendency of the appeal the security furnished by either party appears inadequate, the Court may, on the application of the other party, require further security.

In the use of security found inadequate

(2) In default of such further security being furnished as required by the Court,—

(a) if the original security was furnished by the appellant, the Court may, on the application of the respondent, execute the decree appealed from as if the appellant had furnished no such security;

(b) if the original security was furnished by the respondent, the Court shall, so far as may be practicable, stay the further execution of the decree, and restore the parties to the position in which they respectively were when the security which appears inadequate was furnished, or give such direction respecting the subject-matter of the appeal as it thinks fit.

the Judges of the High Court had differed in opinion as to the propriety of staying execution of Isaiah v. Shri Jagat (1906) 23 Mat. 371 A 132 (where the application was made by the respondent for a stay of execution and the High Court granted a stay for three months only, holding it had no power to grant a stay until the disposal of the appeal to the Privy Council) made in appeal and sought to be executed, to the Court from O. 4 which the appeal to His Majesty was preferred.

(2) Such Court shall transmit the order of His Majesty in Council to the Court which passed the first decree appealed from, or to such other Court as His Majesty in Council by such order may direct, and shall (upon the application of either party) give such directions as may be required for the execution of the same; and the Court to which the said order is so transmitted shall execute it accordingly, in the manner and according to the provisions applicable to the execution of its original decrees.

(3) When any monies expressed to be payable in British currency are payable in India under such order, the amount so payable shall be estimated according to the rate of exchange for the time being fixed at the date of the making of the order by the Secretary of State for India in Council with the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and the Indian Governments.

(4) Unless His Majesty in Council is pleased otherwise to direct, no order of His Majesty in Council shall be inoperative on the ground that no notice has been served on or given to the legal representative of any deceased opposite party or deceased respondent in a case, where such opposite party or respondent did not appear either at the hearing in the Court whose decree was complained of or at any proceedings subsequent to the decree of that Court, but such order shall have the same force and effect as if it had been made before the death took place.

Alterations in the rule—Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the old section which related to the enforcement of the liability of a surety for the costs of the respondents have been omitted in view of the general rule now laid down in sec 145. Para 4 was added by Act 26 of 1920 in order to prevent delays in the disposal of Privy Council appeals.

Jurisdiction of Patna High Court—The Patna High Court has no jurisdiction

“Whoever desires to obtain execution”—The Patna High Court has held that when a decree is passed in favour of a number of persons jointly an application by any one of them under this rule is sufficient to entitle all of them to apply in execution to the Court below. But that when several persons are entitled to separate shares, an

O. 45, r. 15 order for transmission passed at the instance of one of them would not entitle the others to apply for execution to the lower Court (z) But according to the Madras High Court an order for transmission passed at the instance of any one decree holder enures in all cases for the benefit of the others and that it is not necessary that each person interested should obtain a separate transmission order (a)

Functions of the High Court under this rule—The act of the High Court in receiving and filing orders of His Majesty in Council under this rule is a purely ministerial function. The High Court, therefore, has no power, under this rule to discuss the effect of the order of His Majesty in Council on an application to file the order. If the order is impeached as erroneous, the proper course for the party aggrieved by the order is to apply to His Majesty in Council to make the necessary alteration or modification in the order (b). But whether the order is ministerial or not, if the Judge makes an order under a misapprehension of his jurisdiction an appeal lies (c).

"Execution"—The word "execution" includes restitution as described in sec 144. A person, therefore, who desires to obtain execution, though it be by way of restitution, must apply in the first instance to the Court indicated by this rule (d). The provisions of this rule are mandatory so that if the petition is presented to a different Court the execution application is liable to be dismissed (e).

Application for execution of order of His Majesty in Council by assignee of order—Where an order of His Majesty in Council is transmitted by the High Court for execution under sub r (2) to the Court which passed the first decree appealed from, the latter Court is not in the position of a Court to which a decree is transferred for execution, and it is not therefore precluded from entertaining an application for execution of the order by an assignee of the order (f). See O 21, r 16, and notes thereto, "Application for execution by a transferee should be made to the Court which passed the decree."

Enforcement of liability of surety—A obtains a decree against B in a High Court for possession of certain immovable property. B appeals to the Privy Council, and C stands surety for A's costs of the appeal [r 7, sub r 1, cl (a)]. If the appeal is dismissed with costs A may proceed against C for costs by an application for execution [s 145].

Assuming in the case put above that A applies for execution of the decree, and that possession of the property is delivered to him on D standing surety for re delivery of the property to B, and for the payment of mesne profits in the event of B's appeal being successful [r 13, sub r (2), cl (b)] and that the Privy Council allows B's appeal and reverses the decree of the High Court, in that event if A fails to re deliver the property or to pay the mesne profits to B, B may proceed against D by an application for execution [s 145] (g).

Restitution—A obtains a decree against B for possession of certain immovable property. Possession of the property is delivered to him in execution. The decree is then set aside in appeal to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal to the Privy Council the property is sold in execution of a decree obtained by C against A, and it is purchased by P. B is entitled on reversal of the decree by the Privy Council to restitution of the property as against P, the latter being a "representative" of A within the meaning of sec 47 (h) The Patna High Court considers that proceedings for restitution are not proceedings in execution and so in Patna applications for restitution consequent on a Privy Council decree are not made under this rule to the High Court but to the trial Court (i) The Allahabad High Court treats such an application as one to enforce an Order in Council and as subject as regards limitation to art 183 of the Limitation Act (j) See note under s. 144 Against whom restitution may be claimed and whether a proceeding under this section is a proceeding in execution

Mesne profits—Where a party is dispossessed of land in pursuance of a decree of the High Court and the decree is reversed in appeal to the Privy Council he is entitled not only to restoration of the land, but to mesne profits during the period of dispossession though the order of His Majesty in Council may be silent as to such profits (k) See sec 144

Rate of exchange—The Courts have differed on the question whether the words for the time being refer to the rate of exchange at the date of the passing of the order or to that current when the amount is realised The former view is held by the Calcutta High Court (l), the latter by the Allahabad High Court (m)

Interest on costs—Where interest on costs is not allowed in the order of His Majesty in Council, such interest cannot be given by any Court in this country (n)

Letters Patent appeal—An appeal lies under cl 15 of the Letters Patent from an order of a single Judge of a High Court refusing to transmit for execution the order of His Majesty in Council as provided by sub rule (2) of this rule (o), or giving directions in modification of the order of His Majesty in Council (p)

Limitation.—An application for execution under this rule is governed by art 183 of the Limitation Act, 1903 (q)

ally with the matter of the suit, but merely recognizes authoritatively that the appellant had not complied with the conditions under which the appeal was open to him, and that therefore he is in the same position as if he had not appealed at all (r)

16. [S. 611.] The orders made by the Court which executes the order of His Majesty in Council, relating to such execution, shall be appealable in the same manner and subject to the same rules as the orders of such Court relating to the execution of its own decrees.

ORDER XLVI.

Reference.

O. 46, r. 1

1. [S. 617.] Where, before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal, or where, in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court.

Reference of question to High Court

Alterations in the rule—

- 1 The words "is not subject to appeal" have been substituted for the word 'final,' as the expression "final decree" is now used in this Code in contradistinction to a "preliminary decree"
- 2 The words, "or the construction of a document, which construction may affect the merits," which occurred in the old section after the words, "having the force of law," have been omitted, as they are sufficiently covered by the power to refer any question of law

Hearing of a suit or appeal—A reference can be made to the High Court under this rule only in a suit or an appeal in a suit, and not in every matter before the Court in which a point arises on which the Court entertains reasonable doubt (s) Thus where a pleader was fined Rs 25 by a Subordinate Judge for refusing to act on behalf of his client after receipt of retaining fee, and on appeal the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court under this rule, it was held that an reference could properly be made under this rule as there was suit or appeal in a suit (t) Nor can any reference be made in a proceeding other than a suit or an appeal in a suit even by virtue of the provisions of sec 141 above (u) See notes to sec 141, "The procedure provided in this Code," etc

Decree not subject to appeal—This rule does not authorize a reference to the High Court except in a suit or appeal in which the decree is not subject to appeal Therefore no reference can be made to the High Court in a matter in which an appeal lies, for in appealable cases a remedy to correct possible error is provided by the appeal It is only when a decree is not subject to appeal that a reference can be made under this rule (t) In Rampkul v Durga (u), a Munsif, being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to entertain a particular suit, returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court On appeal, the District Judge referred the matter to the High Court The High Court held that the order of the Munsif returning the plaint being an appealable order [O 43, r 1, cl. (a)], the High Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the reference. On the same ground it is held that there could be no reference under this rule in a matter of probate, and that an order made by a District Judge on an application for probate being appealable, it cannot be referred for the opinion of the High Court under this rule though, when referred the High Court may deal with the case as a Court of concurrent jurisdiction under sec 264 of the Indian Succession Act (z)

Jurisdiction—It has been said that a Judge who has no jurisdiction to hear a suit or an appeal has no jurisdiction to make a reference before or at the hearing of such suit or appeal (y). But in a case where a Small Cause Court Judge doubted if he had jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the Calcutta High Court accepted a reference and directed him to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court (z)

Reasonable doubt.—A reference under this rule can only be made when a Judge entertains a reasonable doubt on a question of law or usage having the force of law. A Judge cannot ordinarily entertain a reasonable doubt on a point clearly decided by the rulings of the High Court to which he is subordinate, unless the authority of the decision can be questioned by virtue of anything said or decided in the Privy Council (a). If the Court has no reasonable doubt it should not make a reference merely because it is asked to make one (b)

Reference by Presidency Small Cause Court.—See Presidency Small Cause Court, 1882, s 69

2. [S. 618.] The Court may either stay the proceedings or proceed in the case notwithstanding such reference, and may pass a decree or make an order contingent upon the decision of the High Court on the point referred ;

but no decree or order shall be executed in any case in which such reference is made until the receipt of a copy of the judgment of the High Court upon the reference.

3. [S. 619.] The High Court, after hearing the parties if they appear and desire to be heard, shall decide the point so referred, and shall transmit a copy of its judgment, under the signature of the Registrar, to the Court by which the reference was made ; and such Court shall, on the receipt thereof, proceed to dispose of the case in conformity with the decision of the High Court.

High Court The High Court held that upon the case presented by the plaintiffs they could not re over The judgment of the High Court was transmitted to the Small Cause Court and the Small Cause Court Judge, instead of entering judgment for the defendants allowed the suit to be withdrawn by the plaintiffs with liberty to them to bring a fresh suit [O 23 r 1] Upon a petition for revision it was held by the High Court that the Small Cause Court was bound on receipt of the decision of the High Court to dispose of the case in conformity with that decision and to enter judgment for the defendants and that the order allowing the plaintiffs to withdraw from the suit was illegal

4. [S. 620.] The costs (if any) consequent on a reference for the decision of the High Court shall be costs in the case

5. [S. 621.] Where a case is referred to the High Court under rule 1, the High Court may return the case for amendment, and may alter, cancel or set aside any decree or order making the reference has passed or made the case out of which the reference arose, and make such order as it thinks fit

6. [S. 646A.] (1) Where at any time before judgment a Court in which a suit has been instituted doubts whether the suit is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or is not so cognizable it may submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for the doubts as to the nature of the suit.

(2) On receiving the record and statement, the High Court may order the Court either to proceed with the suit or to return the plaint for presentation to such other Court as it may in its order declare to be competent to take cognizance of the suit.

At any time before judgment — A reference under this rule can only be made before judgment (1)

7. [S. 646B.] (1) Where it appears to a District Court that a Court subordinate thereto has, by reason of erroneously holding a suit to be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes or not to be so cognizable failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law, or exercised a jurisdiction so vested, the District Court may, and if required by a party shall, submit the record to the High Court with a statement of its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous

(2) On receiving the record and statement the High Court may make such order in the case as it thinks fit

(3) With respect to any proceedings subsequent to decree in any case submitted to the High Court under this rule, the High Court may make such order as in the circumstances appears to it to be just and proper

(4) A Court subordinate to a District Court shall comply with any requisition which the District Court may make for any record or information for the purposes of this rule.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act 9 of 1887, sec 16.—Section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act runs as follows: 'Save as expressly provided by this Act or by any other enactment for the time being in force, a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes shall not be tried by any other Court having jurisdiction within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes by which the suit is triable'

"If required by a party shall"—It has been held by the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta that a District Court is bound to make a reference under this rule if one of the parties requires it to do so (e). On the other hand the Allahabad High Court has held that the word 'shall' is not mandatory, but merely directory and that a District Court should not make a reference under this rule, unless it is satisfied that a Court subordinate thereto has come to an erroneous finding on a point of jurisdiction in regard to the particular suit before it (f).

Statement of reasons—Where a reference is made to the High Courts under this rule, the District Court which makes the reference should state its reasons for considering the opinion of the subordinate Court with respect to the nature of the suit to be erroneous (g).

Powers of High Court under this rule—There is a conflict of decisions as to the powers of the High Court under this rule as will be seen from the cases considered below—

A suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court is tried by a District Munsif on the original side without objection to his jurisdiction, and a decree is passed for the plaintiffs. The decision of the District Court. It is clear that the suit being one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court the District Munsif had no jurisdiction to entertain it under his ordinary jurisdiction having regard to the provisions of section 16 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act set forth above. Nor had the District Court jurisdiction to

O. 45, r. 7 entertain the appeal from the decree in such a suit. What order should the High Court make, assuming, of course, that the suit was one of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court and which of the following courses should it adopt?—

- (1) Should the High Court set aside the decrees of both the Courts below and return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court?
- (2) Or has it power to consider the case on the merits and to decline to interfere in the matter even though in strict law the suit should have been tried under a different procedure?
- (3) Or should it not set aside the decree of the District Court as having been made without jurisdiction and then dispose of the case on its merits leaving the decree passed by the Munsif to stand or not as may in its discretion appear best?

The first course was adopted by White, C J., in a Madras case where the learned Judge observed that there was no alternative but to adopt that course (a).

The second course was adopted by the High Courts of Calcutta and Patna in the under mentioned cases (i), where the Court declined to interfere on the ground that they had a complete discretion in the matter.

The third course was adopted in a recent case by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court (j). The full Bench held, dissenting from the Calcutta decisions cited above and overruling an earlier Madras case (k) in which the Calcutta decision was followed that the decree of the District Judge should be set aside as having been passed without jurisdiction. That decree was accordingly set aside, and the decree passed by the Munsif was restored. The same course was adopted in a Bombay case (l).

As regards the Allahabad High Court, it declined to interfere in one case on the ground that the present rule did not apply unless there was an erroneous holding as to jurisdiction, and that could not occur if no objection to jurisdiction was taken by either party in the Courts below (m). In a later case, it followed the Full Bench ruling of the Madras Courts, and set aside the decree of the District Court and restored the decree passed by the Munsif (n).

and who, from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order

(2) A party who is not appealing from a decree or order may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party except where the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and the appellant, or when being respondent, he can present to the Appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review.

Review under the Code of 1859, and the Code of 1877—Under the Code of 1859, s 376, an application for review could be entertained on the ground of "discovery, of new matter or evidence which was not within his [applicant's] knowledge, or could not be adduced by him at the time when such decree was passed, or for any other good and sufficient reason." Under the Code of 1877, s 623, an application for review could be entertained on the ground of "discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence was not within his [applicant's] knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason." See 623 of the Code of 1882 is in this respect the same as s 623 of the Code of 1877. The present rule is a reproduction of s 623 of the Code of 1882.

In what cases a party may apply for a review—A party aggrieved by a decree or a decision specified in clause (a), (b) or (c) of sub rule (1) [see s 114] may apply for a review in any of the following cases—

I on the ground of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within the knowledge of the party or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or

II on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record,

III for any other sufficient reason

Ex parte decree or order—It is competent to a party against whom an ex parte decree or order is passed to apply for a review, if the circumstances bring the case within O 47, r 1 (c). against I to recover another sum of money alleged to have become due under the same agreement and obtained a decree on the strength of the former decree. Their Lordships of the Privy Council reversed the first decree. B then applies for a review of the second decree and the application was allowed on the ground that in the circumstances of the case the Privy Council decision was a new and important matter on which to apply for a review of the second decree (c). This decision stands on the special facts of the case. In Anant Lal v. Malho Das (d) it was held that where a decree is based upon a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court and that decision is subsequently overruled by the Full Bench the reversal is no ground for a review of the decree. Nor is the production of a new ruling or authority which is brought to the notice of the Judge at the first hearing might have altered the judgment a new and important matter within the meaning of this rule (e). An alteration of the law by subsequent legislation is not discovery of new matter justifying a review (f).

It is not to be supposed that the discovery of new evidence is by itself sufficient to entitle a party to a review of judgment. The provision relating to review contemplates grounds which would alter or cancel the decree. Thus if a suit is dismissed on two grounds namely (1) that no notice of suit was given and (2) that the plaintiff was illegitimate not lead to the modification or setting aside of the original decree as the want of notice was fatal to the suit (g).

II Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record—A review may be granted whether on any ground urged at the original hearing of the suit or not whenever the Court considers that it is necessary to correct an evident error or omission (h). Thus a review was granted where an error on a point of law was apparent on the face of the judgment (i) e.g. failure to apply the law of limitation to the facts found by the Court (j). Again there was an error patent on the face of the record when on an

A review may also be granted where there is an error of procedure apparent on the face of the record e.g. where judgment is delivered without previous notice to the parties (m). A revision application was dismissed on the ground that the error was one of law and did not justify interference in revision but when it was discovered that at a second appeal lay the Judge granted a review and set aside the order dismissing the application for revision and heard the case as a second appeal (n). Their Lordships of the Privy Council reversed the first decree. B then applies for a review of the second decree, and the application was allowed on the ground that in the circumstances of the case the Privy Council decision was 'new and important matter' on which to apply for a review of the second decree (c). This decision stands on the special facts of the case. In Amrit Lal v. Valho Das (d) it was held that where a decree is based upon a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court, and that decision is subsequently overruled by the Full Bench the reversal is no ground for a review of the decree. Nor is the production of a new ruling or authority, which if brought to the notice of the Judge at the first hearing might have altered the judgment, 'new and important matter' within the meaning of this rule (c). It is not to be supposed that the discovery of new evidence is by itself sufficient to entitle a party to a review of judgment. The provision relating to review contemplates grounds which would alter or cancel the decree. Thus if a suit is dismissed on two grounds namely, (1) that no notice of suit was given, and (2) that the plaintiff was illegitimate, and the plaintiff applies for a review on the ground of discovery of new evidence on the question of legitimacy, it is a good ground for rejecting the application that even if the Court held on the reception of new evidence that the plaintiff was legitimate, it would not lead to the modification or setting aside of the original decree, as the want of notice was fatal to the suit (g).

II Mistake or error apparent on the face of the record—A review may be granted, whether on any ground urged at the original hearing of the suit or not, whenever the Court considers that it is necessary to correct an evident error or omission (h). Again there was an error patent on the face of the record when on an appeal by a creditor from an order rejecting his proof the Judge not only dismissed the appeal but annulled the adjudication (k). Similarly a review was granted when the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 575 of the Code of 1882 [now s. 98, sub s. (2)] were wrongly applied (l). A review may also be granted where there is an error of procedure apparent on the face of the record, e.g., where judgment is delivered without previous notice to the parties (m). A revision application was dismissed on the ground that the error was one of law and did not justify interference in revision, but when it was discovered that a second appeal lay, the Judge granted a review and set aside the order dismissing the application for revision and heard the case as a second appeal (n). O. 47, r. 1 it is no ground for review that the judgment proceeds on an incorrect exposition of the law (o), or on a ruling which has subsequently been modified (p) or reversed (q) See s 102

III "For any other sufficient reason."—These words mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court to which the application for review is made and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record (r) Thus in Ghansham v Lal Singh (s), a reference to a Full Bench was disposed of in the absence of the respondent. The respondent proved that his absence at the hearing was due to the fact that notice of the reference was not served upon him. It was held that this constituted a "sufficient reason" for granting a review. In Suleman v The New Oriental Bank Corporation, Ltd (t), a review was granted on the ground that the question that had arisen at the hearing was one of great general commercial importance. In Gopal v Solomon (u), all the parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge were at the trial of the suit under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document. It was held that this was a "sufficient reason" for granting a review. In a Patna case, where an auction purchaser applied for an order for delivery of possession and the order was made, it was held that it was sufficient ground for reviewing the order that the application was on the face of it barred by limitation (v). But a party who not only had an opportunity of raising a question but who did raise it and on argument abandoned it, cannot under ordinary circumstances be allowed to agitate the question in review (w). Nor is it a sufficient reason for granting a review that if another opportunity was given to the applicant, he would satisfy the Court that its previous order was wrong (x). Omission to raise a point of law is not sufficient (y).

The ground of review must be something which existed at the date of the decree and the rule does not authorize the review of a decree which was right when it was made, on the ground of the happening of some subsequent event (z). But when a decree fixed a period for the performance of a condition and a railway strike made timely performance impossible, the High Court of Allahabad held that it had jurisdiction to extend the time in review (a).

In 1922 the Privy Council reviewed the case law in the case of Chhajju Ram v Delhi (b) in which their Lordships said there was no little inconsistency (due partly to the fact that prior to the Code of 1877 the ground for review was not so restrictive), and laid down the rule that "any other sufficient reason" means a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. The case was one in which the Punjab Chief Court had granted a review on the ground that the judgment had "proceeded on an incorrect exposition of the law." This was held by the Privy Council not to be analogous and therefore not a sufficient reason. The actual decision of the Privy Council is not open to criticism, but the general rule laid down by their Lordships has not escaped criticism. Mukerjee, J., in Gopika Ram v

Mahar Illi (c), referring to Chhayu case said : ' Whether any analogy can be discovered between the two grounds specified, namely, ' the discovery of new and important matter or evidence ' and ' some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record ' need not be discussed. But whether a particular reason is analogous to either one or other of these two grounds may obviously lead to very refined if not subtle arguments. ' Again in Narain Das v. Chiranjil Lal (d) the Allahabad High Court described the rule in Chhayu case as ' technical ' and said : in our opinion the words in O 47, r 1, for any other sufficient reason ' are not only very wide in themselves, but were intentionally so made by the Legislature because of the possibility of exceptional cases arising in which obvious injustice would be worked by strict adherence to the terms of the decree as originally passed ' There is much force in these criticisms for as Mukerjee J, pointed out in Prohas Kumar v. Nithur Lal (e) the powers exercisable under s 151 and under O 47, r 1, are not mutually exclusive and there are several cases where it was held to be immaterial whether the review was granted under O 47 or under the inherent jurisdiction, e.g., where a suit was by mistake dismissed for default though a plaintiff was present in person (f), or where a suit was dismissed for failure to make up the deficit of Court fee and it was found that the Court fee had been embezzled by a pleader's clerk (g) or where important evidence was produced just after judgment was signed (h) Mukerjee, J's anticipation of refined and subtle arguments was realized in a Rangoon case (i) where a Judge held that a reason that was not res inter alios acta might still be a reason that was at least analogous.

Chhajju s case, however, is the law, and has been followed (j) But there are some inconsistencies in the cases which follow it and these serve to illustrate the difficulty of applying the rule Thus though Chhajju s case decided that an incorrect exposition of the law was not a sufficient reason yet in Murari Rao v Bilwant Dikshit (k) an error as to the Hindu law of succession was held to be an error patent on the face of the record and again in Brindaban v Damodar (l) the Calcutta High Court reviewed its judgment because it construed a leading case in Hindu law in a sense different to that adopted in a subsequent Privy Council decision Another similar case is Garibani v Suroja (m) In that case a landlord had obtained a decree for rent against tenants of a 12 anna share of a holding and advertised the whole holding for sale The tenants of the 4 anna share sued to restrain the sale alleging fraud and collusion The Judge dismissed the suit and then granted a review as a case on which he had relied had been subsequently overruled In appeal Dawson Miller, C J, admitted that if review was on the ground of error patent on the face of the record no appeal lay under rule 7, but said that in view of Chhajju s case it could not be contended that review had proceeded on this ground He held that the review was on the ground of discovery of new matter and that in this view the condition of rule 4 (2) (b) was not fulfilled as the subsequent overruling decision had been published before the trial and accordingly reversed the order for review Of the other cases decided on the rule in Chhajju s case to deserve special notice Bindubashini v Secretary of State (n) arose out of a motion by the Collector to hold an inquiry under s 19 H of the Court Fees Act into the value of an estate The Government pleader applied for an adjournment to call his evidence but the Judge refused and gave judgment The Judge then granted a review as the Government pleader

O. 47, r. 1 was under the impression that the case would not be taken up. This was reversed in revision by Rankin, J., as the case was not analogous to excusable failure to bring before the Court new and important matter or evidence and as there was an element of negligence in the case, for the Judge had not found that there was any justification for the Government pleader's erroneous impression. The other case Mahadeo v. Lakshmi Narayan (o) decides that since Chhajju is a case a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed under O. 9, r. 8, has no remedy by way of review.

An execution application that has been dismissed cannot be restored by way of review (p).

When a compromise has been entered into a decree, the Court cannot review its order on the sole ground that the compromise has been entered into under undue influence or coercion (q). Nor is review a minor's remedy for setting aside a decree passed through the negligence of his guardian (r). Where a suit is contested by the defendant but on the date fixed for the last hearing his agent admits the plaintiff's claim in collusion with the plaintiff, the case is not one of a review of judgment, the remedy of the aggrieved party lies in filing a suit to set aside the decree (s). Where the Court dismissed a suit for default of appearance of the plaintiff on a date which the Court under a mistake supposed to have been fixed for the hearing of the suit, and also under a mistake that notice of the hearing on that date was given to the plaintiff it was held by the Rangoon High Court that an application for review would lie (t).

The power of review under this rule is not as wide as that under sec. 8 (1) of the Presidency towns Insolvency Act, 1909 (u).

Review granted on particular ground—Where a review is granted on a particular ground, it is in the discretion of the Court to rehear the whole case or only the particular point on which the review has been granted (v). If the review was granted for additional evidence to be taken, that evidence should be taken and any relevant evidence in rebuttal, and also any other evidence which the party tendering was prevented from adducing by some cause for which he was not responsible or which it was not reasonable or necessary to call in the absence of that additional evidence. Otherwise neither party will be allowed to adduce evidence which was available and which with reasonable diligence could have been produced at the trial (w).

Where an appeal dismissed summarily under O. 35, r. 11, is admitted on an application for review, the appeal is not restricted to the single ground which was made the basis of the application for review (x).

From which an appeal is allowed—An application for review is competent in cases where an appeal is provided for. The fact that an appeal lies is no ground for rejecting an application for review (y).

Order—An order under O. 33, r. 7, refusing leave to sue as a pauper, is open to review under this rule (z). And so is an order as to costs (a) and an order rejecting an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council (b) But an order under O.

s. 39 (h) of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, is not open to review (c)

Where an appeal has been preferred before application for review — After an appeal has been preferred from a decree, no application can be made for a review of that decree. This clearly appears from cl (a) of sub r (1). An appeal is not the less "preferred" within the meaning of this rule though it may be dismissed summarily under O 41, r 11. Hence a party against whom a decree has been passed is precluded, after dismissal of his appeal under O 41, r 11, from applying for a review (d). If an appeal is dismissed for default and an application under O 41, r 19, has become time barred, review is incompetent (e). The rule that a review is incompetent after an appeal has been dismissed was applied by the Bombay High Court in a case where an appeal to the Privy Council was dismissed for want of prosecution (f). The Calcutta High Court, however, doubted if the rule would apply when an appeal to the Privy Council was not heard on the merits but was dismissed as incompetent (g). If after an appeal is filed, fresh evidence is discovered, the appellant may withdraw the appeal and apply for a review (h). If after an appeal is filed, fresh evidence is discovered, the appeal, it may be a ground for allowing the appellant to withdraw the appeal to enable him to apply to the lower appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of new evidence (o)

Application to set aside order made by another Judge—One Judge of a High Court cannot set aside an order made by another Judge of that Court even though the order be wrong. The remedy lies in review on the grounds mentioned in this rule (p)

Review of judgment passed in appeals preferred under cl 15 of the Letters Patent—The Madras and Bombay High Courts have held that the High Court is competent to review judgments in appeals under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (q). But a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that such a review is not competent being excluded by the words 'allowed by the Code' in section 114 (r)

Commissioner—A commissioner for taking accounts has no power of review under this order, but before his report is submitted he may reopen the inquiry into any item on grounds analogous to those of this rule (s)

2. [S. 624.] An application for review of a decree or order of a Court, not being a High Court, upon some ground other than the discovery of such new and important matter or evidence as is referred to in rule 1 or the existence of a clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree, shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order sought to be reviewed, but any such application may, if the Judge who passed the decree or made the order has ordered notice to issue under rule 4, sub rule (2), proviso (a), be disposed of by his successor.

To whom application for review may be made—This is s 624 recast with proviso (c) to s 626 superadded to it. The alteration of language does not involve any alteration of law.

Rule 1, sub r (1) provides that the application for review of a decree or order should be made to the Court which passed the decree or order sought to be reviewed. That rule read with the present rule leads to the following propositions—

I. Where a decree is passed by a High Court Judge, the application for review of the decree may be made to that Judge or to his successor in office, whatever be the ground on which the review is sought

II. (1) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge, the application for review of the decree may be made to the Judge who delivered the judgment or to his successor in office, provided the review is sought on the ground of—

(a) the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, or

(b) some clerical or arithmetical mistake or error apparent on the face of the decree

(2) Where a decree is passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge, and the review is sought, not upon the grounds mentioned above, but upon other grounds, the application shall be made to the very Judge who passed the decree, it cannot be made to his successor in office (i). Thus if a review is sought of a decree passed by a Judge other than a High Court Judge on the ground of a supposed error of judgment (u), or if a review is sought of an order made by such a Judge on the ground that the order was made in the absence of the applicant and without giving him notice of the hearing (v), the application for review shall be made only to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order. Such an application, however, may be disposed of by the successor of the Judge who passed the decree, provided that the Judge who passed the decree has ordered notice to issue under rule 4, sub rule (2), proviso (a). It is not necessary that the application should also be disposed of by the Judge who passed the decree (w).

Rule 5 provides for the hearing of applications for review

3. [S. 625.] The provisions as to the form of preferring appeals shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to applications for review.

Form of applications for review

This rule relates to form and does not enlarge the right. It does not make O 43, r 1 (t) applicable to a refusal to restore an application for review (z).

4. [S. 626.] (1) Where it appears to the Court that there is not sufficient ground for a review, it shall reject the application.

(2) Where the Court is of opinion that the application for review should be granted, it shall grant the same :

or could not be adduced by him when the decree or order was passed or made, without strict proof of such allegation.

Alterations in the rule—The words "and the Judge shall record with his order his reason for such opinion," which occurred in the old section after the words "it shall grant the same" in sub r (2), have been omitted. Those words were construed by the Privy Council as being no more than a direction to the Judge how to act when he had decided to grant the application (y)

"No such application shall be granted without previous notice to the opposite party"—The expression "opposite party" means the party interested to support the order sought to be vacated or modified upon the application for review. When an appeal is summarily dismissed under O 41, r 11, the order of dismissal may be set aside on an ex parte application for review without notice to the respondent. The respondent in such a case cannot be said to be "the opposite party" within the meaning of cl (a) of this rule (z)

New matter or evidence—The effect of this expression is the same as if the words were "new and important matter or evidence" as in rule 1 above (a)

"Strict proof"—As to the meaning of the words "strict proof" in sub r (2), cl (b), see notes to r 7 below, "Sub rule (1), cl (b) application in contravention of provisions of rule (4)

Form—As to form of notice required by sub r 2 (a), see App G, form no 14

Second application for review.—See notes under the same head to r 7 below

Death of party pending review—The order granting a review only holds the judgment in suspense. The death of a party does not therefore cause the suit or appeal to abate (b)

Appeal.—It is provided in general terms by O 43, r 1, cl (w), that an appeal lies from an order under this rule granting an application for review. The High Courts of Calcutta, Patna, Rangoon and Lahore have held that cl (w) is to be read with and subject to rule 7 (1) below so that an appeal lies only on the grounds mentioned in that rule (c). The Bombay High Court held in one case (d) that the appeal is against the order granting the review quite irrespective of the limitation contained in rule 7. Subsequent to this decision the Bombay High Court deleted cl (w) from the rule so that there is no appeal now except on the ground mentioned in rule 7 below (e). 5. [S. 627.] Where the Judge or Judges, or any one of the Judges, who passed the decree or made the order, a review of which is applied for, continues or continue attached to the Court at the time when the application for a review is presented, and is not or are not precluded by absence or other cause for a period of six months next after the application from considering the decree or order to which the application refers, such Judge or Judges or any of them shall hear the application, and no other Judge or Judges of the Court shall hear the same

6. [S. 628.] (1) Where the application for a review is heard by more than one Judge and the Court is equally divided, the application shall be rejected

(2) Where there is a majority, the decision shall be according to the opinion of the majority

7. [S. 629.] (1) An order of the Court rejecting the application shall not be appealable, but an order granting an application may be objected to on the ground that the application was—

- (a) in contravention of the provisions of rule 2,
- (b) in contravention of the provisions of rule 4, or
- (c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause

Such objection may be taken at once by an appeal from the order granting the application or in any appeal from the final decree or order passed or made in the suit.

(2) Where the application has been rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear he may apply for an order to have the rejected application restored to the file, and, where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when such application was called on for hearing the Court shall order it to be restored to the file upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for hearing the same

(3) No order shall be made under sub-rule (2) unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party

Alteration in the rule —

- 1 The words 'shall not be appealable' have been substituted for the word 'final' This is merely a verbal alteration
- 2 The words 'the Court shall order it to be restored' in sub r (2) have been substituted for the words "the Court may order it to be restored"
- 3 The last paragraph of the old section has been transferred to r 9

Appeal—

(i) Order "rejecting" application for review—No appeal lies under the Code from an order rejecting an application for review Nor does an appeal lie from such an order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent for that clause is controlled by the express provisions of this rule which says that such an order 'shall not be appealable,' and even if it is not so controlled an order rejecting an application for review is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of that clause (f) Nor is the order open to revision under sec 11a of the Code for even if it is wrong it is no more than an erroneous exercise of discretion (g) But where there is no exercise of discretion at all, as where the Court rejects the application not after considering whether there are sufficient grounds for review [r 4, sub r 1] but on the erroneous view that it has no jurisdiction to entertain the application the order is open to revision, for it is then a case of failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested in the Court by law (h)

(ii) Order granting application for review—An appeal lies from an order granting an application for review, O 43, r 1, cl (w) But as provided by sub r 1, it lies only in the three cases mentioned therein, for otherwise the provisions of sub r (1) so far as they relate to appeal, would be quite superfluous [see notes to r 4 above, "Appeal"]. In cases other than those specified in the rule, no appeal lies from an order granting a review either under this rule or under cl 15 of the Letters Patent (i) Thus if an appeal is preferred from an order admitting an application for review on the ground that the alleged sufficient reason for which the application was admitted did not constitute sufficient reason within the meaning of r 1 of this Order, the appeal should not be entertained (j) Nor is the order appealable solely on the ground that the application for review was time barred (k) There must be an error both as to limitation and in the application of the rule as to sufficient reason". If the appeal is entertained, the order of the appellate Court will be set aside in revision under sec 115 on the ground of 'material irregularity' (l)

(iii) Second appeal from order passed in appeal under this rule—No second appeal lies from an order passed in appeal from an order granting an application for review

This is now sufficiently clear from the provisions of O 43, r 1, cl (w), read with sec 101, sub s. (2). A applies for a review, and the application is granted. B appeals from the order granting the application. Whether the appellate Court confirms or sets aside the order of the lower Court, no second appeal lies to the High Court from the order of the appellate Court (m).

Sub-rule (1) (b): "In contravention of the provision of rule 4".—It is provided by r. 4 above that no application for review should be granted on the ground of discovery of new matter without strict proof of the allegation as to such discovery. The words "strict proof" mean proof according to the formalities of law. Where an order therefore is made granting a review on proof of discovery of new matter according to the formalities of law, no appeal lies from the order on the ground that the evidence adduced in proof of the allegation as to discovery of new matter was not sufficient to prove the allegation. The words "strict proof" do not refer to sufficiency of proof in securing the conviction of the judicial mind on the fact in dispute (o).

Grounds of objection in appeal.—An order granting an application for review can only be objected to upon the three grounds specified in the rule and no other, whether the objection is taken by an appeal from the order (p) or in an appeal from the final decree passed in the suit (q). The appellate Court will interfere if the review has been granted on grounds which do not fall within rule 1 (r). But if a review has been granted on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, the appellate Court will not consider whether the new evidence is important for that is a matter which must be left to the judgment of the Court which granted the review (s). If the order granting a review is reversed on appeal all subsequent proceedings under the order, including the final decree, fall to the ground (t).

Second application for review.—Though no appeal lies from an order rejecting an application for review, it does not preclude a second application for review on ground different from those taken in the first application (u).

Where application for review is time barred.—The period for an application for review of judgment by a Provincial Court of Small Causes is 15 days from the date of the decree, by the High Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction 20 days, if the applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not making the application, within the prescribed period [Limitation Act, 1908, s 5]. Where a second application for review is made after the period of limitation, the mere fact that the second application was not made because the first was pending does not constitute "sufficient cause" for admitting the second (v). If an application for review is admitted after the period of limitation on the ground that the applicant has shown sufficient cause, the order granting the application may be appealed from as provided by cl. (c) of sub r (1), and the order may be set aside in appeal if the appellate Court holds that there was not sufficient cause for admitting the application after the period of limitation (x)

Review granted without jurisdiction.—If a review is granted in a case where the Court has no jurisdiction to grant it, it is not clear whether an appeal lies from the order granting the review. But the order being one made without jurisdiction, it comes within the purview of sec 115, and is therefore open to revision (y). The High Court will not interfere in revision solely on the ground that the Judge granting the review had omitted to record that the additional evidence was important (z). It has been held that no appeal lies if the review is granted in the inherent jurisdiction (a).

THE SECOND SCHEDULE.

ARBITRATION

Arbitration in Suits

1. [S. 506.] (1) Where in any suit all the parties interested agree that any matter in difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, they may, at any time before judgment is pronounced, apply to the Court for an order of reference

Parties to suit may apply for order of reference

(2) Every such application shall be in writing and shall state the matter sought to be referred

Alterations in the Rule —

- 1 The word interested in clause (1) has been added after the word parties
See notes below under the head All the parties interested must join in the application
- 2 The words in person or by their respective pleaders specially authorized in writing in this behalf which occurred in the old section after the word apply and before the words to the Court have been omitted

Scope of the Schedule—The present Schedule deals with arbitration under three heads (c) —

I Where a suit has been instituted and all the parties interested agree to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit In that case all proceedings from first to last are under the supervision of the Court and they are governed by the provisions of paras 1 to 16 of this Schedule The first step is to apply to the Court for an order of reference under para 1 If all the parties interested have joined in the application an order of reference will be made under para 3

II Where parties without having recourse to litigation agree to refer their differences to arbitration and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court In that case the parties to the agreement or any of them may apply to the Court under para 17 to have the agreement filed in Court and to make an order of reference thereon If an order of reference is made all further proceedings will be under the supervision of the Court and they will be governed by the provisions of paras 3 to 16 so far as they are consistent with the agreement (para 19) See paras 17 to 19

III Where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award In that case any person interested in the award may apply to the Court under para 20 to have the award filed in Court See paras 20 21

All the parties interested must join in the application—In order to give jurisdiction to the Court to make an order of reference under this and para 3 it is necessary that all the parties interested must apply to the Court (d) An attorney cannot apply unless expressly authorized (e) and if one of the parties is a firm all partners

(c) Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan (190)

(d) Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan (190)

must join in the reference (f), but a reference by a father who is the manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and his sons will bind the sons (g). If all the parties interested do not apply, and an order of reference is made, the order is illegal, and if an award is made on such reference, the award also is illegal (h), and is liable to be set aside in revision (i). Thus where in a suit for partnership accounts brought by A against B and C, A and B alone applied to the Court to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration, and an order of reference was made, it was held, on an objection raised by B to the validity of the award, that C not having joined in the application, the order of reference as well as the award made in pursuance thereof were illegal (j). But when the part not referred can be separated from the part referred, para 12 (a) would apply. So in a suit where some of the defendants were adults and some were minors for whom no guardian ad litem was appointed, and the minors were not interested in the dispute of the plaintiff with the adult defendants, it was held that the Court was not justified in refusing to file the award made on a reference by all parties, for the part which related to the minors and which was invalid could be separated from the other part. The proper procedure was to modify or correct the award under para 12 (a) of this Schedule (k).

The word "interested" is new. It has been added to give effect to a recent Allahabad decision (l). It refers to the succeeding words "any matter in difference between them". A party to a suit who is not interested in a matter in difference between the other parties to the suit need not join in an application under this paragraph for an order of reference. A sues B and C, praying as against B for a declaration of his title to certain property and as against C for possession of the property. A and B alone apply to the Court to refer to arbitration the question as to the ownership of the property. The Court has jurisdiction to make an order of reference, though C has not joined in the application, for the question of ownership is not in issue between A and C. But C not being a party to the reference, the award is not binding upon him, though it is binding as between A and B (m). A in execution of a decree against B and C attaches property alleging that it belongs to B. D sues for a declaration that the property belongs to her, and does not implead C who claims no interest in the property. The matter in difference between D on the one hand and A and B on the other hand may be referred to arbitration although C does not join in the reference (n).

The fact that a defendant has not put in an appearance or has not contested the suit is no reason for holding that he is not a party interested (o), although there are some decisions to the contrary (p). The question whether a party is "interested" within the meaning of this paragraph is one to be decided on all the facts of each case (q). A party may be interested although no relief is claimed against him, and when a usufructuary mortgagee sued in ejectment of persons who claimed title adversely to the mortgagor, the latter was a party interested although no relief was claimed against him (r) It has been held that if two defendants are jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff the matter in difference between the plaintiff and one defendant may be validly referred to arbitration although the other defendant does not join in the reference (s) A person, however, who is not a necessary party to a suit is not a party "interested" within the meaning of this para (t) See O 1, r 10 (2) The question whether a party is interested within the meaning of this paragraph must be decided on the facts of each particular case (u)

"Apply."—This section requires that all the parties interested should not only agree to a reference, but that they should all apply to the Court for an order of reference (v) Therefore if one of the parties interested agree to a reference, but he changes his mind subsequently and does not join in the application, the application for an order of reference should be refused (w)

Matter in difference.—This must be a matter in difference in the suit itself (x) Where an award comprises matters which are not in dispute in the suit, and adjudicates upon the rights of a person who was not a party to the suit and who was interested in some of them and the findings with reference to the matters in question in the suit could be "otherwise invalid" within the meaning of this para so far as it deals

The provision requiring the application to be made to the Court for an order of reference, hence an award is not invalid merely because it was not made in writing (x) In a recent case before the Judicial Committee where the agreement was in writing but it was not signed by one of the parties, it was held that para 1 of this Schedule did not require that the writing should of necessity be signed (a); and it has also been held that the record made by the Court of an oral application is sufficient (b) But where a pardamshin lady was a party and the application was signed by her pleader who was not authorized by his vakalatnama to do so, the award was held to be invalid (c) For form of application for an order of reference, see the Appendix to this Schedule, form No 1.

Before judgment—A suit may be referred to arbitration after a reference is made to the High Court (d)

"Court."—Section 107 of the Code provides that an appellate Court shall have the same powers as a Court of original jurisdiction It follows therefore that an appellate Court can act under this paragraph, and refer matters in dispute in the appeal to arbitration if all the parties interested agree to a reference (e) But a Court to which certain issues have been referred for trial under O 41, r 25, cannot act under this paragraph, as the duty of such Court is to try the issues as directed by the appellate Court and to return to the appellate Court its findings thereon together with the evidence (f) Similarly a Court dealing with petitions under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, has no power to refer the proceedings to arbitrators to decide whether the petitioner should or should not be declared an insolvent (g)

Revocation of arbitrator's authority—When a matter is referred to arbitration by an agreement between the parties without the intervention of a Court of Justice, the agreement to refer to arbitration cannot be revoked by any party without good cause and a mere arbitrary revocation will not be permitted by the Court (h) Where a claimant did not proceed with the reference for a period of nine months without any just cause, it was held that it amounted to a good cause sufficient to entitle the other party to revoke the submission (i) Similarly if the arbitrator is indebted to one of the parties at the time of the reference or becomes so indebted after the reference, and this fact is not disclosed to the other party, the non disclosure is a sufficient cause for revoking the submission upon discovery of the fact (j)

But when a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court, the Court alone can revoke the authority of the arbitrator, and only in the cases specified in paras 5, 8 and 15 The Court has no power to revoke the authority of an arbitrator in any other case Thus where after an order of reference was made under para 3, the defendant applied to the Court for an order to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and to appoint a new arbitrator in his place on the ground that he had come to know of certain facts which showed that the arbitrator was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him it was held that the Court had no power to make the order, as the case did not come either under paras 5 8 or 15 It was further held that the objection raised by the defendant could only be considered after the award was made and filed in Court, and only to the extent permitted by para 15 (k) Note the words "or being otherwise invalid" in para 15, cl. (c)

Where a party dies after application but before order of reference—The death of a party to an application made under this rule for a reference to arbitration before the order of reference is made does not operate as a revocation of the authority of the proposed arbitrator, therefore, if the right to sue survives, it is competent to the Court to make an order of reference after substitution of the representative of the deceased party (l) All that is necessary is substantial representation without strict adherence to the rules of the Civil Procedure Code as to legal representatives and guardians ad litem (m)

Withdrawing from suit pending arbitration—See note to O 23, r 1, under the same head

Probate proceedings—This Schedule does not apply to probate proceedings A Judge has no jurisdiction to refer to arbitration a dispute about the genuineness of a will for an order granting probate is a judgment in rem (n)

Execution proceedings—This Schedule does not apply to execution proceedings and a reference to arbitration by an execution Court is without jurisdiction (o)

Arbitration.

Sch. II, Revision—It has been held that the validity of an order of reference may be paras. 1-3 impeached in revision (p)

Form—For form or application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this Schedule, form No 1

Appointment of arbitrator 2. [S. 507, 1st para.] The arbitrator shall be appointed in such manner as may be agreed upon between the parties

Order of reference 3. [S. 508.] (1) The Court shall, by order, refer to the arbitrator the matter in difference which he is required to determine, and shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of the award, and shall specify such time in the order.

(2) Where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not, save in the manner and to the extent provided in this Schedule, deal with such matter in the same suit

The word 'making' has been substituted for the word 'delivery'. In fact the word 'delivery' was construed as meaning 'making'. See notes below under the head "making of award"

Fixing of time or the making of award—The present paragraph provides that the Court shall fix a reasonable time for the making of the award and specify such time in the order of reference. Paragraph 8 enables the Court from time to time to enlarge the period for the making of the award. Paragraph 15 provides that an award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside by the Court. The provision contained in this paragraph requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the making of the award is not merely directory, but imperative. Hence this provision should be strictly followed. At the same time it has been held that if no time is fixed for delivery of the award in the order of reference but the Court subsequently makes an order for enlarging the time (para. 8) and fixes in that order the time within which the award should be made, the omission to fix the time in the order of reference is not fatal to the award (q). Rankin, J., has described the provisions as to reasonable time as the main pillar of the scheme of the Schedule. By the reference the Court parts with control of the suit temporarily, for the time limit will bring the matter back to the Court and enable it to resume control and either to grant further time or to supersede the arbitration under para. 8. If the Court fixes no time limit, it surrenders control and jurisdiction is involved because such an order professes to abrogate jurisdiction. Accordingly a reference which gave the arbitrators leave to extend for such further time as they may allow themselves was held to be invalid and the arbitration was superseded (r). See para. 15, cl (1) (c) and notes thereto.

Making of award—An award is said to be made when it is completed and signed by the arbitrator. Hence it is sufficient if the award is made that is completed and signed by the arbitrator within the period limited under it is paragraph 1 it is not necessary that the making of the award that it should actually reach the hands of the Court within such period. The validity of the award depends upon the making of it within the period allowed and it is immaterial what late it is actually delivered to the Court. This was where the time fixed by the Court for the delivery of an award in a suit pending before it was 16th April 1900 and the award was completed and signed on the 16th April but did not reach the hands of the Court until the 17th of April. It was held that the award was within time (a).

Clause (2)—Where a matter is referred to arbitration the Court shall not deal with it in the same suit except in the manner provided in this Schedule. If the whole suit is referred to arbitration and the plaintiff includes a prayer for costs the Court cannot make an order for costs (b). Hence the Court has no power to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for there is no paragraph in this Schedule corresponding to Order 1 (u). Nor can the Court revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator except in the cases specified in paragraph 1 (c). Nor is it open to the Court to hear the suit on the merits unless the arbitration has been superseded under paragraph 8 (r) (c). Similarly the Court has no power to confirm an order passed by the arbitrator making payment of their fees a condition precedent to the hearing of the reference there being no paragraph in this Schedule empowering the Court to make an order in that behalf (x). On the same principle where an award is once set aside in any given instance that one of the parties to the reference shall be free to the termination of the arbitration proceeding the Court has no power to send back the case to the arbitrator for decision (y).

Form—1. Form of order of reference see Form No. 1. The Appendix to this Schedule.

4. [S 509] (1) Where the reference is to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators—

We refer to reference is to two or more arbitrators to provide for difference of opinion

- (a) by the appointment of an umpire, or
- (b) by declaring that, if the majority of the arbitrators agree, the decision of the majority shall prevail, or
- (c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire, or
- (d) otherwise as may be agreed between the parties or, if they cannot agree, as the Court may determine

Arbitration.

Sch. II, paras. 1-3 Revision—It has been held that the validity of an order of reference may be impeached in revision (p)

Form—For form or application for an order of reference see the Appendix to this Schedule, form No 1

Appointment of arbitrator 2. [S. 507, 1st para.] The arbitrator shall be appointed in such manner as may be agreed upon between the parties

Or let of reference 3. [S. 508.] (1) The Court shall, by order, refer to the arbitrator the matter in difference which he is required to determine, and shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of the award, and shall specify such time in the order.

(2) Where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court shall not, save in the manner and to the extent provided in this Schedule, deal with such matter in the same suit

The word 'making' has been substituted for the word 'delivery'. In fact the word 'delivery' was construed as meaning 'making'. See notes below under the head 'making of award'

Fixing of time or the making of award—The present paragraph provides that the Court shall fix a reasonable time for the making of the award and specify such time in the order of reference. Paragraph 8 enables the Court from time to time to enlarge the period for the making of the award. Paragraph 15 provides that an award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside by the Court. The provision contained in this paragraph requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the making of the award is not merely directory, but imperative. Hence this provision should be strictly followed. At the same time it has been held that if no time is fixed for delivery of the award in the order of reference, but the Court subsequently makes an order for enlarging the time (para. 8) and fixes in that order the time within which the award should be made, the omission to fix the time in the order of reference is not fatal to the award (q). Rankin, J. has described the provisions as to reasonable time as the main pillar of the scheme of the Schedule. By the reference the Court parts with control of the suit temporarily, for the time limit will bring the matter back to the Court and enable it to resume control and either to grant further time or to supersede the arbitration under para. 8. If the Court fixes no time limit, it surrenders control and jurisdiction is involved because such an order professes to abrogate jurisdiction. Accordingly a reference which gave the arbitrators leave to extend for such further time as they may allow themselves was held to be invalid and the arbitration was superseded (r). See para. 15, cl. (1) (c) and notes thereto.

Making of award—An award is said to be “made” when it is completed and signed by the arbitrators. Hence it is sufficient if the award is made, that is completed and signed by the arbitrators, within the period limited under this paragraph, it is not necessary to the “making” of the award that it should actually reach the hands of the Court within such period. The validity of the award depends upon the making of it within the period allowed, and it is immaterial on what date it is actually delivered to the Court. Thus where the time fixed by the Court for the delivery of an award in a suit pending before it was 16th April 1900, and the award was completed and signed on the 16th April, but did not reach the hands of the Court until the 17th of April, it was held that the award was within time (s).

Clause (2)—Where a matter is referred to arbitration, the Court should not deal with it in the same suit except in the manner provided in this Schedule. If the whole suit is referred to arbitration and the plaint includes a prayer for costs, the Court cannot make an order for costs (t). Hence the Court has no power to grant permission to the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, for there is no paragraph in this Schedule corresponding to O 23, r 1 (u). Nor can the Court revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator except in the cases specified in paragraph 5 (v). Nor is it open to the Court to hear the suit on the merits, unless the arbitration has been superseded under paras 5, 8 or 15 (w). Similarly, the Court has no power to confirm an order passed by the arbitrators making payment of their fees a condition precedent to the hearing of the reference, there being no paragraph in this Schedule empowering the Court to make an order in that behalf (x). On the same principle where an award is once set aside on any ground as for instance the one of the parties to the reference had died before the termination of the arbitration proceeding the Court has no power to send back the case to the arbitrators for decision (y).

Form—For form of order of reference, see form No. 2 to the Appendix to this Schedule.

4. [S. 509.] (1) Where the reference is to two or more arbitrators, provision shall be made in the order for a difference of opinion among the arbitrators—

Where reference is to two or more order to provide for difference of opinion

- (a) by the appointment of an umpire; or
- (b) by declaring that, if the majority of the arbitrators agree, the decision of the majority shall prevail; or
- (c) by empowering the arbitrators to appoint an umpire; or
- (d) otherwise as may be agreed between the parties or, if they cannot agree, as the Court may determine.

Arbitration.

Sch. II, paras. 4, 5 (2) Where an umpire is appointed, the Court shall fix such time as it thinks reasonable for the making of his award in case he is required to act

Decision of majority—Where the order of reference did not provide that the decision of the majority of arbitrators should prevail and two of the five arbitrators refused to act, it was held that an award by the remaining three who constituted the majority was not valid (*)

Empowering arbitrators to appoint an umpire—The arbitrators have no power to appoint an umpire, unless they are authorized in that behalf (a)

Arbitrator cannot be appointed umpire—The Court cannot appoint an arbitrator to be umpire for an arbitrator cannot be arbitrator as well as umpire (b)

Delegation of duty by arbitrator—An arbitrator cannot delegate his duties to a third person (c). But he may delegate to a third person the performance of acts of a ministerial character. Thus where an arbitrator employed his son to take some measurements instead of taking them himself it was held that the award was not for that reason invalid (d)

Lower of Court to appoint arbitrator in certain cases

5. [Ss. 507 (2), 510, 511.] (1) In any of the following cases, namely —

- (a) where the parties cannot agree within a reasonable time with respect to the appointment of an arbitrator, or the person appointed refuses to accept the office of arbitrator, or
- (b) where an arbitrator or umpire.—
 - (i) dies, or
 - (ii) refuses or neglects to act or becomes incapable of acting, or
 - (iii) leaves British India in circumstances showing that he will probably not return at an early date, or
- (c) where the arbitrators are empowered by the order of reference to appoint an umpire and fail to do so, any party may serve the other party or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator or umpire

 (d) Buda v Municipal Committee of Lahore (1902) 29 Cal 854 49 IA 183

(2) If, within seven clear days after such notice has been served or such further time as the Court may in each case allow, no arbitrator or no umpire is appointed, as the case may be, the Court may, on application by the party who gave the notice, and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard, appoint an arbitrator or umpire or make an order superseding the arbitration, and in such case shall proceed with the suit

Notice to appoint arbitrator—Where an order of reference is made on the joint application of A and B, and the arbitrator refuses to act, and A serves B with notice to appoint a new arbitrator, the appointment of the new arbitrator must be made both by A and B, and not by B alone (c)

Duty of Court under this paragraph—In the event of the happening of any of the events mentioned in this paragraph the Court must adopt one of the two courses pointed out in the paragraph, namely, appoint a new arbitrator, or make an order superseding the arbitration. Thus where one of three arbitrators refused to act, and the Court neither appointed a new arbitrator nor made an order superseding the arbitration, it was held that the award made by the other two was invalid (f)

Appointment of new arbitrator or umpire—Under the Code of 1882, the Court had no power, on the happening of either of the events referred to in cl (a) of this paragraph to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties to the reference the reason being that the corresponding section 507 of that Code contained the words 'and [if] the parties desire that the nomination shall be made by the Court' (g). But these words have been omitted in cl (a), and the Court has power under this paragraph to appoint a new arbitrator without the consent of all the parties even in the cases mentioned in cl (a). In cases covered by cl (b), it is open to the Court to appoint only one new arbitrator in place of several old arbitrators (h). But the Court has no power to appoint an arbitrator or umpire under sub para (2) unless notice is given as required by sub para (1) and the party served with the notice has been given an opportunity of being heard (i)

The power of the Court to appoint a new arbitrator or umpire may be limited by agreement. A and B submitted to arbitration on the terms that the umpire should be selected from seven persons named. The umpire first selected refused to act, and the Court appointed a new umpire who was not one of the seven persons named. It was held that the umpire not being one of the seven named in the agreement, the award of the umpire was invalid (j)

An irregularity of procedure in the appointment of a new arbitrator is cured by consent of parties. So when one of three arbitrators refused to act and the two remaining arbitrators co-opted a third and the parties consented, the award was held to be valid (k)

Arbitration.

paras. 5-7

Where the arbitrator named by the parties refuses to act, the Court though it has the power to appoint another arbitrator, has no power to direct the parties to pay any remuneration to him (l)

Where arbitrator refuses to act—If an arbitrator refuses to act the Court cannot compel him to act. Thus where an arbitrator refused to act, and the Court instead of accepting his refusal directed him to proceed and make an award it was held that the award was invalid. The finality of an award is based entirely upon the principle that the arbitrators are judges chosen by the parties themselves and that such judges are willing to settle the disputes between them (m). But an arbitrator has full power to retract his resignation before it is accepted. The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not direct him of the character of arbitrator (n). When arbitrators refuse to act and the Court proceeds to try the suit an order superseding arbitration may be implied (o).

Order superseding arbitration—When once a matter is referred to arbitration by an order of the Court the Court has no power to hear the suit on the merits unless the arbitration has been superseded by an order under this paragraph (p) or under paragraph 8 or 15. An order superseding arbitration under paragraph 8 may be made by the Court suo motu but an order superseding arbitration under this paragraph can only be made on an application by the party giving notice and after giving the other party an opportunity of being heard (q).

Revision—An order of the Court deciding the question whether the arbitration should be superseded or a new arbitrator should be appointed is a case decided within the meaning of sec. 115 and is subject to revision (r).

Form—For form of order for appointment of new arbitrator, see the Appendix to this Schedule form no. 3.

6. [S. 512.] Every arbitrator or umpire appointed under paragraph 4 or paragraph 5 shall have the like powers as if his name had been inserted in the order of reference.

Powers of arbitrator or umpire appointed under paragraph 4 or 5

7. [S. 513.] (1) The Court shall issue the same processes to the parties and witness whom the arbitrator or umpire desires to examine, as the Court may issue in suits tried before it.

(2) Persons not attending in accordance with such process, or making any other default, or refusing to give their evidence, or guilty of any contempt to the arbitrator or umpire during the investigation of the matters referred, shall be subject to the like disadvantages, penalties and punishments, by order of the Court on the representation of the arbitrator

Extension of time for making award

Extension of time for making award—If the time originally fixed for making an award has expired, and no award is made, the Court may extend the time for making the award. It is not necessary that the application to extend the time should be made before the expiry of the period originally fixed for making the award. The application may be made even after the expiry of the time originally fixed (t). But it must be made before the award is made. The Court has no power to enlarge the time for the making of an award after the time for making it has expired and after the award has been made (u). Sec. 148 of this Code does not alter the law laid down in this respect (x). An award made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court may be set aside under paragraph 13 (1) (c). The application for extension of time need not necessarily be in writing (y).

Estoppel—The parties to a reference may be estopped by their conduct from impeaching the validity of an award on the ground that it was made after time (a)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order superseding an arbitration where the award has not been completed within the period allowed by the Court [s 104, sub s (1), cl. (a) 1].

(b) if they have delivered to the Court or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree.

10. [S. 516.] Where an award in a suit has been made, the persons who made it shall sign it and cause it to be filed in Court, together with any depositions and documents which have been taken and proved before them; and notice of the filing shall be given to the parties.

Award to be signed and filed

Award need not be signed by arbitrators in each others presence.—It is sufficient if all the arbitrators agree to the terms of the award and sign it. There is no provision of law requiring them to sign in the presence of each other (b). But the award must be signed by all the arbitrators before it is filed (c), but not necessarily at the same time and place (d). An award signed by one of the arbitrators while it is on the file of the Court is invalid (e).

Necessity of arbitrator's presence at meetings.—When a case has been referred to arbitration, the presence of all the arbitrators at all meetings, and, above all at the last meeting when the final act of arbitration is done, is essential to the validity of the award (f).

"Together with any depositions and documents".—The Court has jurisdiction to compel arbitrators to give up documents that may have been filed before them as exhibits during the course of the arbitration. Also if the original records of the suit are handed to the arbitrators to enable them to proceed with the arbitration, and they fail to return them, the Court can compel them to return the records (g). The arbitrator's omission to file with his award the depositions and documents may lead to the inference that he has been guilty of legal misconduct (h).

Notice of the filing shall be given.—It is a material irregularity within the meaning of sec. 115, if the Court gives judgment without issuing notice, and judgment so given will be set aside in revision (i).

Delivery of award.—The act of an arbitrator in delivering an award to the proper officer of the Court for the purpose of being filed in Court is not an "application" within the meaning of the Limitation Act. Hence there is no period of limitation within which an award should be delivered by an arbitrator to the Court (j).

Form.—For form of award see the Appendix to this Schedule, form no. 5

11. [S. 517.] Upon any reference by an order of the Court, the arbitrator or umpire may, with the leave of the Court, state the award as to the whole or any part thereof in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court, and the Court shall deliver its opinion thereon, and shall order such opinion to be added to and to form part of the award.

Special case—The special case must be on a point of law only (1)

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order on an award stated in the form of a special case [s 104, sub s (1), cl (b)] Where the arbitrators differ on certain matters referred to them, but instead of referring their differences to an umpire as provided by the order of reference, they submit their own opinions in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court such submission is not an award stated in the form of a special case, and no appeal therefore lies from any order made upon such submission (1)

Form—For form of special case see the Appendix to this Schedule form no 4

Power to modify or correct award

12. [S. 185.] The Court may, by order, modify or correct an award,—

- (a) where it appears that a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration and such part can be separated from the other part and does not affect the decision on the matter referred; or
- (b) where the award is imperfect in form, or contains any obvious error which can be amended without affecting such decision, or
- (c) where the award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission

Power to modify or correct—The Court has no power to modify or correct an award except in the three cases mentioned in the paragraph and it cannot alter the directions given in the award as to payment of costs (m) A Court acts without jurisdiction if it modifies an award because it takes a view different from that held by the arbitrator (n) The Court cannot extend the time fixed for payment in the award or insert a provision for an easement of necessity (o)

Where a part of the award is upon a matter not referred to arbitration.—Where the matters in dispute in a suit are referred to arbitration but not the question of costs any direction in the award as to costs may be struck out by the Court, for such direction is a matter that is separable (p) An award that goes beyond the terms of the reference is to that extent ultra vires (q) But where no separation is possible the Court should remit the award to the reconsideration of the same arbitrator under paragraph 14 cl. Arbitrator's power to set aside gift on payment of a certain sum as compensation.—The power to decide all disputes between the parties includes the power, where the validity of a gift is challenged, to set aside the gift upon payment of compensation to the donee (r).

Clause (c).—This clause is new. An arithmetical error is no ground for setting aside an award (s).

Appeal.—An appeal lies from an order modifying or correcting an award; see sec 104 sub-sec (1), cl (c). An appeal which was incompetent as an appeal from a decree in terms of a modified award was heard as an appeal from the order modifying the award (t).

13. [S. 519.] The Court may also make such order as it thinks fit respecting the costs of the arbitration where any question arises respecting such costs and the award contains no sufficient provision concerning them.

Order as to costs of arbitration

Costs of Arbitration.—This paragraph refers to the costs of proceedings before the arbitrator. The Court has also power to make an order as to costs of proceedings in Court after the award. But if the question of the costs of the suit has been referred to the arbitrator the Court is debarred by paragraph 3 from making an order as to costs of the suit prior to the reference (u).

14. [S. 520.] The Court may remit the award or any matter referred to arbitration to the re-consideration of the same arbitrator or umpire, upon such terms as it thinks fit,—

Where award or matter referred to arbitrator may be remitted

- (a) where the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, or where it determines any matter not referred to arbitration, unless such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred;
- (b) where the award is so indefinite as to be incapable of execution;
- (c) where an objection to the legality of the award is apparent upon the face of it.

Remission of award when the award has left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration.—The reason why an award which does not dispose of all matters referred is invalid, seems to be that there is an implied condition in the submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all

This implied condition may be waived by the consent of all the parties before the arbitrators (1)

Where the issues in a suit were referred to arbitration, and there was no distinct and separate finding by the arbitrators on each of the issues, but there was a decision on the whole matter in controversy between the parties, it was held that the award could not be said to have left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, and it should not therefore be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (1c). A separate finding on each issue is not necessary, when the whole matter in issue between the parties is decided by the arbitrators (x). But where several issues in a suit are referred to arbitration, and the arbitrator decides by the award only one issue, the award must be remitted to his reconsideration (y). If the arbitrator fails to reconsider the award, the award becomes void see paragraph 15. Even if parties come to an agreement as regards some of the matters referred to arbitration, the award should contain a determination of those matters though it be in terms of the agreement, otherwise the award would be open to the objection that it has left those matters undetermined (z).

Award patently illegal—This is the rule in Hodgkinson v Fernie (a) which limits the right of interference by the Court to the case 'where a question of law necessarily arises on the face of the award or upon some paper accompanying and forming part of the award'. This rule was extended in Sandaner v Asser (b) to a case where an award referred to a contract and construed it. The Court of Appeal held that they were entitled to look at the contract and come to the conclusion that it was wrongly construed. Sandaner v Asser has been doubted, and in Champsey Bhara & Co v Jitraj Billoo (c) the Privy Council said 'An error of law on the face of the award means in their Lordships' view that you can find in the award or a document actually incorporated thereto, as for instance, a note appended by the arbitrator, stating the reasons for his judgment some legal proposition which is the basis of the award and which you can say is erroneous'. In this case cotton had been rejected by a buyer on a final award that it was of inferior quality under Rule 52 of the Rules of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association. This rule gave the buyer the option of invoicing rejected cotton back at the market rate—an option which he would of course only exercise if the market rate had risen. But here the market rate was below the contract rate and the defaulting seller claimed to recover the difference. The award allowed the claim and in the preamble of the award narrating the events which led up to the dispute and the reference to arbitration mention was made of the contract and the letter of rejection for inferiority. The Bombay High Court seized upon this recital and said that as the contract referred to the Rules and as the rejection was under Rule 52, the arbitrators must have wrongly construed the option in the rule as an obligation, and that this was an error patent on the face of the award. The Privy Council however said that the rule in Hodgkinson v Fernie (d) does not mean that if in the narrative a reference is made to the contention of one party, that opens the door to seeing first what that contention is, and then going to the contract on which the parties depend to see if that contention is sound. They also observed that the arbitrators were entitled to put their own construction on Rule 52. In another similar case the error was said to be in the construction of a contract which was referred to in the award, but their Lordships pointed out that the contract was not incorporated in the award which only made a guarded allusion to it for the purpose of earmarking the origin of the dispute (e) Where the only question is a suit was whether a Hindu was born blind and therefore not entitled to inherit and the suit was referred to arbitration and the arbitrator made an award whereby the blind man was declared to be entitled to a life interest in a certain portion of the property, it was held on an objection to the award under cl (c) of this paragraph that the award was not so patently illegal that it could not be remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator (f) If one of the parties to an award is a syndicate the fact that it is an illegal association as it is not registered under sec 4 of the Companies Act is not an illegality apparent on the face of the award for the number of persons composing a syndicate is a mixed question of fact and law (g)

Appeal—No appeal lies from an order under this paragraph remitting an award to the reconsideration of arbitrators Where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator, and the arbitrator submits a fresh award and a decree is passed in accordance with the revised award no appeal lies from the decree on the ground that the order of remittal was wrong (r 16) and that the original award ought to have been accepted and acted upon (h) But where an award is remitted to the reconsideration of the arbitrator and the arbitrator refuses to reconsider the award (which consequently becomes void under paragraph 15) and the Court proceeds to try the case and passes a decree in the ordinary way [para 15 sub para (2)] the legality of the order remitting the award may be challenged on appeal from such decree (i) see sec 105

15. [S. 52I.] (1) An award remitted under paragraph 14 becomes void on failure of the arbitrator or umpire to reconsider it But no award shall be set aside except on one of the following grounds, namely—

award

- (a) corruption or misconduct of the arbitrator or umpire,
- (b) either party having been guilty of fraudulent concealment of any matter which he ought to have disclosed, or of wilfully misleading or deceiving the arbitrator or umpire,
- (c) the award having been made after the issue of an order by the Court superseding the arbitration and proceeding with the suit or after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court, or being otherwise invalid

(2) Where an award becomes void or is set aside under clause (1), the Court shall make an order superseding the arbitration and in such case shall proceed with the suit

Points of distinction between s 521 of the Code of 1882 and this paragraph —

- 1 Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court See notes below under the same head
- 2 When the award is otherwise invalid See notes under the same head
- 3 Clause (2) is new

Misconduct—The term 'misconduct' does not necessarily imply moral turpitude, it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards (j) Nor does it necessarily imply corruption (k)

Acts amounting to misconduct—The following acts have been held to amount to 'misconduct' on the part of an arbitrator affording a ground for setting aside an award —

- 1 Irregularities in procedure which amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute (l), e.g., hearing and receiving evidence from one side in the absence of the other side without giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting and answering it (m)
- 2 Proceeding with arbitration in the absence of one of the arbitrators (n)
- 3 Refusing to hear witness produced by the parties (o)
- 4 Arbitrators improperly adding another to their number (p)
- 5 Where three out of five arbitrators were not present at the time the award was made and did not sign the award although it purported to be signed by all of them it was held that this amounted to misconduct, and the award was set aside (q)
- 6 Making inquiries about the matters in reference from outside sources in the absence of the parties (r)
- 7 An unexplained delay of 5 years in making the award has been held to imply misconduct (s)

Acquiescence in acts amounting to misconduct—It is misconduct if some of the arbitrators are not present at some of the meetings. But if this procedure is adopted with the concurrence of all the parties or acquiesced in by them it is not open to any of the parties to impeach the award on that ground (t)

Acts not amounting to misconduct—An arbitrator is not bound by technical rules of procedure. Therefore it is not a valid objection to an award that the arbitrator did not act in strict conformity with the rules of evidence (u). But he should not make private inquiries behind the backs of the parties (r) unless authorized by the wide terms of the reference (u) Again the rule of evidence which declares that letters written "without prejudice" should not be admitted in evidence, being a rule founded upon natural justice, is as binding upon arbitrators as upon Courts of Justice, and an arbitrator is wrong in receiving and acting upon such a letter But if no objection is taken by the other side to the admissibility of such letter, and an award is made, the award will not be set aside on the ground of misconduct (x) If it is provided in an agreement for reference that an adjustment relied upon by the plaintiff should not be taken into consideration by the arbitrator, a bona fide mistake on the part of the arbitrator in admitting the adjustment in evidence does not amount to misconduct Such a stipulation is nothing but a rule of evidence introduced pro hac vice (y) If the arbitrator is selected on account of his special knowledge of the matter in dispute it is not misconduct for him to use his special knowledge (z) But otherwise it is misconduct for an arbitrator to ignore the evidence and decide on his special knowledge (a)

It is not misconduct on the part of the arbitrator to delegate to a third party the performance of acts of a ministerial character, so long as he exercises his own judgment on the matters referred (b) "Misconduct" cannot be presumed from the mere fact that the arbitrator is the relative of one of the parties (c) The mere fact that the arbitrator has failed to account for the delay in making the award is no ground for presuming fraud (d)

In Bula v Municipal Committee of Lahore (e), certain matters in dispute between A and B were referred to arbitration The agreement of reference was drawn up by A's counsel The arbitrator, feeling doubtful as to the meaning of a certain clause in the agreement, wrote to A to obtain his counsel's opinion on the meaning of that clause, A obtained the opinion, and sent it on to the arbitrator B was not informed of this until after the award was made It was held that though it would have been prudent and discreet for the arbitrator to have written to A with B's knowledge and informed B of the opinion, the omission to do this did not amount to "misconduct," as there was no ground for impeaching the good faith of any of the parties concerned

In Louis Dreyfus v Arunachala (f) an umpire admitted in his award having taken 'independent legal opinion' as to the construction of an alleged agreement but the Privy Council upheld the award Their Lordships said 'The precise length to which an arbitrator may go in seeking outside advice upon matters of law may be difficult to prescribe in general terms . . . In their Lordships' judgment the language of the award does no more than indicate that the umpire took advice upon the general rules of law bearing upon the case and does not mean that he left to an outsider the burden of deciding any issue in the case instead of exercising his own judgment thereon.'

Evidence of arbitrator—Where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made against an arbitrator, any relevant evidence he can give is properly admissible It is, however, necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on such charges is not used for a different purpose, namely, to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final (g)

Appeal from decree based on an award on ground of misconduct—No appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator (k). The only remedy available to the party aggrieved by the award is to apply to have it set aside under this paragraph. See notes to paragraph 16 below, under the head "Invalid award."

Fraudulent concealment of any matter which ought to have been disclosed—Where the arbitrator was the retained pleader of the plaintiff and this fact was not disclosed by the plaintiff to the defendant before the arbitrator was appointed the award was set aside on the ground that that fact was one which ought to have been disclosed. Every disclosure which might in the least affect the minds of those who are proposing to submit their dispute to the arbitrament of any particular individual as regards his selection and fitness for the post ought to be made so that each party may have every opportunity of considering whether the reference to arbitration to that particular individual should or should not be made (i).

Award made subsequent to order superseding arbitration—If an order is made superseding the arbitration under paragraph 5 or 8 or under cl (2) of this paragraph or if the period fixed for making the award has expired the arbitrators have no longer seisin of the reference, and they are functi officio, and cease to have any more power to make an award than the man in the street (j). Similarly an arbitrator is functus officio after the award is made, and he cannot thereafter add to or alter the award (k).

Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court—Clause (c) of s 521 stopped at the words "the suit which occur in cl (1) sub cl (c) of this para." It was followed by another clause which ran thus: "And no award shall be valid unless made within the period allowed by the Court." The latter clause has now been omitted, and instead thereof we have the words "or after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court" added into sub cl (c). The effect of this alteration is that the only remedy now open to the party impeaching an award on the ground that it was made after the expiration of the period allowed by the Court is to apply under this paragraph to set aside the award. If no application is made to set aside the award under this paragraph or if the application is made but refused the award becomes final and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award (l). [Under the Code of 1882 it was held that an appeal lay from a decree based upon such an award (m)]. If the application to set aside the award is granted and an order is made under sub para (2) superseding the arbitration the order is appealable under s 105 sub s. (1) cl (a). See notes to r 16 below "No appeal lies from a decree based on an award etc," and notes to paragraph 3 above, "Making of award."

Another consequence of the alteration is that whereas under s 521 of the old Code an award out of time was a nullity (n) it is not so under the present rule. Under the present rule it is merely voidable and if not sought to be set aside within the period of limitation [Limitation Act 1908 art 159] it is binding upon the parties.

Sch. II,

When the award is otherwise invalid—The words “or being otherwise invalid” at the end of sub cl (c) are new. Under the Code of 1852 it was held that when an award was not a valid and legal award, an appeal would lie from the decree based upon such award, even though the decree might be in accordance with the award. The leading case on the subject was Kali Prasanna Ghose v. Bryani Kant (o) decided by the High Court of Calcutta in the year 1898. The object of adding the words “or being otherwise invalid” into sub cl (c) is to supersede the Calcutta and other decisions which allowed an appeal from a decree based upon an invalid award and to give effect to the principle of finality in cases of arbitration enunciated by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan (p) and followed in recent cases (q). The result is that the only remedy now open to a party seeking to impeach an award as being invalid is to apply under this paragraph to have it set aside. If he fails to do so, or if an application is made but refused, the award becomes final and no appeal will lie from a decree based upon the award. See notes to paragraph 16 under the head “Invalid award”. It is worth while noting that the Special Committee which introduced these alterations intended to allow an appeal from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award (r), but no such provision is contained in s. 104. The words “or being otherwise invalid” include every ground on which the validity of an award could be impeached. See note “Invalid award” under paragraph 16 below. But some cases, while conceding that an appeal will not lie from a decree in terms of an award on the ground that the award is invalid, restrict the meaning of these words to objections ejusdem generis with those in the preceding sentences of the clause. In this view objections that the reference is invalid cannot be taken under paragraph 15 but the order of the Court making the reference may be challenged in revision as being invalid (s).

An award is not illegal merely because it is based on evidence given by one of the parties on a special oath administered under the Indian Oaths Act with the consent of the other party (t).

An award is invalid if the arbitrators go beyond the scope of the suit and decide matters which are not in suit and which concern persons who are not parties to the suit. Rankin, J., said such an award cannot be treated partly as an award on a reference by the Court and partly as an award by private agreement, for there is no provision for such simultaneous arbitration and the jurisdiction for the different types of arbitration must not be confused (u). The Privy Council reserved their opinion as to whether there may not be an exception to this comprehensive statement as to simultaneous arbitration, but held that such an award was not in accordance with the order of reference and therefore “otherwise invalid” under para 15 (v). In a subsequent case parties to a suit applied for a reference as to matters in difference in the suit and other matters as well. The Court referred to arbitration the matters in difference in the suit only. The parties then made a reference without the intervention of the Court of these other matters to the same arbitrators who made two awards. The Court held that as the arbitrators had kept the two matters distinct the award on the suit reference was valid (w).

Appeal from order under this paragraph—Except in the case provided by s 104, cl (a) no appeal lies from an order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award (x). If the objecting party does not appear in support of his objection, the Court has no option but to pronounce judgment in accordance with the award (y), and the decree made thereon cannot be set aside under O 9 r 13, because it is not an ex parte decree (z). But if the order under this paragraph is made by a Chartered High Court, it amounts to a judgment within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable under that clause. Revision—An order under this paragraph setting aside or refusing to set aside an award is not subject to revision (c). But an order superseding arbitration may be attacked under s 105 in appeal from the decree in the suit (d).

the award was submitted to the Court. See the preamble to Act 18 of 1919. The amendment seems to have been suggested by the judgments of the learned judges in the undermentioned Calcutta case (f). In a case where judgment was delivered five days after the date on which the award was filed and the parties had notice of the date and were unable to show that any further objections would have been formulated, the error was held to be cured by s. 99 (g).

No appeal lies from a decree based on an award except in so far as such decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award.—In reference to arbitration the general rule is that, as the parties choose their own arbitrator to be the judge in the dispute between them, they cannot object to his decision either upon the law or upon the facts. It is now well established that where a matter is referred to an arbitrator, he is the sole and final judge of all questions not only of fact but of law (h). Thus where an award was impeached on the ground that it was against law, their Lordships of the Privy Council said: "They [arbitrators] may have erred in law, but arbitrators may be judges of law as well as judges of fact, and an error in law certainly does not vitiate an award" (i). And this principle has been carried so far that if parties submit to an arbitrator the decision of a bare point of law, and he gives an erroneous decision, his award is binding notwithstanding (j). In all these cases the Court would say to the party seeking to set aside the award: "You have constituted your own tribunal, you are bound by its decision" (k). The present paragraph gives effect to 'the principle of finality' of awards by declaring that no appeal shall lie from a decree based on an award, except in so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with, the award (l). The only cases in which the Code allows an appeal from a decree based on an award are—

- (1) where the decree is in excess of the award, as where the decree gives interest which the arbitrators have not awarded (m), or
- (2) where the decree is not in accordance with the award

In this respect there is no difference between a decree based upon a private award (para. 21) and a decree based upon an award made through the intervention of the Court (n).

Is a decree based on an award which has been modified by the Court under paragraph 12 a decree in accordance with the award? It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that it is not, and hence an appeal lies from the decree. Thus where an award directed the defendant to make certain payments to the plaintiff by instalments, and the award was modified by the Court under paragraph 12 by omitting the directions as to payments by instalments, and a decree was passed on the award as so modified, it was held that an appeal would lie from the decree (o). The soundness of this decision is open to question. It is submitted that a decree is in accordance with an award within the meaning of this paragraph, if it is in accordance with the award as modified under paragraph 12, though it may not be in accordance with the original award. Paragraph 16 says: "The Court shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award." It is of paragraph 16 by suggesting that there was no award (v) There is one Calcutta decision that an appeal lies if the award is not supported by a valid reference (w) But this decision stands alone against an overwhelming mass of authority so that all those cases under the old Code in which it was held that a decree though it be in accordance with the award may be challenged by way of appeal on the ground that there was no valid and legal award, are no longer law In a Lahore case sons of one of the parties interested in the property were joined as parties after the award was filed, and made detailed objections to the award When their objections were disallowed and a decree passed in terms of the award, the Court held that they had by their conduct submitted to the arbitration proceedings and had no right of appeal although they had not actually been parties to the reference (x)

(a) An order of reference made on the application of some only of the parties interested is illegal [see paragraph 1] Therefore, an award made in pursuance of such order is also illegal According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree upon such an award (y) But no appeal lies under this paragraph, and the only remedy open to the party aggrieved by the award is to apply to the Court under paragraph 15 cl (1), sub cl (c), to set aside the award Such an application should be made within 10 days from the date on which the award is submitted to the Court See paragraph 1

(b) An award made after the expiration of the period fixed by the Court under paragraph 3 or enlarged by the Court under paragraph 8, is invalid According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree based on such award (z) No appeal lies under the present paragraph but the party aggrieved by the award may apply to have it set aside under paragraph 15 See notes to para 15, 'Award made after expiration of period allowed by Court'

(c) An award must be signed before it is filed and it must be signed by all the arbitrators An award signed by some only of the arbitrators is illegal Similarly an award signed by an arbitrator after the same has been filed in Court is illegal According to the old section an appeal would lie from a decree based on such award (a) No appeal lies under this paragraph, but the party aggrieved by the award may apply under paragraph 15 to have it set aside (b)

(d) The matters in difference in a suit between A and B are referred to the arbitration of C C is the retained pleader of A, but this fact is not disclosed to B [see para 15] C makes an award The award is illegal According to the old section an appeal would lie from the decree (c) No appeal lies under the present paragraph, but B can apply to have the award set aside under paragraph 15

An appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment pronounced in contravention of the provisions of this paragraph though the decree may be in accordance with the award—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that if a decree is passed on an award before the time for making the application to set aside the award has expired, an appeal will lie from the decree, though the decree may be in accordance with the award (d). But in such cases the Bombay and Lahore High Courts interfere by way of revision (e). The Allahabad High Court has held that where an application to set aside an award has been refused by the Court without considering it, and a decree is passed on the award, an appeal will lie from the decree though the decree may be in accordance with the award. The reason given is that the word "refused" in this paragraph means refused after judicial consideration (f).

Second appeal—A second appeal will lie to the High Court where the decree of the Court of first instance is in accordance with the award, and such decree is set aside by the first appellate Court. The reason is that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award, and the first appellate Court acts without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal and setting aside the decree passed in accordance with the award (g). In a similar case the High Court of Calcutta held that no second appeal lies, but that the High Court may revise the order under s. 115 (h).

A second appeal will also lie where the Court of first instance sets aside the award and passes a decree on the merits, and the first appellate Court sets aside the decree and passes a decree in accordance with the award. The mere fact that the decree of the first appellate Court is in accordance with the award is no ground for refusing the appeal (i).

Revision—We have seen that no appeal lies from a decree passed in accordance with an award. Section 115 provides that where no appeal lies from a decision, an application may be made to the High Court for a revision of the decision. No such application, however, should be admitted in the case of an award. In the case of an award, revision would be more objectionable than an appeal. If an application for revision were admissible in a case where the decree is in accordance with the award, the finality of any award would be open to question (j). Thus where an application was made for revision on the ground that there was no valid order of reference and that the award was therefore a nullity and that no decree ought to have been passed on such an award, the High Court of Allahabad refused to entertain the application (k). But in a later case where the lower Court dealing with the objections set aside the award because of a supposed defect in the reference, the Allahabad High Court interfered in revision on the ground that the Court had acted without jurisdiction (l). The better opinion seems to be that revision is admissible for the purpose not of interfering with the arbitrator but with the exercise of jurisdiction by the Courts below, i.e., the procedure and order of the judge dealing with the objections (m). See notes above, 'An appeal lies from a decree based upon a judgment' etc.

Enforcement.—When a decree is passed in terms of the award the only mode of enforcing the award is by execution of the decree; no separate suit will lie to enforce the award (n).

Where the Court acts as arbitrator.—Where a reference is made to the presiding Judge, the parties must be deemed to have agreed to accept his decision as final. Hence no appeal lies from the decision of the judge in such a case (o). Nor is the decision subject to the provisions of the present Schedule so as to entitle either party to object to the decision as if it was an award under this schedule. A decree passed in accordance with such a decision must be regarded as a consent decree and it comes within the purview of O 23, r 3. The same principle applies even if the reference is made to the presiding Judge and another person jointly (p). A Judge to whom a reference is made has no power to alter his decision once it is given. In this respect his position is that of an arbitrator who has no power to alter an award once it is made by him (q). See notes to s 21 above.

Distinction between valuer and arbitrator.—A sues B for a declaration that he is entitled to one half share of certain property. An order is made by consent that A should pay B a quarter of the value of the property to be settled by a certain referee nominated by the parties. The order is not one passed under paras 2 and 3, and the decision of the referee is not an award on which a judgment could be pronounced under the present paragraph (r). But the terms of the agreement between the parties may be such that the valuer may be invested with the power of an arbitrator in which case the valuation made by him may operate as an award. In Jackson v Barry Railway Co (s), the building contract contained the following clause: "In the event of any question or dispute arising between the company and the contractor as to [then followed the enumeration of several questions], such questions or disputes shall be referred to the engineer whose decision shall be conclusive and binding on both parties. It was assumed that the above clause was an agreement to refer to arbitration, and the only question argued was whether in view of a letter written by the engineer to the contractor after intimation to the parties to proceed with the arbitration the engineer had rendered himself incapable of acting as an arbitrator. It was contended on behalf of the contractor that the true inference from the letter was that the engineer had so completely made up his mind against him that he would not be patiently listened to and receive an honest decision, but this contention was overruled.

Order of reference on agreements to refer.

17. [S. 523.] (1) Where any persons agree in writing that any difference between them shall be referred to arbitration, the parties to the agreement, or any of them, may apply to any Court of competent jurisdiction in the matter to which they agree relates, that the agreement be filed in Court.

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between one or more parties interested or claiming to be interested as plaintiffs, and the others or other of them as defendants, if the application has been presented by all the parties, or, if otherwise, between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants

(3) On such application being made, the Court shall direct notice thereof to be given to all the parties to the agreement, other than the applicants, requiring such parties to show cause, within the time specified in the notice, why the agreement should not be filed

(4) Where no sufficient cause is shown, the Court shall order the agreement to be filed, and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement or, if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree, the Court may appoint an arbitrator

Alteration in the paragraph—In cl 4 the words "and shall make an order of reference to the arbitrator appointed in accordance with the provisions of the agreement, or if there is no such provision and the parties cannot agree, the Court may appoint an arbitrator," are substituted for the words "and shall make an order of reference thereon and may also nominate the arbitrator when he is not a member thereof and the parties cannot agree as to the nomination"

Does not apply—The procedure prescribed by this paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies. See notes to s 89

Scope of the paragraph—Paras 1 to 16 deal with cases in which the parties to a suit agree to refer the matters in difference between them in the suit to arbitration and apply to the Court for an order of reference. The application in such a case must be made by all the parties to the suit interested in the matters in difference proposed to be referred to arbitration. Thus and the subsequent paragraph refer to cases in which persons themselves agree, independently of the Court, to refer the matters in difference between them to arbitration (f). In such a case any party to the agreement may apply to the Court to have the agreement filed and to have an order of reference made thereon. Where such an order is made the provisions of paras 2 to 16 apply to the proceedings in so far as they are consistent with the agreement so filed (u) [para 19]. When a submission is filed in Court under this paragraph, the submission is said to be made a rule of the Court.

Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference in a pending suit—An agreement to refer to arbitration matters in difference between the parties to a pending suit without the order of the Court under para 1 to 3 above is illegal and cannot be filed under this paragraph (1) Whether an award made on such a reference is an adjustment within the meaning of O 23 r 3 has been discussed in the notes on that rule under the heading submission and award

Though an agreement to refer matters in dispute in a pending suit without an order of the Court is invalid there is nothing to prevent parties compromising their suit on the terms of an award made on such an agreement Thus in a Patna case (u) parties came to an agreement to arbitrate in a pending suit and applied the same day to the Court to withdraw the suit The suit was allowed to be withdrawn and the award made and filed under paras 20 and 21 This was quite correct, for the agreement was virtually conditional on the Court surrendering its jurisdiction by allowing the suit to be withdrawn An agreement to refer to arbitration the partition of a testator's estate does not encroach upon the jurisdiction of the Court in which proceedings for the probate of the will are pending and is therefore valid (x)

The agreement must be in writing —This paragraph does not apply unless the agreement to refer is in writing (y)

Agreement to refer future differences to arbitration —Where a charter party contains a clause that any disagreement that may arise [i.e., arise in future] between the contracting parties as to the proper interpretation of the charter should be referred to arbitration the agreement though it refers to future differences can be filed under this paragraph (z) Agreements to refer future differences are not outside the scope of this section

Numbered and registered as a suit —It has been held that in spite of these words a proceeding under this para is not a suit for a suit is commenced by filing a plaint (a) The High Court of Calcutta has held that a proceeding under para 21 is a suit (b) It is submitted however that these words make it a statutory suit, otherwise the words would have been Numbered and registered as if it were a suit

Sufficient cause —Where an agreement is to refer to several specified arbitrators and one of the arbitrators dies before the application is made under this paragraph the Court should not make an order of reference under this paragraph (c) But it is otherwise if the agreement contains an express provision that in case of death of any arbitrator another arbitrator may be appointed in his place (d) During the pendency of a private arbitration one of the parties died and the arbitrator thinking he had no power to join the legal representative refused to go on On an application to file the agreement it was held that the Court has no power to order the arbitrator to proceed (e) In another similar case (f) the Court appointed a new arbitrator under para 5 which is made applicable by para 19 if its exercise is not inconsistent with the agreement of reference

History of the section.—This paragraph is a reproduction with slight alterations of section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act. The latter section is based on s. 4 of the English Arbitration Act 1889 which again is based on the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 s. 11. As to the history of the last mentioned section, see Dalrymple & Fraser v Ossett Corporation (p).

By s. 28 of the Indian Contract Act agreements in restraint of legal proceedings are declared void. To that section there was an exception to the effect that if the parties have agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration the existence of the agreement shall be a bar to seeking redress in the ordinary Courts. The exception also recognised the right to sue for specific performance of the agreement. Then came the Specific Relief Act of 1877 which by s. 21 took away the right to sue for the specific performance of the agreement but preserved the right to the party who was willing to abide by the agreement to object to a trial of the suit filed by the other party. Lastly paragraph 22 of this Schedule repealed that portion of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act which enabled the defendant to plead the agreement to refer as a bar to the suit. In lieu of this provision we have the present paragraph which enables a party who is willing to abide by the agreement to apply for a stay of the suit filed by the other party. But the application must be made at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement. If the application is not so made the suit will proceed and any award made by the arbitrator after the institution of the suit is a nullity. The reason is that as soon as a suit is brought in respect of the subject matter of the reference the arbitrator becomes functus officio (q). The Calcutta High Court has held that though the award made while the suit is pending and not stayed is a nullity the party bringing by the award may still obtain a stay order, apply for the award to be filed under para. 20 and then when the Court refuses to file it on the ground that it is invalid the arbitrators whose jurisdiction has been restored by the stay order may complete their proceedings and make a fresh award (r). The rule does not apply when the award deals with a question that is not in issue in the suit (s).

* At the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement.—The corresponding words in s. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act 1909 are, at any time after appearance and before filing a written statement or taking any other steps in the proceedings. It has been held under the English Arbitration Act, 1889, that where the defendant did not know what was the subject matter of the action and asked for a statement of claim the mere request for the statement of claim was not a step in the proceeding (t). But where the defendant was unaware that the contract contained an arbitration clause and asked for an order of discovery and the order asked for was made it was held that he had taken a step in the proceedings and therefore was not entitled to a stay (u).

* Institutes any suit.—These words show that the present rule refers only to suits instituted after the agreement to refer to arbitration has been made. As to B in respect of certain matters. The parties then agree to refer the matters to arbitration.

Denial of agreement—Where one of the parties denies the agreement to refer set up by the other party, it is within the province of the Court to decide whether there is such an agreement (c) •

Validity of agreement to refer—To bring a case within this paragraph there must be a subsisting agreement to refer capable of being carried into effect. A suit therefore cannot be stayed under this paragraph if the submission has been revoked for good cause (d). Nor can it be stayed if the original contract containing the arbitration clause is followed by another agreement materially altering the original contract, for in that case the arbitration clause ceases by virtue of the alteration to have any effect. But a mere extension of time for the performance of that which a party under the original contract is bound to perform does not amount to a material alteration, and the arbitration clause does not cease to operate in such a case (e). See Pollock and Mulla's Indian Contract Act, notes to s. 28.

"So far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17"—This paragraph provides that where an order of reference is made under paragraph 17 the provisions of paras 3 to 16 shall apply to all proceedings under the order only so far as they are consistent with the agreement filed under paragraph 17 Thus under paragraph 8 the Court has the power to extend the period for the making of the award But if the agreement filed under paragraph 17 provides that the arbitrators shall make their award within a fixed period and that they shall have no power to enlarge the time for making the award, the stipulation in the agreement will prevail to the exclusion of the provision in paragraph 8 But the words 'so far as they are consistent with any agreement filed under paragraph 17' would not preclude the Court from setting aside an award for misconduct of the arbitrators, though there may be a clause in the agreement that the award should be accepted as 'final' (l), nor would they preclude the Court from making an order as to costs when there is no such provision in the award (m) It has been held that under these words the Court may appoint a new arbitrator in place of one who refuses to act in the absence of a clause excluding the power of the Court to do so (n) But if the Court makes such an appointment the procedure of paragraph 5

must be observed and there must be formal notice of one party to the other (o) If the new arbitrator refuses to act the Court may then order superseding arbitration and such order is not appealable (r)

20. [S. 525.] (1) Where any matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court, and an award has been made thereon, any person interested in the award may apply to any Court having jurisdiction over the matter of the award that the award be filed in Court.

(2) The application shall be in writing and shall be numbered and registered as a suit between the applicant as plaintiff and the other parties as defendants.

(3) The Court shall direct notice to be given to the parties to the arbitration, other than the applicant, requiring them to show cause, within a time specified, why the award should not be filed.

Old section — This paragraph corresponds to sec 523 of the Code of 1924 which provided that in cl (1) the words 'any Court having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the award' have been substituted for the words 'Court of the lowest grade in which the action over the matter to which the award relates' See note at law at the bottom of the page.

Does not apply—This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies see note to s. 89

Pending suit—See notes to para 17 above under the head Agreement to refer to arbitration matters in a pending suit. See also notes to (i) 21 and (ii) 24.

Scope of this and subsequent paragraph — The present paragraph and paragraph 21 refer to cases where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration is itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of that court is only sought in order to give effect to the award (a).

Arbitration.

Sch. II, para. 20 saved by sec 89 as appears from the words "save in so far as is otherwise provided by any other law for the time being in force" (s) See notes to para 21 below, "Res judicata"

A valid award constitutes a bar to a suit on the original demand—An award duly passed in accordance with the submission of the parties is equivalent to final judgment Hence if an award is made for a partition of joint property no party to the reference can sue for partition The award is an answer to the suit, though no decree may have been passed on the award (t)

Court to which application should be made under this paragraph—It is the subject matter of the award, and not the subject matter of the reference, that determines the jurisdiction of the Court under the present paragraph Under the old section the application to file the award had to be made to "the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the matter to which the award relates," and these words were held by the High Court of Calcutta to mean "the Court of the lowest grade having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the reference" (u) The words "subject matter of the award" have been substituted in this paragraph for the words "matter to which the award relates" to make it clear that an application under this paragraph may be made to any Court having jurisdiction over the subject matter of the award So when the subject matter of an award was the management and control of three temples outside the district of Berar and the question of the application of the revenue was between members of the founder's family not resident in Berar, the Privy Council held that the District Judge of Berar has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to file it (z) In the case last cited the whole of the subject matter of the award was outside British India But the same rule applies when part of the subject matter of the award is outside British India, so that the Court cannot entertain an application to file an award effecting a partition of properties some in the Madras Presidency and some in Travancore (w)

Limitation—The application under this paragraph should be made within 6 months from the date of the award Limitation Act, 1908, sch I, art 178 (x) The date of the award means not the date the award bears but the date on which it was given to the parties (y) i.e., the date of publication (z) The application is not a suit and therefore the applicant cannot claim the benefit of section 6 of the Limitation Act (a) See notes to para 17 above, "Numbered and registered as a suit"

Where an award is delivered in parts—If the agreement to refer provides that the matter in dispute may be taken up and dealt with seriatim and that the award may be delivered bit by bit each portion decided may be dealt with as a distinct award under this paragraph (b)

Lost award.—When an award has been lost, the procedure of this rule cannot be resorted to and the parties must be referred to a regular suit (c)

"Where any matter has been referred to arbitration"—Do the words "any matter" refer only to a matter in respect of which a suit can be entertained by a Civil Court under s 9 of the Code?—This paragraph provides that when any matter has been referred to arbitration without the intervention of a Court, and an award has been made thereon, any person interested in the award may apply that the award be filed in Court. Paragraph 21 provides for the passing of a decree on the award. But what if the matter referred to arbitration is one as to which a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit under sec. 9 of the Code, e.g., disputes about man pan, and an award is made thereon? Has the Court jurisdiction to file such an award, and pass a decree thereon under paragraph 21? It has been held by the High Court of Bombay, that it has and that it is not against the policy of the law to give effect to such awards (d). The result is that rights which are not at all civil rights may be the subject matter of an arbitration and award and of the decree of a Civil Court. It would be interesting to know how the decree, if disobeyed, would be enforced. However this may be, it is clear that if a matter is such that on grounds of public policy it can be disposed of only by a Court, it cannot be the subject of a reference, and if such a matter is referred and an award is made, the Courts should refuse to pass a decree thereon. Thus the right to succeed to the trusteeship of a public charitable trust is not a right which can be settled by arbitration. A Court therefore has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to file an award in such a matter under this paragraph (e).

Numbered and registered as a suit.—See notes to para 17 under the same head. The Bombay High Court has held that the application when numbered and registered as a suit becomes a suit for the purpose of O. 35 and the Court has jurisdiction to direct attachment before judgment (f).

Notice.—If the parties are numerous a notice by public advertisement will suffice, and a separate notice under O. 1, r. 8, is not necessary (g).

21. [S. 526.] (1) Where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon, and where no ground such as is mentioned or referred to in paragraph 14 or paragraph 15 is proved, the Court shall order the award to be filed and shall proceed to pronounce judgment according to the award.

(2) Upon the judgment so pronounced a decree shall follow, and no appeal shall lie from such decree except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award.

Points of distinction between s. 526 of the Code of 1882 and this provision.—

1. The words, "where the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon" have been added in order to remove the view held by the High Court of Bombay under the old section that the Court had no power to entertain a reference relating to the duration and validity of the agreement of reference and of the award, and to give effect to the view held by the High Court under sec. 526 of the new Code. Where the Court is satisfied the matter has been referred to arbitration, &c.

1. The award is numbered and registered as a suit under O. 35 of the Code of 1882, and the Court has jurisdiction to direct attachment before judgment.

2. The award is numbered and registered as a suit under O. 35 of the Code of 1882, and the Court has jurisdiction to direct attachment before judgment.

Arbitration.

Sche. II,
para. 21.

This word "proved" has been substituted for the word "shown" In fact it was held under the old section that the word "shown" meant "proved" (g) See notes below under the head "Proved"

Does not apply—This paragraph does not apply to cases to which the Arbitration Act applies See notes to sec 89

When the Court is satisfied that the matter has been referred to arbitration and that an award has been made thereon—These words are new In the absence of these words in the corresponding section of the Code of 1882 it was held by the High Court of Bombay that if an application was made under that section to file an award, and the other party raised objections to the factum or validity of the submission and award, the Court has no jurisdiction to inquire whether the parties had or had not referred the matters in dispute to arbitration, and should therefore reject the application, and refer the applicant to a regular suit to enforce the award (h) On the other hand, the High Courts of Allahabad (i), Calcutta (j) and Madras (l) held that the Court had the power under that section to determine all questions relating to the existence and validity of the alleged agreement to refer and of the award, and that the applicant must not be referred to a separate suit The present paragraph supersedes the Bombay decisions, and gives effect to the decisions of the other High Courts

Oral award—In an arbitration without the intervention of the Court the provisions of paragraph 10 do not apply, and if writing is not required by the terms of the submission an oral award is good and will bind the parties (l) In a Bombay case Sir Lawrence Jenkins said that an oral award though undesirable was perfectly valid (m)

Award under Co operative Societies Act—An award made by an Inspector of Co operative Credit Societies under rules framed under sec 43 of the Co operative Credit Societies Act 2 of 1912 has itself the force of a decree and need not be filed in Court (n)

"Proved"—It is not sufficient to "allege" grounds of objections under paras 14 and 15 It is necessary that the ground of objections should be proved See notes above under the head "Points of distinction," etc

Grounds of objection under paras 14 and 15—Where a matter has been referred to arbitration under an order of the Court, the Court has power in the cases mentioned in para 14 to remit the award to the reconsideration of the arbitrator Thus if an award determines any matter not referred to arbitration, the Court may remit the award under para 14, and if such matter can be separated without affecting the determination of the matters referred the Court may amend the award by striking out that portion of the award which is in excess of the reference, and enforce the award as to the rest of it In the case, however, of an arbitration without the intervention of the Court [paras 20 21], the High Courts have held in a series of cases that if the award determines matters outside the scope of the reference, the Court must refuse to file the award even when the matter not referred can be separated from that which was referred, the reason given being that the Court had under this para only two courses open to it, namely, to file the award or refuse to file it, and that it had no power to remit or amend the award (o) This however, is incorrect for para 21 refers to para 14 where the principle of separation is recognised The point is concluded by the decision of the Privy Council (p) that the part of the award which is good should be filed and the remainder that is bad rejected

An arithmetical error, according to the Allahabad High Court does not render the award invalid (q) But the Lahore High Court has held that the Judge has no power to correct an arithmetical mistakes even with the consent of the party affected the reason given being that a Court acting under this paragraph must either file the award as it is or refuse to file it (r) But this is inconsistent with the Privy Council ruling referred to above

Award made after long delay—Where the agreement to refer was made in 1905 and the award was not made until 1910 and the Court came to the conclusion that it would probably not have been made at all but for one of the parties having brought a criminal complaint against one of the arbitrators, the Court refused the application to file the award The Court presumed from the circumstances of the case that the reference had been abandoned (s)

Award made after revocation of submission—An award made after the agreement to refer has been revoked by one of the parties thereto for good cause cannot be filed under this paragraph (t)

Appeal—An appeal lies from an order under this paragraph filing or refusing to file an award [s 104 sub s (1) cl (f)] even though no express order is made (u) But no appeal lies from the order passed on appeal (v), see s 104 (2)(w) But sec 104 refers to appeals within British India and does not take away the right of appeal to Privy Council given by section 109 (z) Again though an appeal lies from an order made under the paragraph no appeal lies from a decree passed on an award except in so far as the decree is in excess of or not in accordance with the award (y) [see sub para (2)] But is the right of appeal lost if the decree on the award is passed before the appeal is preferred from the order? It has been held that it is not, and it has been further held that if the appellate Court sets aside the order, it is competent also to declare that the decree based on the order is vacated (z) See notes to para 15 above, "Award made after expiration of period allowed by the Court"

Sch II,

If a ruling is made by the arbitrator in an application not to receive a petition of objection which has been filed in respect of the award, (i) it applies to the award under para. (2). It objects to the filing of the award on certain grounds. On the date of the hearing, the objector does not appear. Thereupon his objections are allowed and an ex parte decree is passed against him in accordance with the award. He then applies under the order to set aside the ex parte decree and to hear his objections to the award. The application is rejected. He then appeals from the order rejecting the application. Is the order appealable? Yes it is appealable under O 43 r 1 (1) which it is provided that an appeal lies from an order respecting an application for an order to set aside an ex parte decree in a case open to appeal. The case is one for an appeal from the decision between the parties was whether or not the award should be set aside. If the Court and any order made upon it will be appealable under O 43 r 1 (1) (b).

Res judicata—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the refusal of a Court to file a private award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrator is not a res judicata in respect of a suit subsequently brought to enforce the award. The reason given being that the doctrine of res judicata presupposes a former ad litem decree in the suit and that the order of refusal is not a decree, but merely an order. This decision has been followed by the Bombay High Court (d). The Calcutta High Court has held that the bar of res judicata will only apply to grounds of objection referred to in paras. 14 and 15 which were heard and finally decided (e).

Withdrawal of suit—The fact that an application has been made under para. (2) does not preclude the applicant from withdrawing the application under O 23 r 1 at any time prior to the pronouncement of judgment and preparation of the decree. It is true that a suit alone can be withdrawn under O 23 r 1 but an application filed under para. (2) is numbered and registered as a suit (f).

Notice to be given to decree-holders and to persons having claims on property

- (a) every person holding a decree for the payment of money against the judgment-debtor capable of execution by sale of his immovable property and which such decree-holder desires to have so executed, and every holder of a decree for the payment of money in execution of which proceedings for the sale of such property are pending, to produce before the Collector a copy of the decree, and a certificate from the Court which passed or is executing the same, declaring the amount recoverable thereunder;

Court of Bombay, 1823 There was no such provision in the High Courts' Act, 1861, nor in any of the High Courts' charters See Despatch from Secretary of State, cl 17

Ss.

The High Court has power under the Specific Relief Act 1 of 1877, s 45, to make an order requiring the Chief Revenue authority to state a case and refer it to the High Court under s 51 of the Income Tax Act 7 of 1918, the power not being the 'exercise of original jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue,' so as to be excluded by sub-sec (2) (i)

Revenue.—Income tax is revenue within the meaning of this section (iv) And so money derived from the sale of smuggled goods, which have been seized and confiscated (z)

107. [Ch. Act, s. 15.]—Each of the high courts has superintendence over all courts for the time being subject to its appellate jurisdiction, and may do any of the following things, that is to say,—

Powers of high court with respect to subordinate courts

- (a) call for returns ;
- (b) direct the transfer of any suit or appeal from any such court to any other court of equal or superior jurisdiction ,
- (c) make and issue general rules and prescribe forms for regulating the practice and proceedings of such courts ,
- (d) prescribe forms in which books, entries and accounts shall be kept by the officers of any such courts , and in fact or in law (y). The power of superintendence cannot be taken from the High Court by emergency legislation under s. 72 of the Government of India Act ()

Power of superintendence Civil proceedings—The High Courts have under this section not only administrative but judicial powers. In the exercise of its power of superintendence a High Court may direct a Subordinate Court to do its duty, and this power is not limited to cases in which the Subordinate Court declines to hear or determine a suit or application within its jurisdiction. But a High Court is not competent in the exercise of this power to interfere with and set right the orders of a Subordinate Court on the ground that the order of the Subordinate Court has proceeded on an error of law or an error of fact (a). A High Court in the exercise of its superintending power will not ordinarily interfere except in cases of grave and otherwise irreparable injustice (b). If the lower Court has held that the plaintiff's valuation as to Court fee is correct the High Court will not interfere in revision or under this section (c). See note 'Court fee' under s. 115 at p. 200.

The power of revision conferred upon a High Court by s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code is limited to cases in which an appeal lies to the High Court. There is no such limitation upon the power of superintendence conferred upon a High Court by the present section (d). The power of superintendence includes the power of revision (e) and too High Court has under s. 115 and this section directed an amendment of a plaint which has been refused by the lower Court (f). All that is necessary is that the Court over which the power of superintendence is sought to be exercised shall be subject to its appellate jurisdiction. If the Subordinate Court is one from which an appeal lies to the High Court though in certain specified cases only, then it is subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court and that is sufficient to attract the power of superintendence conferred by this section and that power may therefore be exercised over the Subordinate Court even in cases where a direct appeal does not lie (g). Under this power a High Court can direct a transfer of an inquiry under sec. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act into the conduct of a pleader (h), and can revise an order of a District Judge declaring a person a tout under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act (i).

Insolvency proceedings—The Insolvency Judge in the High Court has no power under this section to stay insolvency proceedings in a District Court (j).

Power of superintendence Criminal proceedings—In the exercise of its power of superintendence the High Court will interfere with an order under s. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1898 when the Magistrate has acted without jurisdiction or has exceeded his jurisdiction or where there has been a material irregularity in the proceedings which amounts to a refusal to exercise jurisdiction or to an usurpation of jurisdiction, or which has prejudiced a party to the proceedings (k) In case of a difference of opinion, the senior Judge's opinion will prevail (l)

The High Court has power under this section to stay the trial of a criminal case by a Magistrate pending the decision of a civil suit between the parties (m), and to set aside an order by a Collector directing a prosecution (n)

Agency Courts—Under rule 14 of the Rules of 1920 framed under the Ganjam and Vizagapatam Agency Courts Act 24 of 1879 and under the present section, the High Court has power to transfer to its file cases pending before the Agency Commissioner (o) The High Court has power under this section to transfer a case from the Mewar Agent to the District Court, Khandesh (p)

Defence of India Act, 1915—The High Court has no jurisdiction to superintend the proceedings of commissioners appointed under the Defence of India Act, 1915 (q)

Rent Act—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that it has power under this section to revise the orders of the Rent Controller under the Calcutta Rent Act (r) The High Court of Rangoon has held that it has no power to interfere with the orders of the Rent Controller under the Rangoon Rent Act (s)

Land Acquisition Act—The Bombay High Court has held that if the Collector refuses to make a reference to the Civil Court under sec 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 the High Court cannot in the exercise of its power of superintendence direct him to do so as the Collector is not a Court subject to the appellate jurisdiction (t) But the Calcutta High Court has held that the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal acting under the Land Acquisition Act is a Court and subject to the superintendence of the High Court (u)

Board of Revenue—The Board of revenue directing the operations of a settlement officer under the Madras Estates Land Act is not a civil Court nor subject to the superintendence of the High Court (v)

Municipal Commissioner—A Municipal Commissioner sitting as an Election Court is not subject to the superintendence of the High Court under this section, nor is he subject to the appellate jurisdiction (w)

When present section to be resorted to—The special power of superintendence conferred by this section is not as a rule to be exercised in cases where there is

DESPATCH FROM SECRETARY OF STATE.

SIR CHARLES WOOD'S DESPATCH ACCOMPANYING FIRST
LETTERS PATENT OR CHARTER

Judicial, No 24

INDIA OFFICE,
London, 14th May, 1862

My Lord,

I HEREWITH transmit to you the Letters Patent or Charter (A), under the Royal Sign Manual, for the High Court of Judicature to be established in Bengal in accordance with the provisions of the Act 24 and 25, Victoria, Chapter 131, for establishing High Court of Judicature in India, and request that you will take immediate measure for instituting the Court, the first Judges of which including those appointed under the 3rd section of the Act, are designated in the second clause of the Charter. Those appointed by the Crown will be severally informed by me of their appointments to the Court

2 This Charter will accomplish the great object which has so long been contemplated, of substituting for the Supreme and Sudder Courts abolished by the Act of High Court of Judicature, possessing the combined powers and authorities of the abolished Courts and exercising jurisdiction both over the Provinces under the Sudder Court and over the Presidency Town which forms the local jurisdiction of the Supreme Court

3 Before I review the provisions in detail, it is necessary that I should direct your attention to the general scope and main provisions of the Act in question

4 It abolishes, in the first place (as soon as the Charter shall issue), the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewany Adawlut. It vests in the High Court (by the last provision of section 9) the powers and authorities of those Courts respectively, except so far as the Crown may by such Charter otherwise direct. And by (the first part of the same section) it invests the High Court with such Civil, Criminal, Admiralty, Vice Admiralty, Testamentary, Intestate and Matrimonial Jurisdiction, and all such powers and authority in relation to the administration of justice in the Presidency, as the same Charter may confer. With respect, therefore, to the fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, it appears obvious that the Act itself speaks, and that to assume and effect the same purpose by affirmative declaration in the Charter would be superfluous. It has been, consequently, deemed unnecessary that the Charter should exhibit on the face of it an explicit statement of the powers and jurisdiction to be possessed by the new Court in consequence of the fusion as would have been the proper course if these powers and jurisdiction had been entirely new. Recourse has been had in some places in lieu of such explicit statement to reference to statutory provisions, and in others, to the Charter of the Supreme Court when the object of clearness appeared to require it. But wherever the Charter does not otherwise specify, the High Court will use powers and administer the jurisprudence appertaining to those Courts respectively to whose authority it now succeeds

(A) The Letters Patent dated the 14th May 1862 forwarded with this despatch were afterwards revoked by further Letters Patent, dated 28th December, 1865 for which see post

5 But the Charter is intended positively to declare all such Civil, Criminal and other jurisdictions above specified as the Crown thinks proper by this Charter to confer on it supplementary or additional to its main purpose, namely, the fusion of the afore said Courts

6 Moreover the words giving authority to confer on the Court such jurisdiction and such powers and authorities for the administration of justice as the Crown may direct, appear very large and such as, in point of fact invest the Crown with extensive legislative powers, so far as the administration of justice, within the meaning of the sections may require It has been however, thought best to use this power very sparingly and simply as ancillary to the real purpose of the Act, namely the establishment of new Courts

7 Another reason for the form which the present Letters Patent assume is to be found in the provisions of section 17 of the Act of last Session By that section power is given to the Crown to recall the Letters Patent establishing the Court at any time within three years after its establishment, and to grant other Letters Patent in their stead This provision was inserted in the Act, mainly with the view of enabling Her Majesty's Government to avail themselves of the advice and assistance of the Judges of the Court in framing the more perfect Charter by which the jurisdiction and authority of the Court is to be permanently fixed On this point, I request you will put yourselves in communication with the Judges of the Court and at any time previous to the expiration of two years from the date of establishment of the Court furnish me with any suggestions they make or any amendments they may propose in the Letters Patent now transmitted and I shall be glad if in proposing alterations the Judges will put their recommendations as nearly as possible in the form in which they wish them to appear in the future Letters Patent

8 I proceed to notice in order such of the provisions of the Charter as appear to me to call for special remark

9 By clause 6, power is given to the Chief Justice to appoint the officers of the Court, and to fix their salaries subject however in both cases to the approval and confirmation of the Governor General in Council This provision does not refer to the setting of tables of fees where fees are allowed which under section 13 of the Act is required to be done by the Court

10 The Supreme Court exercise an authority entirely independent of the Government in regard to its ministerial officers The Government however has always considered itself at liberty to receive representations from any of the officers of the Sudder or Subordinate Courts who felt themselves aggrieved by the orders of the Judicial Authorities and to express its opinion on the propriety or otherwise of the proceedings of the Courts in such cases It will be expedient for you to take the question into your consideration and after communication with the Court to adopt some rule in regard to it which of course must be uniformly applicable to all the officers of the Court Constituted as the High Court will be it will merit all the confidence you can repose in it but as a question of policy the extension of the liberty of application to the Government to those who have not hitherto enjoyed it appears to me preferable to taking it away from those who have heretofore been permitted to avail themselves of it as a mode of obtaining redress against proceedings alleged by the applicants to be unjust and oppressive

11. In regard to the admission of Advocates, Vakeels, and Attorneys the recommendations of the Law Commissioners have been followed Clauses 7 to 10 Under the existing practice, the Advocate pleads, and the Attorney acts, for the suitors of the Supreme Court and the Vakeel both pleads and acts for the suitors of the Sudder Court, of which Court the Advocate and Attorney of the Supreme Court are ex-officio Vakeels. These terms are employed in the Charter simply to express the functions of these several classes of practitioners. The Advocate and Attorney will respectively plead and act in the High Court and the Vakeel will both plead and act in the High Court as he did in the Sudder Court. Any person may apply to be admitted either as an Advocate, or Vakeel, or Attorney under the rules which the Court is authorised by the Charter to make, and there is nothing in the Charter to prevent the admission of Advocates and Attorneys to be also Vakeels of the High Court, should the Judges consider such a course to be expedient.

12. The provisions in the Act, section 2, clause 4, which declares that Pleader of the Sudder Court, "who shall have been admitted as Pleaders of the High Court" shall be eligible, under certain conditions, to the Bench of the Court, implies that a discretionary power may be exercised as to the admission of the present Pleaders of the Sudder Court to the Bar of the High Court. This enactment will account to you for the omission from the Charter of any provision appointing all the present practitioners of the Supreme and Sudder Courts to the High Court. I conclude, however, that unless, in any special cases, there are strong reasons to the contrary, the Court will admit the whole of the practitioners in the abolished Courts at the date of their abolition, to be the first Advocates, Vakeels, and Attorneys of the High Court.

13. With reference to the concluding sentence of clause 10, it is to be observed Clause 10 that the Letters Patent contain no provision reserving to the Attorneys of the present Supreme Court the right of pleading after the issue of this Charter, in the Insolvent Court, as newly regulated by clause 17. No such provision, however, is necessary, as the Insolvent Court is a separate tribunal not affected by the Act authorising the Letters Patent and will continue a separate Court though for the future, presided over by a Judge of the High Court. The Attorneys, therefore, will, as heretofore, practise in accordance with the rules of the Insolvent Court itself.

14. By the important provisions contained in the clauses of the Charter, 11 to 35 inclusive, effect is given to the 9th section of the Act, respecting the jurisdictions and powers to be exercised by the High Court.

15. The original civil jurisdiction now exercised by the Supreme Court within the limits of the Presidency Town will henceforth be exercised Civil Jurisdiction, Clause 11 under the Charter, by the High Court, including in that term (Clause 36 of the Charter) a Judge or Division Court of the High Court, appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th section of the Act.

16. As it is very desirable that every suit should be instituted in the Court of the district in which the property forming the subject of dispute is situated, or in which the cause of action has its origin, or in which the defendant resides or carries on business, the jurisdiction hitherto exercised by the Supreme Court (on the ground of constructive inhabitancy or otherwise) over persons and property beyond the local limits of the Presidency Town, but within the limits of the Presidency or Division subject to the authority of the High Court has not been vested in the High Court. The concluding provision of clause 11 provides that the exercise of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the Court shall be confined to the local limits of the Presidency Town, with power, however, to the Court, under clause 13, to call for and try any suit instituted in any Court subject to its superintendence, when, for reasons to be recorded, it shall think proper to do so

17 The terms of clause 12, defining the original jurisdiction of the High Court as to suits, are nearly similar to those employed in section 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859), and are intended to include every description of case over which the Mofussil Courts have jurisdiction By the 8th section of the 21st George III, C 70, the Supreme Court is precluded from exercising any jurisdiction in any matter concerning the revenue Further, a decision* of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, pronounced in April 1856, ruled against the exercise of the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in matters matrimonial between others than Christians, and even expressed some hesitation as to whether that Court should administer a remedy in such cases on the Civil side It is one object of the present Charter to do away with all such restrictions and limitations, as far as this can be done without trenching on the proper province of legislation It has, therefore, been sought to invest the High Court, in the exercise of its original civil jurisdiction, with as ample powers in receiving and determining cases of every description, and in applying a remedy to every wrong as are exercised by the Courts not established by Royal Charter, and thus to place the Courts of first instance in the Presidency Towns and in the interior of the country in this respect, as nearly as may be, on the same footing

18 I shall be glad to be furnished with your opinion, after consultation with the Judges of the Courts as to the concluding portion of clause 12, excluding the jurisdiction of the Court in regard to cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court of Calcutta, in which the debt or damage or value of the property sued for does not exceed 100 Rupees Hitherto, I believe, there has been no tendency to bring into the Supreme Court cases cognizable by the Small Cause Court, but should it appear that under the new system, the time of the High Court is unnecessarily taken up with trying cases which might be instituted in the Small Cause Court, it may become a question for consideration whether the sum, excluding the jurisdiction of the High Court, might not be raised to say, 300 or 500 Rupees

19 It has been suggested that the Small Cause Court should be placed on the same footing as a Zillah Court in its subjection to the High Court as a Court of appeal and general superintendence But I do not consider that it was the purpose of the Act of Parliament of last Session that the Crown, in framing a Charter under it for the High Court, should interfere with the present position and jurisdiction of other and independent Courts This subject, if desirable, is properly to be attained by legislation Should you be of opinion that the Small Cause Court ought to be placed in the same relation to the High Court as any other Court subject to its appellate jurisdiction and general control the measure can be carried into effect by an Act of the Governor General in Council

20 As already observed, the effect of clause 12 will be to confine the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Court within narrower limits than the civil jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court By clause 13, however the High Court is empowered to call for and to try, as a Court of first instance, any suit which the law requires to be instituted before some other tribunal. By the exercise of the power thus conferred on it, the High Court will be enabled to obviate all reasonable ground of complaint, when it shall deem that any hardship or injustice is likely to result from the compulsory institution in a Zillah Court of a suit which, but for the change in the system, might have been instituted in the Supreme Court.

21. The introduction of the words "whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William" in this and in several other clauses, may appear to require explanation. The Court about to be established is called in section 2 of the Act, 24 and 25 Victoria, C. 101, a Court "for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William." That title is of course preserved in the Charter. By sec. 8 the Supreme and Sudder Courts are abolished and by section 9 all their jurisdiction, power, and authority, except when otherwise provided, are vested in the High Court. But the Supreme Court has various original jurisdictions, extending over the whole of the Presidency of Fort William, and also over some of the Non Regulation Provinces under the Government of India, and the Sudder Court has various appellate jurisdictions extending over the Bengal Division of the Presidency, and also over the Province of Assam and others, which are not properly parts of the Presidency. The result is, that the High Court "for the Bengal Division," succeeding to the powers of both the Supreme and the Sudder Courts, has, in several respects, jurisdictions in territories not within the Bengal Division. As this is the result of the Act, it might not have been necessary to notice it in the Charter. But for the sake of clearness, and order to show distinctly that the Charter is meant to apply to these extra local jurisdictions, as well as to the strictly local jurisdiction within the Bengal Division, it has been deemed advisable to introduce these words.

22. Clauses 14 and 15 give effect to the recommendation of the law Commissioners that the High Court shall have all the appellate jurisdiction which is now exercised by the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, and a new appellate jurisdiction and civil cases, from the Courts of original jurisdiction, constituted by one or more of its own Judges, except that in the case of a decision which has been passed by a majority of the full number of the judges of the Court, the appeal shall lie to Her Majesty in Council.

23. It will appear, from a subsequent clause of the Letters Patent, that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, shall apply to the High Court.

differ as to the judgment to be given. For such a case, the Court of Civil Procedure, which is adapted to Courts of first instance presided over by single Judges only, contain no provision. To call in a third Judge, and to re try the case, with a view to a judgment from which there may be an appeal to the High Court under clause 14 would be productive of unnecessary delay and expense to the parties, and I am of opinion that the Court should make provision for such a contingency, by a rule made under the 13th section of the Act of Parliament, providing either that the judgment shall be in accordance with opinion of the senior of the Judges constituting the Division Court, or that the final judgment shall be entered pro forma, according to such opinion, such judgment being a judgment for the purpose of an appeal against the same, but not an authority for purpose.

24 The substantive civil law to be administered by the High Court within the jurisdiction of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, respectively, will, until otherwise provided, continue as at present This, as I have said, it was no part of the purpose of the Act of Parliament or Charter to effect And the clauses on which I am now commenting are probably superfluous But they have been introduced to obviate any apprehension which might have been entertained that in fusing the two Courts together, it was intended to fuse also the law which they have respectively hitherto administered, and thus to make a substantial innovation, not only in the tribunals for administration of the law but of the law itself I trust, however, that measures may be taken ere long for effecting great improvements in this respect, by enacting for the British possession in India a body of substantive law, by which all classes shall be governed, and all transactions shall be regulated except in cases to which our Judicatures are required to apply the personal laws of any classes of our Indian subjects

25 Under clauses 21, 22 and 38, no change will be effected by the Charter in the administration of criminal justice in the Presidency Town or in respect of persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction, residing in the interior of the country It appears, however, to Her Majesty's Government that some modification of the existing practice, both at the capital and in the provinces, is necessary and on these points, I shall address you in a separate despatch

26 The Sudder Court exercises no original jurisdiction but by clause 23 original criminal jurisdiction throughout the territories subject to its authority, has been given to the High Court, the principal object being to enable the Judges to hold trials for offences committed out of the Presidency Town, at which from their importance or for other specific cause, it may be expedient that a Judge or Judges of the High Court should preside

27 The remaining clauses of the Letters Patent on the subject of the criminal jurisdiction of the High Court do not call for any particular notice They contain no special provisions respecting the transfer to that Court of the Criminal jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court over inhabitants of such parts of India as are not comprised within the local limits of the Letters Patent that having been fully provided for by section 10 of the Act under the authority of which the High Court is established

28 As in the case of the Small Cause Court, you will consult the Judges in regard to the relation in which the High Court is to stand to the Magistrates of Calcutta

29 Clause 30, respecting the exercise of the jurisdiction by the High Court elsewhere than at its ordinary place of sitting, is a very important provision and one which, I have no doubt, if judiciously carried into effect, will materially tend to the greater efficiency of all the judicatories subject to the superintendence and authority of the High Court Circumstances may frequently arise when the deputation of a Judge or Judges of the High Court would be a measure of the highest expediency For such cases the clause under consideration will enable the Government to provide by deputing one or more Judges from the High Court, who would avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them of making a searching inquiry into the manner in which the local Courts were performing their duties

despatch from Secretary of State.

30 With reference to this clause, it has been considered whether the precedence of section 14 of the Act of Parliament should not be followed and the authority to make the necessary arrangement for exercise of the Court's jurisdiction out of the usual place of sitting vested in the Chief Justice. On the whole it was thought that acts partaking so much of an administrative character might be more perfectly performed by the Governor General in Council. But it is scarcely for me to add that Her Majesty's Government entertain full confidence that the Chief Justice will be the authority habitually consulted in the matter.

31 The Supreme Court exercises at present Admiralty Jurisdiction under its

Clauses 31 and 32.

Charter. The Chief Justice has Vice Admiralty Jurisdiction under the commission of the 19th July, 1822, and all or any of the Judges of the Supreme Court may be appointed Commissioners, under the provisions of 39 and 40, George III, C 79, section 25 for the trial and adjudication of prize causes and other maritime questions arising in India. By the present Charter, the whole of these jurisdictions and power will be vested in the High Court, and as in the Act above cited, by the expression "other maritime questions" in general mention is made of all the jurisdictions conferred as above mentioned in the clauses of the Charter, providing both for the civil and criminal maritime jurisdiction of the High Court.

Clauses 33 and 34

33 Her Majesty's Government are desirous of placing the Christian subjects of the Clause 35

Crown within the Presidency in the same position under the High Court, as to "matters matrimonial" in general as they now are under the Supreme Court, and thus they believe to be effected by clause 35 of the Charter. But they consider it expedient that the High Court should possess in addition, the power of decreeing divorce, which the Supreme Court does not possess, in other words, that the High Court should have the same jurisdiction as the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England, established in virtue of 20 and 21 Vic. C 85, and in regard to which further provisions were made by 22 and 23 Vic. C 61, and 23 and 24 Vic. C 144. The Act of Parliament for establishing the High Court, however, does not purport to give to the Crown the power of importing into the Charter all the provisions of the Divorce Court Act, and some of them the Crown clearly could not so import, such for instance as those which prescribe the period of remarriage, or those which exempt from punishment clergymen refusing to re-marry adulterers. All these are, in truth, matters for Indian legislation and I request that you will immediately take the subject into your consideration and introduce into your Council a Bill for conferring upon the High Court the jurisdiction and powers of the Divorce Court in England, one of the provisions of which should be to give an appeal to the Privy Council in those cases in which the Divorce Court Act gives an appeal to the House of Lords.

34 The object of the proviso at the end of clause 35 is to obviate any doubt that may possibly arise as to whether, by vesting the High Court with the powers of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in England, it was intended to take away from the Courts within the divisions of the Presidency not established by Royal Charter any jurisdiction which they might have in matters Matrimonial, as, for instance, in a suit for alimony between Armenians or Native Christians. With any such jurisdiction it is not intended to interfere.

35. Clause 36 refers to the powers of single Judges and Division Courts, appointed or constituted under the provisions of the 13th section of the Act. By section 14 of the Act, the power of determining from time to time what Judge in each case shall sit alone, and what Judges shall constitute Division Courts, is placed in the hands of the Chief Justice. It will be observed that the law does not require that a Judge selected from the Bar shall necessarily form a part of every Division Court, and it will be for the Chief Justice to consider whether, in cases exclusively between natives, it will not be desirable to follow, as far as possible, the course which has already been resolved upon in regard to the cases under appeal to the Sudder Court at the time of its abolition, and to constitute the Division Courts of Judges trained in the country, whose knowledge of the Native language will obviate the expense and delay of translating the proceedings.

36. Clause 37 is a very important one, and there is little doubt, will prove a very salutary provision. It has, therefore, been inserted, although the change introduced is somewhat greater and more substantial than is generally aimed at in this Charter. It extends to the High Court the Code of Civil Procedure enacted by the Legislature of India for the Court, not established by Royal Charter, and thus accomplishes the object so long contemplated of substituting one simple Code of Procedure for the various systems (corresponding to its common law, equity and admiralty jurisdiction) which have been in operation in the Supreme Court since the date of its establishment.

37. In regard to the rules respecting appeals to the Privy Council the object has been to avoid unnecessary innovation where so much of change, with its necessary inconvenience, is unavoidable. The existing rules which regulate these appeals are, therefore, left in force, with one or two additions only, which experience in the Court of the Judicial Committee has found advisable. For instance, clause 40 is introduced, as it had been commonly introduced of late years in the appeal rules of other dependencies of Great Britain in order to remove all doubts as to the power of the High Court to allow an appeal to the Council from interlocutory judgments.

38. It will, however, be obvious to you that the rules, as now framed, will be liable to the reproach of confusion, and perhaps of uncertainty. They will be compounded of those contained in the Charter and those already in force which will necessitate reference to several documents. You will agree with me that a simple and intelligible Code of Rules, to regulate appeals to the Privy Council from the new High Courts, or rather from the High Courts in general which may be constituted under the Act of Parliament, will be of great advantage to the suitors and the public. I should wish, therefore, that only of the first objects of the Judges, as soon as the amount of labour thrown on them by their new position may allow it, might be to prepare suggestions for such a Code of Rules which might then be reduced into a complete shape by the authority of the Privy Council at Home.

39. In forwarding the Letters Patent to the Judges of the High Court you are requested to furnish them with a copy of this despatch. I trust that the Letters Patent taken in connection with the Act for establishing the Court, will be found to contain everything requisite for enabling the Court to proceed at once to the discharge of its important duties. It is possible that omissions may be discovered by the legal authorities in India, which may impede the proper action of the Courts, and should the Judges represent to you that such is the case you will take immediate steps for supplying what is wanting by such legislative measures as you may consider most expedient for remedying the defects brought under your consideration.

40 I cannot conclude this despatch without expressing the deep interest felt by Her Majesty's Government in the success of this important measure. The Crown by its Letters Patent has sanctioned the establishment of a tribunal as the Chief Court of Justice in India, which in the trained learning of the Judges selected from the Bar, and in the knowledge of the language, feelings, and habits of the Natives of that country possessed by the other members of the Court, combines the most material elements of success. And Her Majesty's Government look with confidence to the zealous exertions and cordial co-operation of the Judges to place the administration of Justice in India, under the controlling authority of the Court, in such a state of efficiency as will render it in every respect adequate to its ends, and satisfactory to the people and to the Government.

I have the honour to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient, humble Servant,

(Signed) C. WOOD

Letters Patent for the High Court of Calcutta.

(Dated the 28th December 1865.)

[A B—The Letters Patent for the High Courts of Madras and Bombay are mutatis mutandis in almost the same terms.]

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith. To all to whom these Presents shall come, greeting. Whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the Twenty fourth and Twenty-fifth Years of Our reign, intituled "An Act for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India" it was, amongst other things, enacted that it should be lawful for Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, and that such High Court should consist of a Chief Justice, and as many Judges, not exceeding fifteen, as Her Majesty might, from time to time, think fit to appoint, who should be selected from among persons qualified as in the said Act is declared. Provided always, that the persons who at the time of the establishment of such High Court were Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and permanent Judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut or Sudder Adawlut of the same Presidency, should be and become Judges of such High Court without further appointment for that purpose, and the Chief Justice of such Supreme Court should become the Chief Justice of such High Court, and that upon the establishment of such High Court as aforesaid, the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut and Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta in the said Presidency, should be abolished —

And that the High Court of Judicature so to be established should have and exercise all such Civil, Criminal, Admiralty

1. Bar Councils Act.—The powers of a High Court under clauses 9 and 10 of the Letters Patent are subject to the provisions of the Indian Bar Councils Act (See s 19 (2) of Act 78 of 1926). A complaint of misconduct by an advocate must first be referred for inquiry to the Bar Council (i)

Power to remove or suspend on reasonable cause.—The words “on reasonable cause” are not confined to purely professional misconduct, but embrace all causes which may afford reasonable ground for suspension or removal (j). As to what is reasonable cause see the undermentioned cases (l). The Madras High Court has held that negligence is not professional misconduct (l).

An attorney is an officer of the Court, and any person aggrieved by the misconduct of an Attorney has the right to invoke the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court (m).

Proceedings in the disciplinary jurisdiction are not of a criminal nature and the rules of Criminal Procedure such as filing a written statement by the accused do not apply (n). The procedure in the exercise of the disciplinary jurisdiction is left to the discretion of the Court, but the Privy Council have said that the disciplinary provisions of the Legal Practitioners Act 18 of 1879, are an appropriate guide. When grave charges are involved scrupulous care should be taken not only that justice is done but that justice should seem to be done so that it is not desirable that the proceedings should be held before the same judges as heard the case out of which the charges arise (o). Their Lordships also said that if charges of a criminal nature are preferred it is eminently fitting that the criminal

12. And We do further ordain, that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, shall be empowered to receive, try, and determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land or other immovable property, such land or property shall be situated, or in all other cases if the cause of action shall have arisen, either wholly, or, in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the said High Court, or if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell or carry on business, or personally work for gain within such limits, except that the said High Court shall not have such original jurisdiction in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for, does not exceed one hundred rupees

Scope of the clause—Barring certain suits specified at the end of this clause the High Courts of Calcutta Madras and Bombay are empowered to try the following suits in the exercise of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction namely—

I Suits for land or other immovable property—

- (a) if the land or property is situated wholly within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the said High Courts or
- (b) where the land or property is situated in part only within the said limits if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained (x) See notes below, Suit for land of which a part is within jurisdiction

II Suits other than those for land—

- (a) if the cause of action has arisen wholly within the said limits or
- (b) where the cause of action has arisen in part only within the said limits if the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained or
- (c) if the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit dwells or carries on business or personally works for gain within such limits of a declaration of interest in land (s). A agreement in Calcutta to sell to B land situated outside the original jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court. If A fails to perform his contract and B sues A for specific performance, the suit is one for land, and it will not be entertained by the Court, the land being situated outside its jurisdiction. But if B fails to perform his contract, and A sues B for specific performance, the suit is not one for land, and hence the suit will be in the Calcutta Court (a). Similarly, a suit by a mortgagee for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage of land is a suit for land, and it will not be entertained by the Calcutta Court if the land is situated beyond the original jurisdiction of the Court (b). And it has been laid down by the same High Court that suits for redemption or foreclosure or for sale of mortgage property are all suits for land, and they will not be entertained by that Court if the land is situated beyond its original jurisdiction (c), also that a suit by a lessee for a declaration that a lease was a subsisting lease and for rents and profits is a suit for land, and it will not be entertained if the land is situated beyond its jurisdiction (d). A suit for a share in the sale proceeds of land without jurisdiction is not a suit for land (e). Page, J., in the case last cited said that the term suits for land or other immovable property means suits in which having regard to the issues raised in the pleadings the decree or order will affect directly the proprietary or possessory title to land or other immovable property. The learned Judge observed that this construction conformed to the rule that questions relating to title or ownership of land should be determined not only by the lex situs but also in the forum situs. In short, the Calcutta High Court would appear to hold that suits of the kind mentioned in (a) to (e) of sec. 16 of the Code are all suits for land (f). The same view was taken until recently by the Madras High Court (g). In Ullappa Chettiar v. Goranda Doss (h) a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that a suit by a purchaser of land situate outside Madras for specific performance of a contract to sell made in Madras, against the vendor who resides in Madras, is not a suit for land, and is cognizable by the High Court of Madras. In the view taken by Courts Trotter, C.J., a suit in which the plaintiff asks for a decree which, if passed, would compel the defendant to do or abstain from doing something which the Court orders him to do, would not be a suit for land, but a suit in which a plaintiff asks for a decree which if passed, would bring about proprio vigore an immediate change in the ownership of property would be a suit for land (i). Thus a suit for maintenance in which the plaintiff prays that the amount may be charged on specific land is a suit for land, for if a charge is created by the decree, it can be enforced by a sale of the land (j).

The High Court of Bombay gives a very restricted meaning to the expression suit for land. Sir Charles Sargent in Holkur v. Dattabhas (k) held that the Court had jurisdiction to try a suit for specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage made in Bombay of land situate outside the original jurisdiction. The ratio decidendi was that the expression "suit for land" was intended to exclude from the Court's jurisdiction only such suits relating to land as, if brought in England, the Courts would refuse to entertain on the ground that the land was situate abroad. This case was followed though sometimes with evident reluctance for many years. Farren C.J., in an unreported case (l) passed a foreclosure decree on a mortgage of land outside jurisdiction and this was followed by Strachey, J., in Sorabji v. Ruttonji (m). In Hunsey v. Runchordas (n) a purchaser's suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell land situate beyond the local limits of jurisdiction was entertained although the prayer was that the defendant be ordered "upon making out a marketable title to the said land to execute a conveyance thereof in favour of the plaintiff." In Venkatrao v. Khimji (o) a suit for sale was decreed on a mortgage of land outside jurisdiction and Scott, C.J., said that such a suit was not a suit for land as it was not a suit "to obtain land or to obtain a declaration of title to land or to obtain damages for interference with land." This case was followed with much hesitation by Shah, J., and Jamji v. Alubai (p) which was also a suit for sale by a mortgagee. On the other hand Jenkins, C.J., in Vaghaji v. Camaji (q) correctly sum-the Court had no jurisdiction to make a declaration as to which of two mortgages of land outside jurisdiction has priority. In Yeshwantiben v. Janardhan (s) Fawcett, J., held that a suit by a wife praying that her maintenance be secured by a charge on her husband's immovable property in Bombay was a suit for land. The same learned Judge in Rajah Kodakkal v. Mulshar Timber Co (t) said that if the land is outside jurisdiction a suit to declare a charge on it is not a suit for land but resiled from this opinion in his judgment in Hatimbhai v. Framroz (u).

Now as explained by Jenkins, C.J., in Vaghaji v. Camaji (i) the Courts in England do not entertain suits for land outside jurisdiction unless (1) the defendant is in England and (2) there is some privity between the parties on the ground of contract, trust or fraud. The defendant in Holkar's case did not reside or carry on business in Bombay and this fact appears to have been overlooked in the judgment. The case was adversely criticized on this ground in previous editions of this commentary and that criticism was entirely accepted by a Full Bench of and Hearing Co v. Climax Syndicate (w) a suit against the defendant mortgagee who sale of the mortgaged properties which were also outside jurisdiction. The mortgage had been executed in Bombay and though curiously enough the judgment does not refer to this fact, that was the circumstance which brought the case within Holkar v. Dadabhai. Nevertheless the Court overruling Holkar v. Dadabhai said the suit was not competent. The Court entirely agreed with the Calcutta decisions and quoted with approval the dictum of Jenkins, C.J., in Sudamdih Coal Co v. Empire Coal Co (x) that regard must be had to the substance of the suit in deciding whether it was a suit for land.

But the Bombay High Court has again changed its mind and in Hatimbhai v. [unintelligible] (y) held that a suit to enforce his mortgage by a mortgagee who resides in Bombay is a suit for land if the mortgage is wholly outside the limits of its original civil jurisdiction. The judgment was approved on the equitable jurisdiction wrongly claimed in Holkar's case, but rests on two main grounds (1) that a suit for sale on a mortgage is a suit in personam to recover a debt and (2) that suits for land are suits the primary object of which is to obtain a declaration of title to or possession of land. This view is inconsistent with the definition of "mortgage" in sec 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The same High Court has held (z) following Hatimbhai's case, and dissenting from Prantal v Goculdas (a), that the High Court has jurisdiction in a suit brought by an equitable mortgagee against the mortgagor for lands situate outside Bombay to implead a legal mortgagee residing out of Bombay and alleging a prior legal mortgage in his favour, provided the legal mortgage is executed in Bombay. Following Hatimbhai's case the Bombay High Court has also held that the High Court has no jurisdiction to make a decree declaring that a sale of land outside the original jurisdiction is invalid (b).

Suits for the partition of land and suits for a declaration of title to land are suits for land and will not be entertained if the land is outside jurisdiction (c). A suit for damages for trespass to land is a suit for land (d). Suits for the recovery of title deeds are according to the Calcutta High Court not suits for land (e), but the Bombay High Court has held that they are, if a question of title to land is involved (f). This seems incorrect, for as said in India Spinning and Weaving Co v Climax Syndicate (g), 'it is difficult to see how a suit to recover title deeds can be beyond the jurisdiction of the Court if the defendant is within the jurisdiction'.

The Bombay High Court has held that an administration suit is not a suit for land although there are immovable properties alleged to belong to the estate of the deceased beyond jurisdiction and the High Court therefore can entertain such a suit and determine the question whether they belonged to the deceased at the time of his death. If the suit is otherwise within jurisdiction no leave under cl 12 is necessary merely because the immovable properties or some of them are situated beyond jurisdiction (h). The High Court of Calcutta has held that a suit for administration and as incidental to that suit, for a declaration that certain leases granted by the executors of the estate cannot stand as against the plaintiff (the beneficiary) is not a suit for land (i). In a Privy Council case where a suit was brought by three out of four executors against the fourth executor for his removal from the office of trustee and executor and for accounts of the assets of the deceased and for administration of his estate, it was held that the suit was not one for land and that the High Court of Madras had jurisdiction to entertain the suit though the property left by the deceased was outside jurisdiction as a part of the cause of action had arisen within the jurisdiction and the defendant was dwelling in Madras at the time of the institution of the suit (j). In a Calcutta case it was held that the High Court may entertain a suit by an executor for a declaration an injunction (though not for possession) in respect of the estate of the testator consisting of several immovable properties provided one at least of the properties is situated within its original jurisdiction, and leave of the Court is obtained, it is not necessary that the cause of action should arise within the local limits, or be specifically with reference to that property which is situated within those limits (l)

Every suit which has any reference to land is not a suit for land (h). In Last Mortgage Indl v. Sulurdeen Ahmed, Trevelyan, J., said: "I decline to hold that wherever land has anything to do with a suit it is therefore a 'suit for land' (m). Thus a suit by a trustee against his co-trustees to enforce his right under a deed of trust to act jointly with the defendants as shewait and manager of lands dedicated to an ill in which neither the plaintiff nor the defendants has any beneficial interest is not a suit for land, and may be entertained by the High Court, though the land may be situate outside jurisdiction (n). So a suit for an account and dissolution of partnership is not a suit for land because one asset of the partnership happens to be a tea garden situate in the mufassal (o).

"All other cases"—suits for partition of movable and immovable property the latter being situated wholly outside jurisdiction—The words all other cases in this clause do not include cases of suits for immovable plus movable property. They refer to cases in which immovable property is not involved. Hence if A sues B for partition of movable and immovable property and the immovable property is situated wholly outside jurisdiction the suit must be dismissed as to such property, even if the leave of the Court has been obtained. This is because the immovable property being situated wholly outside jurisdiction, the Court has no power to grant leave to sue as regards such property (p). In such a case the plaint may be amended with the leave of the Court by omitting paragraphs which relate to immovable property, and the suit may be proceeded with so far as it relates to movable property (q).

Suit for land of which part is within jurisdiction—Where there are several immovable properties, then if even one of them is situated within jurisdiction the Court can entertain a suit for a partition of all the properties including those situated outside jurisdiction provided the leave of the Court has been first obtained. Such a case comes within the following words of cl. 12, namely, "the said High Court shall be empowered to determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land such land shall be situated either wholly or in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained in part within the local limits" (r). But in Hatimbhai v. Framroo (s) some of the Judges were of opinion that the condition as to leave of the Court did not apply to suits for land where some part of the land was situate outside jurisdiction. If some of the properties are situated within and some outside jurisdiction but no leave is obtained the Court can proceed only with the suit so far as it relates to the immovable properties situated within jurisdiction (t). Similarly if some of the properties included in a deed of mortgage are within, and some outside the jurisdiction the Court has jurisdiction on leave to sue being obtained, to entertain a suit on the mortgage in respect of all the properties including those situated outside jurisdiction (u), but not if the properties outside jurisdiction are the subject of a separate mortgage (v) The same rules apply where some of the properties are situated in British India and some outside British India (w) See notes above, "Scope of the clause"

Leave of Court.—The leave under this clause is a condition precedent to jurisdiction, so that unless the condition is fulfilled by obtaining the necessary leave to sue, the Court will have no jurisdiction to entertain the suit (x) Such leave affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction hence it must be obtained before the institution of the suit, it cannot be granted after the suit has been instituted The leave granted is confined to the cause or causes of action set forth in the plaint at the time when the leave was granted hence the plaint cannot be amended so as to alter the cause of action (y) But if the cause of action is not altered, there is no objection to an amendment (z) If a suit is brought in a Chartered High Court with leave of the Court, but there is nothing on the face of the plaint to show that any part of the cause of action arose within its jurisdiction, the plaintiff may be allowed to prove by evidence that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, and if it is necessary to amend the plaint by adding a statement that part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction, the amendment may be allowed, for such an amendment does not alter or add to the original cause of action (a) Where a defendant who does not reside within the jurisdiction and against whom the cause of action has arisen in part only within the jurisdiction, is added after the institution of the suit, leave under this clause must be obtained at the time of the application for adding him as a party, though leave was obtained when the suit was originally filed (b) The force of an order granting leave to institute a suit is exhausted when the suit is instituted in pursuance of the order Hence if the suit is withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit upon the same cause of action, and a fresh suit is brought, there is nothing to prevent the Court from granting fresh leave to institute the fresh suit (c)

The leave under this section must be distinctly applied for and obtained It cannot be implied from the fact that the plaintiff was granted leave to sue as a pauper (d), or from the fact that a defendant is added who does not reside within the jurisdiction (e) Nor can it be presumed from the fact that the Court orders a third party notice to be served on a party resident outside its jurisdiction The defendant taking out such notice must apply for leave under clause 12, and the leave must be endorsed on the notice as it is on a plaint (f) The granting of leave under this clause is discretionary (g), but an assignment of a debt is part of the cause of action and in a case where no other part of the cause of action arose within jurisdiction it was held that the Court should not refuse leave merely on suspicion that the assignment was not bona fide (h) and if the application is rejected, he may appeal from the order rejecting the application (r) Similarly if the plaintiff applies for leave, and leave is refused, the plaintiff may appeal from the order (s) The appeal would be one under cl 15 of the Letters Patent

The order granting or refusing leave by one Judge cannot be superseded by another Judge except on appeal from the order (t)

Waiver.—There are two classes of cases to be considered under this head, namely—

- (1) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that part of the cause of action arose outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction and fails to obtain leave and the case comes on for trial,
- (2) where the plaintiff in his plaint alleges that the whole cause of action arose within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction, but it turns out at the trial that part of the cause of action arose within and part outside the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction

In case (1) the defendant may by appearing and pleading waive the objection to the jurisdiction Thus it was held by the High Court of Calcutta (u), following Moore v. Gamgee (v) in a case where the plaintiff alleged in his plaint that part of the cause of action had arisen within the local limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction but no leave was obtained by the plaintiff under clause 12, and the defendant without raising any objection to the jurisdiction filed his written statement and applied subsequently for a commission to examine witnesses that the defendant had waived his objection to the jurisdiction These decisions proceeded on the ground that the absence of leave under this clause did not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court They are not consistent with the observations of Sir Richard Couch in Hadjee Ismail v Hadjee Mahomed (w) where the learned Judge said that an order granting leave under clause 12 was not a mere formal order or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit, but one that has the effect of giving jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have, and the judgment of Telang, J, in Rampurab v Premsookh (x), in which it was said that leave under cl 12 affords the very foundation of the jurisdiction The Rangoon High Court has followed the Calcutta view (y) But the Bombay High Court differs holding that if part of the cause of action arises outside jurisdiction, the obtaining of leave is a condition which the Court is not competent to ignore or the parties to waive (z)

As to case (2) it has been held that where the plaintiff sets up a complete jurisdiction in the Court to try the case, and it turns out at the trial that the Court had not complete jurisdiction the defendant cannot be held bound by the doctrine of estoppel (a)

"When the High Court shall think proper to do so."—In a suit for immovable property instituted in the Dinagepur Court, the defendant applied for its transfer to the Calcutta High Court under this clause, the grounds of the application being (1) that questions of difficulty arose in the suit, (2) that the defendant's witnesses lived in Calcutta, and that it would be impossible for her to go to Dinagepur and take her witnesses there owing to the expenses, (3) that the agreement upon which the suit was brought was executed in Calcutta, and (4) that even the plaintiff resided and carried on business in Calcutta. 15. And We do further ordain that an appeal shall lie to the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from the judgment (not being a judgment passed in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction in respect of a decree or order made in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by a Court subject to the superintendence of the said High Court, and not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction and not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section 107 of the Government of India Act or in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction) of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court, pursuant to section 108 of the Government of India Act, and that notwithstanding anything hereinbefore provided an appeal shall lie to the said High Court from a judgment of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court, pursuant to section 108 of the Government of India Act made [on or after the first day of February 1929] in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction in respect of a decree or order made in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction by a Court subject to the superintendence of the said High Court, where the Judge who passed the judgment declares that the case is a fit one for appeal; but that the right of appeal from other judgments of Judges of the said High Court or of such Division Court shall be to Us, Our Heirs or Successors in Our or Their Privy Council, as hereinafter provided.

Amendment.—The above clause is clause 15 as amended by the Letters Patent of 1928 which came into force on the date of publication in Calcutta on the 11th January 1928, in Bombay on the 27th January 1928 and in Madras on the 13th January 1928. Clause 10 of the Allahabad Letters Patent, clause 13 of the Rangoon Letters Patent, clause 10 of the Lahore Letters Patent, and clause 10 of the Patna Letters Patent, have been similarly amended, and they came into force respectively on the 28th January 1928, 2nd February 1928, 8th February 1928 and 30th January 1928. The previous Letters Patent were as follows:—

And We do further ordain that an appeal shall lie to the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, from the judgment (not being an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction and not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, or in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction) of one Judge of the said High Court or one Judge of any Division Court, pursuant to section 13 of the said recited Act, and that an appeal shall also lie to the said High Court from the judgment (not being a sentence or order as aforesaid) of two or more Judges of the said High Court, or of such

Division Court, whenever such Judges are equally divided in opinion, and do not amount in number to a majority of the whole of the Judges of the said High Court, at the time being, but that the right of appeal from other judgments of the Judges of the said High Court, or of such Division Court, shall be to Us, Our heirs or successors in Our or Their Privy Council, as hereinafter provided

The effect of the amendment made in 1928 is—

- (1) the exclusion of a right of appeal from a judgment passed by a single Judge sitting in second appeal unless the Judge who passed the judgment grants a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal There is no question of grant of certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal in the case of two Judges composing a Division Bench differing in opinion (g),
- (2) the exclusion of a right of appeal when the Judges of a Division Bench are equally divided in opinion This case is provided for by the amendment of clause 36

There is as before an unqualified right of appeal from the judgment of a single Judge on the original side

As to amendment no (1) it was held by the High Court of Calcutta that it has no retrospective effect and that it could not apply to suits filed before the amended Letters Patent came into force (r) The clause was therefore again amended by adding the words in rectangular brackets, namely, "on or after the first day of February, 1929" The result is that there is no right of appeal from the judgment of a single Judge sitting in second appeal in cases where the judgment is pronounced after the 1st February, 1929, whatever may be the date when the suit was filed unless a certificate is granted declaring that the case is a fit one for appeal (s)

Meaning of "judgment" as used in this clause —

1 Calcutta High Court—The leading case on the subject is that of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v The Oriental Gas Co (t), decided by the High Court of Calcutta so far back as 1872 In that case Couch, C J, said "We think 'judgment' in clause 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties by determining some right or liability It may be either final, or preliminary, or interlocutory, the difference between them being that a final judgment determines the whole cause or suit and a preliminary or interlocutory judgment determines only a part of it, leaving other matters to be determined" This definition is now of some antiquity, and is rapidly becoming, if it has not already become, almost classical (u) The point actually decided in The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v The Oriental Gas Co was that no appeal lies under his clause from an order directing the issue of a mandamus to the Justices of the Peace for Calcutta to compel them to refer to arbitration a question of compensation. The above decision was followed by a decision of the same Court in Hadjee Ismail v Hadjee Mahomed (v), where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue to the plaintiff under cl 12 of the Letters Patent Referring to the said order, Couch, C J, said "It is not a mere formal order, or an order merely regulating the procedure in the suit, but one that has the effect of giving a jurisdiction to the Court which it otherwise would not have And it may fairly be said to determine some right between them, viz., the right to sue in a particular Court, and to compel the defendants who are not within its jurisdiction to come in and defend the suit, or if they do not, to make them liable to have a decree passed against them in their absence." In a later case, Garth, C.J., said "I think that word 'judgment' means a judgment or decree which decides the case one way or the other in its entirety, and that it does not mean a decision or order of an interlocutory character, which merely decides some isolated point, not affecting the merits or the result of the entire suit" (c). The right of appeal depends upon whether or not the Judge finally decided the rights of the parties (x), but an order extending the period of limitation which merely puts in peril the finality of a decision is not a judgment under this clause (y).

The definition of "judgment" in the case of Justices of the Peace for Calcutta (z) was adopted by a majority of the same High Court in a later case where it was held that an appeal lies under this clause from an order made by a single Judge of that Court under O 45, r 15, refusing to transmit for execution an Order of His Majesty in Council (a). The decision was affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council (b). Referring to the judgment of the majority, their Lordships said "These learned Judges held (and their Lordships think rightly) that whether the transmission of an order under s. 610 [now O 45, r 15] would or would not be a merely ministerial proceeding, Mr Justice Pontifex [whose order was appealed from] had in fact exercised a judicial discretion, and had come to a decision of great importance, which, if it remained, would entirely conclude any rights of Kalisunderi for an execution in this suit. They held, therefore, that it was a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15." In a later case, Sanderson, C.J., said that the definition of "judgment" given by Couch, C.J., had never been regarded as absolutely exhaustive, and that in every case where the Court was called upon to decide whether the decision under appeal was or was not "a judgment" regard must be had to the nature of the order (c).

able number of years in this Court those two decisions (e) have to my knowledge been regarded as the leading decisions to be followed on the question whether an order in any particular case is a "judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent." The leading Bombay case is Sonbai v Ahmedbhai decided in the year 1872 (f).

3 Madras High Court—Turning now to the Madras decisions the earlier leading case on the subject was De Sou a v Coles (g) decided in the year 1863. The modern leading case is that of Tuljaram v Alagappa (h) decided by a Full Bench of that Court in 1910. In the former case, Bittlestone, J., said "The word 'judgment' cannot be limited to the final judgment in the suit but must be held to have the more general meaning of any decision or determination affecting the rights or the interest of any suitor or applicant. When the language giving the appeal is so general in its terms as that contained in the 15th clause of the Charter, it is, we think, impossible to prescribe any limits to the right of appeal founded upon the nature of the order or decree appealed from. This definition has now been rejected as too wide, and instead thereof, we have another definition of the term 'judgment' laid down in Tuljaram's case. In that case White, C J, said as follows—

'The test seems to me to be not what is the form of the adjudication, but what is its effect in the suit or proceeding in which it is made. If its effect, whatever its form may be, and whatever be the nature of the application on which it is made, is to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned, or if its effect, if it is not complied with, is to put an end to the suit or proceedings, I think the adjudication is a 'judgment' within the meaning of the clause. An adjudication on an application which is nothing more than a step towards obtaining a final adjudication in the suit is not, in my opinion, a 'judgment' within the meaning of the Letters Patent, I think, too, an order on an independent proceeding which is ancillary to the suit (not instituted as a step towards judgment, but with a view to rendering the judgment effective if obtained),—e.g., an order on an application for an interim injunction, or for the appointment of a receiver is a 'judgment' within the meaning of the clause."

It will be seen that the definition of 'judgment' as stated by White, C J, is wider than that in Justice of the Peace for Calcutta, and narrower than the one in De Souza v Coles. Referring to the former case, White, C J, said that he was not prepared to say as was said in that case that 'judgment' within the meaning of this clause must be a decision which affects the merit by determining some right or liability. The learned Chief Justice added (at p 7) "I think the decision may be a judgment for the purposes of the clause, though it does not affect the merits of the suit or proceedings and does not determine any question of right raised in the suit or proceeding." The result is that some orders which have been held not to be appealable by the Calcutta High Court have been held to be appealable by the Madras High Court, e.g., an order under cl 13 of the Letters Patent transferring a suit from a subordinate Court to the High Court (i). Such an order of transfer is appealable in Madras as it puts an end to the suit as it stood in the Court from which it was transferred, while an order refusing a transfer is not appealable as the proceedings are allowed to go on (j). Referring to the definition of 'judgment' in De Souza v Coles, the learned Chief Justice said that it was too wide.

4 Allahabad High Court—L P, cl (10)—In Allahabad it has been generally held that no order which is appealable under sec 104 and O 43, r 1, is appealable under the present clause (k). And, further, no appellate order from which a second appeal is excluded under section 104 can be appealed from under this clause (l). Conversely an order from which an appeal is allowed under sec 104 and O 43, r 1, to the High Court from a subordinate Court is an order from which an appeal will lie under this clause (m). The only definition hitherto given by that Court of the word "judgment" is that it must be "such a judgment on the part of all the learned and honourable Judges who may constitute a Bench as disposes of the suit or the appeal before it" (n). See notes to sec 104, "Letters Patent appeal."

5 Lahore High Court—L P, cl (10)—The High Court of Lahore has adopted the definition of "judgment" as given by White, C.J., in Tuljaram's case referred to above under the head "Madras High Court" (o) In a recent case it was held that the expression "judgment" in this clause is not synonymous with the word "decree" as defined in sec 2 of the Code (p)

6 Rangoon High Court—L P, cl (13)—The Rangoon High Court has held that the word "judgment" in cl 13 of the Letters Patent is intended to cover an order as well as a decree, but the effect of the judgment must be such as to put an end to the suit or proceeding so far as the Court before which the suit or proceeding is pending is concerned, or if its effect, if it is not complied with, is to put an end to the suit or proceedings. If it has this effect the adjudication is a judgment, otherwise not. The decision of an issue which has the effect of allowing a suit to proceed does not affect the merits or result of the whole suit in that it does not decide the case one way or another, and is, therefore, not a "judgment" (q) The order of a judge on a preliminary issue allowing the suit to proceed merely paves the way for the determination of the question between the parties is not a judgment (r)

Interlocutory order.—All the High Courts are now agreed that no appeal lies under this clause from an order merely regulating procedure in a suit or from an order on an application which is nothing more than a step towards obtaining a final judgment in the suit, though a finding on an issue may amount to a judgment if it implies the final determination of the suit (s) It has thus been held that no appeal lies from the following orders, namely, an order directing a party to produce and give inspection of documents (t) an order directing the issue of a commission for the examination of witnesses (u), an order refusing to try certain issues as preliminary issues (v), an order refusing to frame an issue asked for by one of the parties (w) an order amending the title of a plaint so as to convert a summary suit into a short cause (x), an order under cl 15 of the Letters Patent transferring a suit from the Presidency Small Cause Court to the High Court (y) [though the contrary has been held on the last mentioned point by the Madras High Court in Chandrasekhar v. Subramanyam (1912) 35 Mad 1] (z) an order directing the trial of issues between the defendant and a third party (c) an order transposing a defendant as plaintiff (d) or adding a party (e) an order restoring a suit dismissed for default (f), an order settling the terms of a proclamation for

Whether wrong exercise of discretion may be a ground of appeal.—It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that the fact of a matter being within the discretion of the original Judge is a ground for refusing to entertain the appeal (p) On the other hand it has been held by the High Court of Madras that the fact that the making of an order was a matter of discretion is not a ground for refusing to entertain an appeal though it may be a good reason for declining to interfere with that discretion in appeal (q)

Orders in proceedings other than suits and appeals.—A "judgment" within the meaning of this clause need not be an adjudication in a suit or appeal as technically understood. An adjudication which terminates what may be called an original petition like an application for the custody of a minor may be a "judgment" so as to be appealable under this clause. The following is a list of such adjudications—

- 1 Habeas corpus—An appeal lies under this clause from an order deciding the claim of relatives to the custody of a minor on a writ of habeas corpus (r)
- 2 Leave to sue under cl 12 of the charter—An appeal lies from an order refusing to set aside an order granting leave to sue under cl 12 of the Letters Patent and also from an order refusing to grant leave to sue. See notes to cl 12 above, "Appeal"
- 3 Administrator General's Act 3 of 1913—An appeal lies from an order allowing to the Administrator General commission at a certain rate (s)
- 4 Probate and Administration Act, 1881, s 90 [now Indian Succession Act 39 of 1925, s 307]—An appeal lies from an order purporting to be made under s 90 of the Probate and Administration Act at the instance of a beneficiary in a case in which there is no restriction imposed by the will on the power of the executor to sell immovable property forming part of the estate of the deceased. Such an order is really one made without jurisdiction (t). An appeal also lies from an order granting probate (u)
- 5 Limitation Act, s 5—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that no appeal lies from an order refusing to excuse the delay in filing an appeal or application (v). The High Court of Bombay has held that an appeal does lie from such an order (w).
- 6 Mandamus—It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta in the leading case of The Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v The Oriental Gas Co (x), that no appeal lies from an order which directs a mandamus to issue to a public body this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction (o). An interlocutory order on a civil revision petition is made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction and is not appealable (p). See notes to s. 115, 'Appeal'.

Orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence.—The words 'not being a sentence or order passed or made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under the provisions of section one hundred and seven of the Government of India Act, 1915,' were added into this clause by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The addition of these words makes it clear that no appeal lies under this clause from orders made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915.

Declares that the case is a fit one for appeal.—The requisition of a certificate of fitness for appeal only applies in the case of a judgment of a single Judge in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction (q) and it applies even though the Judge is a temporary Judge who has ceased to officiate (r). A Bombay Judge has said that the certificate should be given only in cases of great public or private importance on the same principles as apply in appeals to the Privy Council under s. 109 (s), but the Madras High Court considers that this is too strict a test and that it is neither possible nor desirable to lay down rules applicable to all cases (t). The Bombay High Court has held that this provision is retrospective (u). On the other hand the Allahabad High Court considers that no certificate is necessary if the judgment appealed from was delivered before publication of the amending Letters Patent (v). The Calcutta High Court in a Full Bench has held that it only applies to suits filed on or after the date of publication of the amendment (w) and the Madras High Court has taken the same view (x). No appeal lies from an order refusing to certify fitness for appeal (y).

Points on which appeal may be heard.—It has been held by the High Courts of Allahabad (z), Patna (a), and Lahore (b) that an appellant is not entitled in an appeal under this clause to be heard on points which have not been raised before the Judge from whose judgment the appeal is preferred (c).

The appeal given to the Full Court under this clause is not confined to the points on which the Judges of the Division Court differ, the whole appeal is open before the Court for decision (d).

Cls. 15-17 Land acquisition appeal.—The decision of the High Court in a land acquisition appeal is not a 'judgment' within the meaning of this clause so as to enable a party to file a further appeal to the High Court under this clause (e) See notes to cl 39. The decision must amount to a judgment decree, or order.

Inherent jurisdiction—The Bombay High Court has held that apart from cl 15 it has inherent jurisdiction to hear an appeal in a matter affecting a ward of the Court (f) See clause 17 infra.

Sentence or order in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction.—An order granting sanction under s 193 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code is one made in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction and is not a "judgment" within the meaning of this clause (g) See the undermentioned case (h)

Review.—It is competent to the High Court to review judgments in appeals preferred under cl 15 above (i)

And We do further ordain that, with respect to the law or equity and the rule of good conscience to be applied by the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, to each case coming before it in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, such law or equity and rule of good conscience shall be the law or equity and rule of good conscience which the Court in which the proceedings in such case were originally instituted ought to have applied to such case.

Now subject to reference to or revision by the said High Court.—The High Court cannot under this clause revise an order of a Secretary to Government issuing a warrant under the Goondas Act (Bengal Act 1 of 1923) as such Secretary was not an officer possessing criminal jurisdiction in 1865 when the Letters Patent were issued (c).

The final judgment decree or order must be one made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction—Cl 10 of the Charter empowers the High Court to deal with professional misconduct by suspension or removal. An order made under that clause is not in the exercise either of the original or appellate jurisdiction of the High Court, and is not therefore appealable to His Majesty in Council (a). A decree or order passed by a High Court in its appellate jurisdiction is not necessarily a decree or order passed on appeal. When a decree of the High Court was varied by the Privy Council and directions given for an account to be taken by the High Court, a decree passed by the High Court in pursuance of such directions is not a decree passed on appeal from which an appeal lies (a). An order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s 15 of the High Courts Act (b) [now s 107 of the Government of India Act 1915] or in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction under section 115 of the Code (c), is appealable to the Privy Council. It may here be stated that cl 15 of the Letters Patent was amended by the Amended Letters Patent of 11th March 1910 by adding into the clause certain words which make it clear that no appeal lies to the High Court under that clause from an order made in the exercise of revisional jurisdiction or from an order made in the exercise of the power of superintendence under s 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915. But if the order in revision is made by a single Judge section 111 of the Code bars an appeal to the Privy Council (d).

'Made on appeal. — An order made by the High Court rejecting an application to amend a decree passed by that Court on appeal is not an order "made on appeal" within the meaning of this clause (e), nor is an order made by the High Court rejecting an application to review a judgment passed on appeal (f). Such an order is not an order made on appeal against the judgment sought to be reviewed, it is an order in the appeal in which the judgment sought to be reviewed was given (g).

40. And We further ordain that it shall be lawful for the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, at its discretion, on the motion, or if the said High Court be not sitting, then for any Judge of the said High Court, upon the petition of any party who considers himself aggrieved by any preliminary or interlocutory judgment, decree, order, or sentence of the High Court, in any such proceeding as aforesaid, not being of criminal jurisdiction, to grant permission to such party to appeal against the same to Us, Our heirs and successors in Our or Their Privy Council, subject to the same rules, regulations, and limitations as are herein expressed respecting appeals from final judgments, decrees, orders and sentences. Cls. 40-42

Appeal from interlocutory judgment.—No appeal lies to the Privy Council from an interlocutory judgment or order of a Judge of a High Court until such judgment or order has been subjected to an appeal to the High Court under cl. 15, except in those cases in which by reason of the number of Judges who have made such order an appeal under cl. 15 is given directly to the Privy Council (h) The High Court will not, it seems, in the exercise of its discretion under this clause grant leave to appeal to the Privy Council upon a mere question of practice, such as an order for inspection of documents (i) or an order refusing the appointment of a receiver in a suit (j) But an order made by the High Court of Bombay under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent transferring to itself a suit from the Court of the Resident at Aden raises a question of jurisdiction as distinguished from practice, and leave may be granted from such an order to appeal to the Privy Council (k) But for this clause no appeal would lie from an interlocutory judgment or order (l)

Calls for Records, &c, by the Government.

43. And it is Our further will and pleasure that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall comply with such requisitions as may be made by the Government for records, returns, and statements, in such form and manner as such Government may deem proper

High Court to comply with requisitions from Government for records &c

44. And We do further ordain and declare that all the provisions of these Our Letters Patent are subject to the legislative powers of the Governor General in Legislative Council and also of the Governor General in Council under section seventy one of the Government of India Act 1915 and also of the Governor General in cases of emergency under section seventy two of that Act, and may be in all respects amended and altered thereby

Powers of the Indian Legislature preserved

Alterations in this clause—This clause was substituted for the original clause 44 by the Amending Letters Patent of 11th March 1919. The material alteration consists in substituting the words powers of the Governor General in Legislative Council and also of the Governor General in Council for the words powers of the Governor General in Council

Let. Pat. [Cal., Bom., and Mad.]

Cls. 44, 45

Legislative powers of the Governor General in Council—The powers of the Governor General in Council to make laws are derived from the Indian Councils Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict., c. 67). By sec. 22 of that Act the Governor General in Council is given power to make laws in the manner provided, including power to repeal or amend existing laws, and including the making of laws for all Courts of justice and for all persons whatever, British or Native, foreigners or others. But a proviso to that section enacts that there is to be no powers to repeal or in any way affect any Act passed in the same session of Parliament with the Indian Councils Act. The High Courts Act of 1861 (24 and 25 Vict., c. 104) is such an Act, and the Governor General in Council therefore has no power to alter its provisions, unless such power is expressly given by the Act. Thus the Governor General in Council has no power to alter the provisions of that Act as to the qualifications of the judges of the High Courts (sec. 3) or the provisions of sec. 15 thereof giving the High Courts superintendence over the Courts which are subject to its appellate jurisdiction (n). Nor can the Governor General in Council by emergency legislation under s. 72 of the Government of India Act deprive the High Court of its power of superintendence (o). But the Governor General in Council has power to remove any place or territory from the jurisdiction of a High Court, the reason being that such power is distinctly recognized by sec. 9 of the said Act, and it is also consistent with the Letters Patent (cl. 44) as required by the said sec. 9 (p).

Further, there is a proviso to sec. 22 of the Indian Councils Act, which enacts that there is to be no power to repeal or in any way affect any provision of the Government of India Act of 1858. Sec. 65 of the latter Act provides that all persons shall have and take the same suits, remedies and proceedings against the Secretary of State for India in Council as they could have done against the East India Company. Before the Government of India Act, 1858 a British subject could sue the East India Company to determine his claim to any right over land. The Governor General in Council has therefore no power under the Indian Councils Act to pass an Act taking away the right of a British subject to sue the Secretary of State in a Civil Court to determine his claim to any right over land (q). See now the Government of India Act, 1915, s. 106 (2).

An order made in revision by a single Judge is final since the amendment of cl. 15 and would therefore be appealable to Privy Council under cl. 39, but as Letters Patent are subject to Imperial Legislation that appeal is taken away by Section 111 of the Code (r).

45. And it is Our further will and pleasure that these Letters Patent shall be published by the Governor-General in Council, and shall come into operation from and after the date of such publication, and that from and after the date on which effect shall have been given to them, so much of the aforesaid Letters Patent, granted by

The costs of the proceedings under rules 66, 106 and 108 shall be paid in the first instance by the decree holder, but they shall be charged as part of the costs of the execution, unless the Court, for reasons to be specified in writing, shall consider that they shall wholly or in part be omitted therefrom.

113. Whenever any Civil Court has sold in execution of a decree or other order, any house or other building situated within the limits of a Military Cantonment or station, it shall, as soon as the sale has been confirmed, forward to the Commanding Officer of such cantonment or station for his information and for record in the Brigade or other proper office, a written notice that such sale has taken place, and such notice shall contain full particulars of the property sold and of the name and address of the purchaser.

114. Whenever guns or other arms in respect of which licenses have to be taken by purchasers under the Indian Arms Act (Act No VI of 1878) are sold by public auction in execution of decrees by order of a Civil Court, the Court directing the sale shall give due notice to the Magistrate of the district of the names and addresses of the purchasers and of the time and place of the intended delivery to the purchasers of such arms, so that proper steps may be taken by the police to enforce the requirements of the Indian Arms Act.

115. When an application is made for the attachment of live stock or other movable property, the decree holder shall pay into Court in cash such sum as will cover the costs of the maintenance and custody of the property for fifteen days. If within three clear days before the expiry of any such period of fifteen days the amount of such costs or such further period as the Court may direct be not paid into Court, the Court on receiving a report thereof from the proper officer, may issue an order for the withdrawal of the attachment and direct by whom the costs of the attachment are to be paid.

116. Live stock which has been attached in execution of a decree shall ordinarily be left at the place where the attachment is made either in custody of the judgment debtor on his furnishing security, or in that of some landholder or other respectable person willing to undertake the responsibility of its custody and to produce it when required by the Court.

117. If the custody of live stock cannot be provided for in the manner described in the last preceding rule, the animals attached shall be removed to the nearest pound established under the Cattle Trespass Act 1871, and committed to the custody of the pound keeper, who shall enter in a register—

- (a) the number and description of the animals,
- (b) the day and hour on and at which they were committed to his custody,
- (c) the name of the attaching officer or his subordinate by whom they were committed to his custody, and shall give such attaching officer or subordinate a copy of the entry.

Rules—All.

App. V.

118. For every animal committed to the custody of the pound keeper as aforesaid a charge shall be levied as rent for the use of the pound for each fifteen or part of fifteen days during which such custody continues, according to the scale prescribed under section 12 of Act No 1 of 1871

And the sums so levied shall be sent to the Treasury for credit to the Municipal or District Board, as the case may be, under whose jurisdiction the pound is. All such sums shall be applied in the same manner as fines levied under section 12 of the said Cattle Trespass Act

119. The pound keeper shall take charge of, feed and water, animals attached and committed as aforesaid until they are withdrawn from his custody as hereinafter provided and he shall be entitled to be paid for their maintenance at such rates as may be, from time to time, prescribed under proper authority. Such rates shall, for animals specified in the section mentioned in the last preceding rule, not exceed the rates for the time being fixed under section 5 of the same Act. In any case, for special reasons to be recorded in writing, the Court may require payment to be made for maintenance at higher rates than those prescribed

120. The charges herein authorized for the maintenance of live stock shall be paid to the pound keeper by the attaching officer for the first fifteen days at the time the animals are committed to his custody, and thereafter for such further period as the Court may direct, at the commencement of such period. Payments for such maintenance so made in excess of the sum due for the number of days during which the animals may be in the custody of the pound keeper shall be refunded by him to the attaching officer

121. Animals attached and committed as aforesaid shall not be released from custody by the pound keeper except on the written order of the Court, or of the attaching officer, or of the officer appointed to conduct the sale, the person receiving the animals, on their being so released shall sign a receipt for them in the register mentioned in rule 118

122. For the safe custody of movable property other than live stock while under attachment, the attaching officer shall, subject to approval by the Court, make such arrangements as may be most convenient and economical

123. With the permission of the Court the attaching officer may place one or more persons in special charge of such property

124. The fee for the services of each such person shall be payable in the manner prescribed in rule 116. It shall not be less than two annas and shall ordinarily not be more than three and a half annas per diem. The Court may at its discretion allow a higher fee, but if it do so, it shall state in writing its reasons for allowing an exceptional rate

125. When the services of such person are no longer required the attaching officer shall give him a certificate on a counterfoil form of the number of days he has served and of the amount due to him, and on the presentation of such certificate to the Court which ordered the attachment, the amount shall be paid to him in the presence of the presiding Judge

Provided that, where the amount does not exceed Rs 5 it may be paid to the Sahna by money order on requisition by the Amin, and the presentation of the certificate may be dispensed with

126. When in consequence of an order of attachment being withdrawn or for some other reasons, the person has not been employed or has remained in charge of the property for a shorter time than that for which payment has been made in respect of his services, the fee paid shall be refunded in whole or in part, as the case may be.

127. Fees paid into Court under the foregoing rules shall be entered in the Register of petty Receipts and Repayments.

128. When any sum levied under rule 119 is remitted to the treasury, it shall be accompanied by an order in triplicate (in the form given as form 9 of the Municipal Account Code), of which one part will be forwarded by the Treasury officials to the District or Municipal Board, as the case may be. A note that the same has been paid into the Treasury as rent for the use of the pound, will be recorded on the extract from the pass book.

129. The cost of repairing attached property for sale, or of conveying it to the place where it is to be kept or sold, shall be payable by the decree holder to the attaching officer. In the event of the decree holder failing to provide the necessary funds, the attaching officer shall report his default to the Court, and the Court may thereupon issue an order for the withdrawal of the attachment and direct by whom the costs of the attachment are to be paid.

130. Nothing in these rules shall be deemed to prevent the Court from issuing and serving on the judgment debtor simultaneously the notices required by Order XXI, rules 22, 66 and 107.

Add the following rules —

“ Garnishee order ”

131. The Court may, in the case of any debt due to the judgment debtor (other than a debt secured by a mortgage or a charge or a negotiable instrument or a debt recoverable only in a revenue court) or any movable property not in the possession of the judgment debtor issue a notice to any person (hereinafter called the garnishee) liable to pay such debt, or to deliver or account for such movable property calling upon him to appear before the Court and show cause why he should not pay or deliver into Court the debt due from or the property deliverable by him to such judgment debtor, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree and the cost of execution.

132. If the garnishee does not forthwith or within such time as the Court may allow pay or deliver into Court the amount due from or the property deliverable by him to the judgment debtor, or so much as may be sufficient to satisfy the decree and the cost of execution, and does not dispute his liability to pay such debt or deliver such movable property, or if he does not appear in answer to the notice, then the Court may order the garnishee to comply with the terms of such notice, and on such order execution may issue as though such order were a decree against him.

133. If the garnishee disputes his liability the Court, instead of making such order, may order that any issue or question necessary for determining his liability be tried as though it were an issue in a suit, and upon the determination of such issue shall pass such order upon the notice as shall be just.

134. Whenever in any proceedings under these rules it is alleged, or appears to the Court to be probable that the debt or property attached or sought to be attached belongs to some third person or that any third person has a lien or charge upon, or an interest in it, the Court may order such third person to appear and state the nature of his claim, if any, upon such debt or property and prove the same, if necessary.

135. After hearing such third person, and any other person who may subsequently be ordered to appear, or in the case of such third or other person not appearing when ordered, the Court may pass such order as is hereinbefore provided or make such other order as it shall think fit, upon such terms in all cases with respect to the lien, charge or interest, if any, of such third or other person as to such Court shall seem just and reasonable.

Rules—All.

App. V.

136. Payment or delivery made by the garnishee whether in execution of an order under these rules or otherwise shall be a valid discharge to him as against the judgment debtor, or any other person ordered to appear as aforesaid, for the amount paid delivered or realized although such order or the judgment may be set aside or reversed.

137. Debts owing from a firm carrying on business within the jurisdiction of the Court may be attached under these rules, although one or more members of such firm may be resident out of the jurisdiction. Provided that any person having the control or management of the partnership business or any member of the firm within the jurisdiction is served with the garnishee order. An appearance by any member pursuant to an order shall be a sufficient appearance by the firm.

138. The cost of any application under these rules and of any proceedings arising therefrom or incidental thereto or any order made thereon, shall be in the discretion of the Court.

139. (1) Where the liability of any garnishee has been tried and determined under these rules the order shall have the same force and be subject to the same conditions as to appeal or otherwise as if it were a decree.

(2) Orders not covered by clause (1) shall be appealable as orders made in execution.

Illustration—An application for a garnishee order is dismissed either on the ground that the debt is secured by a charge or that there is no prima facie evidence of debt due. This order is appealable as an order in execution.

Add the following rule 140—

140. All the rules in this Code relating to service upon either plaintiffs or defendants at the address filed or subsequently altered under Order VII or Order VIII shall apply to all proceedings taken under Order XXI or section 47.

Provided further that no such sale be set aside on any ground which the applicant could have put forward before the sale was conducted.—

82. APPENDIX VIII.

Rules made by the High Court of Patna under s. 122.

Order III.

4. Notwithstanding anything contained in Order III, rule 4 (3) of the First Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, no advocate shall be entitled to make or do any appearance, application or act for any person unless he presents an appointment in writing, duly signed by such person or his recognised agent or by some other agent duly authorised by power of attorney to act in this behalf, or unless he is instructed by an attorney or pleader duly authorised to act on behalf of such person

Order V.

Add the following to rule 10, Order V —

(1) Provided that in any case the Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of the plaintiff send the summons to the defendant by post in addition to the mode of service laid down in this rule. An acknowledgment purporting to be signed by the defendant or an endorsement by postal servant that the defendant refused to take delivery may be deemed by the Court issuing the summons to be prima facie proof of service

Order VII.

Add the following Rules to Order VII —

19. Every plaint or original petition shall be accompanied by a statement giving an address at which service of notice, summons or other process may be made on the plaintiffs or petitioner, and every plaintiff or petitioner subsequently added shall, immediately on being so added, file a similar statement

20. An Address for service filed under the preceding rule shall state the following particulars —

- 1 the name of the street and number of the house (if in a town),
- 2 the name of the town or village,
- 3 the post office,
- 4 the district, and
- 5 the munsiff (if in Bihar and Orissa) or the district Court (if outside Bihar and Orissa)

21. Where a plaintiff or petitioner fails to file an address for service, he shall be liable to have his suit dismissed or his petition rejected by the Court suo motu, or any party may apply for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order as it thinks just

22. A party who desires to change the address for service given by him as aforesaid shall file a verified petition, and the Court may direct the amendment of the record accordingly. Notice of such petition shall be given to such other parties to the suit as the Court may deem it necessary to inform, and may be either served upon the pleaders for such parties or be sent to them by registered post, as the Court thinks fit

Order VIII.

(1) To Order VIII, rule 6 (1), should be added the words

“and the provisions of Order VII, rules 14 to 18, shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to a defendant claiming set off as if he were a plaintiff”

Rules—Patna.

App. VIII. Add the following Rules to Order XIII —

11. Every party, whether original, added or substituted who appears in any suit or other proceedings shall at the time of entering appearance to the summons, notice or other process served on him, file in Court a statement stating his address for service and if he fails to do so he shall be liable to have his defence, if any, struck out and to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended. In this respect the Court may act suo motu or on the application of any party for an order to such effect and the Court may make such order as it thinks just.

12. Rules 20 and 22 of Order VII shall apply, so far as may be to addresses for service filed under the preceding rule

Order XII.

Substitute the following for rule 6 in Order XII —

6. Where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings or otherwise, the Court may, at any stage of a suit, on the application of any party, or, of its own motion, without waiting for the determination of any other question between the parties, make such order or give such judgment, as it may think just

Order XIII.

1. In Order XIII, Rule 1, after the words, "at the first hearing of the suit," should be added the words—

"or, where issues are framed, on the day when issues are framed, or within such further time as the Court may permit"

Add the following as sub rule (1A) in rule 9, Order XIII —

9. (1A) Where a document is produced by a person who is not a party in the proceeding, the Court may require the party on whose behalf the document is produced, to substitute a certified copy for the original as hereinbefore provided

Order XVI.

2. (1)—Add the following proviso to O 16, r 2 (1) —

Provided that the Secretary of State shall not be required to pay any expenses into Court under this rule when he is the party applying for the summons, and the person to be summoned is an officer serving under Government, who is summoned to give evidence of facts which have come to his knowledge, or of matters with which he has had to deal in his public capacity

(3)—Add the following proviso to rule 3 —

Provided that when the person summoned is an officer of Government who has been summoned to give evidence in a case to which Government is a party, of facts, which have come to his knowledge, or of matters with which he has had to deal in his public capacity, then

App. VIII.

8. Add the following to Rule 8, Order XVI —

Provided that a summons under this Order may by leave of the Court be served by the party or his agent, applying for the same, by personal service. If such service is not effected and the Court is satisfied that reasonable diligence has been used by the party or his agent to effect such service, then the summons shall be served by the Court in the usual manner.

Order XXI.

43. Substitute the following for rule 43 of Order XXI —

43. Where the property to be attached is movable property, other than agricultural produce, in the possession of the judgment debtor, the attachment shall be made by actual seizure, and the attaching officer shall be responsible for the due custody thereof.

Provided that, when the property seized is subject to speedy and natural decay, or when the expense of keeping it in custody is likely to exceed its value, the attaching officer may sell it at once.

43A. (1) The attaching officer shall, in suitable cases, keep the attached property in the village or locality either —

- (a) in his own custody in any suitable place provided by the judgment debtor, or in his absence by any adult member of his family who is present, on his own premises or elsewhere,
- (b) in the case of livestock, and provided the decree holder furnishes the necessary funds, in the local pound, if a pound has been established in or near the village, in which case the pound keeper will be responsible for the property to the attaching officer, and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description, or such less rate as may be agreed upon;
- (c) in the custody of a respectable surety, provided the decree-holder furnishes the cost of maintenance and other costs, if any.

(2) If in the opinion of the attaching officer the attached property cannot be kept in the village or locality, through lack of a suitable place, or satisfactory surety, or through failure of the decree holder to provide necessary funds, or for any other reason, the attaching officer shall remove the property to the Court at the decree holder's expense. In the event of the decree holder failing to provide the necessary funds, the attachment shall be withdrawn.

(3) Whenever attached property is kept in the village or locality as aforesaid, the officer shall forthwith report the fact to the Court, and shall with his report forward an accurate list of property seized, such that the Court may thereon at once issue the proclamation of sale prescribed by rule 66.

(4) If the debtor shall give his consent in writing to the sale of the property without awaiting the expiry of the term prescribed in rule 68, the officer shall receive the same and forward it without delay to the Court for its orders.

(5) When property is removed to the Court it shall be kept by the Nazir on his own sole responsibility in such place as may be approved by the Court. If the property cannot, from its nature or bulk, be conveniently kept on the Court premises, or in the personal custody of the Nazir, he may, subject to approval by the Court, make such

Rules—Patna.

App. VIII. arrangements for its safe custody under his own supervision as may be most convenient and economical, and the Court may fix the remuneration to be allowed to the persons, not being officers, of the Court, in whose custody the property is kept.

(6) When property remains in the village or locality where it is attached and any person other than the judgment-debtor shall claim the same, or any part of it, the attaching officer shall nevertheless, unless the decree holder desires to withdraw the attachment of the property so claimed, maintain the attachment, and shall direct the claimant to prefer his claim to the Court.

(7) (a) If the decree holder shall withdraw an attachment or it shall be withdrawn under sub-rule (2) or sub-rule (8), the attaching officer shall inform the debtor, or, in his absence, any adult member of his family, that the property is at his disposal.

(b) In the absence of any person to take charge of it, or in case the officer shall have had notice of claim by a person other than the judgment debtor, the officer shall if the property has been moved from the premises in which it was seized, replace it where it was found at the time of seizure.

(8) Whenever livestock is kept in the village or locality where it has been attached, the judgment debtor shall be at liberty to undertake the due feeding and tending of it under the supervision of the attaching officer, but the latter shall, if required by the decree holder, and on his paying for the same at the rate to be fixed by the District Judge, and subject to the orders of the Court under whose orders the attachment is made, engage the services of as many persons as may be necessary, for the safe custody of it.

(9) In the event of the judgment debtor failing to feed the attached livestock in accordance with sub-rule (8), the officer shall call upon the decree holder to pay forthwith for feeding the same. In the event of his failure to do so, the officer shall proceed as provided in sub-rule (2), and shall report the matter to the Court without delay.

(10) When attached livestock is brought to Court, the Nazir shall be responsible for the safe custody and proper feeding of it so long as the attachment continues.

(11) If a pound has been established in or near the place where the Court is held the Nazir shall be at liberty to place in it such attached livestock as can be properly there kept, in which case the pound keeper will be responsible for the property to the Nazir and shall receive the same rates for accommodation and maintenance thereof as are paid in respect of impounded cattle of the same description, or such less rate as may be agreed upon.

(12) If there be no pound available, or if, in the opinion of the Court it be inconvenient to lodge the attached livestock in the pound, the Nazir may keep it in his own premises, or he may entrust it to any person selected by himself and approved by the Court. The Nazir will in all cases remain responsible for the custody of the property.

When the property is kept in the custody of persons and not in the custody of the Nazir, the rates prescribed by Courts subordinate to him. Where there are two or more Courts in the same place, the rates shall be the same for each Court.

Add the following rule to Order XXI—

In the event of a plot being sub divided, the area of each sub plot shall be given in the schedule, and also measurements showing how the plot is to be divided. Such report or reports with the schedule and the map, if any, shall be annexed to the commission and transmitted to the Court, and the Court, after hearing any objections which the parties may make to the report or reports, shall confirm, vary or set aside the same.

(3) Where the Court confirms or varies the report or reports it shall pass a decree in accordance with the same as confirmed or varied and, when drawing up the final decree shall incorporate in the decree the schedule, and the map, if any, mentioned in sub-rule (2) above, as confirmed or varied by the Court. The whole report or reports of the Commissioner or Commissioners shall not ordinarily be entered in the decree.
